TECHNOLOGY BILL SIGNED BY GOVERNOR; INSTITUTE TO GET MILLION FROM STATE

This Grant Will Be the Last, However, That the Institution Will Ask From Commonwealth; Permanent Site in Boston to Meet Growing Needs Will Soon Be Announced; Three Locations Under Consideration

THE $1,000,000 to be paid to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from the Treasury of the Commonwealth, at the rate of $100,000 a year, will be the last money Tech will ever receive or ever ask for from the public funds.

Governor Foss signed the Technology grant yesterday afternoon. Early in the year he had been very much against it, believing that such support should be reserved for the lower institutions of learning.

There were indications in the statement given out at the Governor's office when he had signed the bill that he had been won over, in no small part, by the pledge that "Tech" will never come again to the State Treasury.

That there was no demonstration of great joy by the undergraduate body in Boylston street last night was due alone to the death of Mrs. William Barton Rogers, wife of the founder of the Institute. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Church, corner of Berkeley and Newbury streets. Sections of the church will be reserved for the Fellows, Faculty, Corporation and instructing staff, with their wives. The undergraduates will attend in a body.

"WILL NOT LEAVE BOSTON," SAYS MACLAURIN.

President Richard C. MacLaurin let it be known last night that Technology is in the market to buy a site big enough for the natural growth of the Institute in the next fifty or one hundred years. Three sites are said to be under consideration. "We shall not leave Boston," Mr. MacLaurin said.

Plans for a new Tech were revived with the signing of the bill. None of the $1,000,000 can be expended for land or buildings.

Governor Foss in his statement quoted from letters sent by friends of the Institute. Among the writers were President MacLaurin, President Lowell of Harvard, a member of the Technology Corporation, Everett Morse, William H. Lincoln, Francis R. Hart and Frederick P. Fish.

"In reply to your inquiries with reference to the proposed grant to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," President MacLaurin wrote, "I have to say that in my judgment such a grant ought not to be continued indefinitely. I believe that at the end of ten years the Institute should be entirely free from the necessity of looking to the State for such support."

President MacLaurin would not indicate his preference for a new site. Until last night the possible sites were understood to have numbered three, Forest Hills, the Allston Golf Club, and a site on the Charles River Esplanade, between the two bridges, in Cambridge.

The statement of the President that the site "must be in Boston" eliminates the Charles River esplanade. Then the students got busy, among themselves, and for one reason or another eliminated Forest Hills. This seems to leave only the Golf Club site in Allston, against which elimination is the statement of President MacLaurin that the responsible heads of the Institute have hardly begun to look about.

This was the statement given out by

KING QUARRELS WITH KAISER AT PARTING

Extraordinary Scene at Victoria Station as German Emperor Leaves for Home.

LONDON, May 20.—An extraordinary scene, capable of only one interpretation, occurred at the Victoria Station late this afternoon on the occasion of the departure of the Kaiser for home.

The King passed through the royal reception room on to the platform, talked heatedly with the Kaiser, emphasizing his argument by repeatedly smiting his palms severely.

So engrossed was the King in his argument that he was apparently unaware that he was within the public view. Suddenly, with an expressive gesture, the Kaiser turned away from the King and talked to Lord Lonsdale. King George thereupon deliberately turned his back upon the Kaiser and commenced talking to the Duke of Connaught without taking notice while the Kaiser bade farewell to the other members of the royal party.

Without further word with King George, the Kaiser and Kaiserin entered the parlor car while the King continued his conversation with the Duke of Connaught. King George seemed suddenly to think better of his position and went on board the car, bowed gravely and only once to the Kaiser and Kaiserin, without raising hands, and immediately resumed his conversation with the Duke of Connaught. The King did not once look around until the train steamed out.

The waiting royalties on the platform were obviously aware of the significance of the occasion and stood around in silence until the King returned to Buckingham Palace.

Says She is in Fear of Watch and Ward Society, which Is After Her.

GERTRUDE QUIMBY, the missing Boston heiress, was found yesterday in New York.

The young woman has been living with a girl friend in that city. Yesterday she appeared at a theatrical office in West Forty-fifth street to ask for a position on the stage, and in that way her identity was established by the AMERICAN.

Miss Quimby denied that she was "stage struck" to a reporter. She said she ran away from her home because conditions there were intolerable and the stage was the only means she knew of for supporting herself. She said that she was still in hiding from her mother and her stepfather, H. A. Werner, and would resist all efforts to take her back to Boston.

"I'll shoot myself before I'll go back," she declared. "I'm going to stay in New York until I find work, if it takes until Fall. My stepfather drove me from home. He actually put me out of the house and he doesn't care if he never sees me again. I have stood all manner of abuse from him—he never liked me—and I simply won't go back.

Keeps Address a Secret.

"I'm not going to let anybody know where I am living. I'm almost a nervous wreck from dodging the police. I want to tell my side of the story, so everybody will understand the real facts. In the first place, I am not stage struck. I intend to go on the stage, but it is because I must.

"I had a great deal of trouble with Mr. Werner, my stepfather, and left home twice. Finally, last Monday, I quit for good.

"I don't believe my people will spend much time looking for me, but I'm going to take no chances, so I won't tell where I am living. Its the Watch and Ward Society of Boston I'm most afraid of, for they are trying to get hold of me. If they do and try to take me back to Boston, I'll shoot myself.

"I have been to most of the theatrical offices trying to get work, but there seems to be no chance. But I can stay with my friend in Brooklyn as long as I please, and I intend to stay here until I get something to do."

Had Two Assumed Names.

Miss Quimby admitted that when she first arrived in New York she called herself Grace Van Ness, but found it expedient later on to change the name to Kathleen West. She declined to say what name she is living under at present. She has been advised by several persons connected with New York theatrical offices to go back home, but has steadfastly declined, she says. Her mother, she declared, is not ready with a welcome of any warmth, and she is certain that New York is the best place for her.

The interest in the strange disappearance of Miss Gertrude Quimby became acute last night when it became known that the arrest of a man was imminent in the case.

It was also learned that two or more Boston business men of wealth and social prominence, as well as some Harvard students, had become very much embarrassed at the persistent investigation of the case—not that they had anything to do with her going away, but because they had met the bewitching girl.

These men met the girl, according to the report that is being traced by proper authorities, at the home of a mutual

PETER'S PENCE SAIL ON LINER VENEZIA

American Catholics' Offering to the Pope Is About $35,000 in Gold.

NEW YORK, May 20.—"Peter's Pence" ousted the purser from his cabin aboard the Fabre Liner Venezia when she sailed for Mediterranean ports to-day because the heavy steel box that Cardinal Gibbons placed it in was too large to be put into the ordinary safe and a new safe had to be put aboard instead.

The Rev. J. A. Cuniane of Baltimore was the Cardinal's messenger to the Pope and the fact that he was carrying the annual contribution from the American Catholic churches to the Vatican would never have been known had it not been for the size of the box, which was so heavy that it required two men to carry it aboard.

The box measured three feet seven inches in length, two feet ten inches in width and about ten inches deep. Its weight was about 150 pounds, and as this was probably all gold, its value would be about $35,000.

NEW YORK, May 20.—A flash from the office of the general president of the Sailors' and Firemens' Union in London to all the principal seaports of the world calling 135,000 men out on strike is expected to-morrow by the New York officers. The strike has been talked of for eighteen months. The crew of 800 on the liner Mauretania are expected to strike, as well as the sailors aboard some sixty other British steamers now in this port. The walkout will extend to every port wherever there is a British flag.

FINANCE BOARD BACKS FOSS IN BREAK WITH THE MAYOR OVER TEACHERS' SALARY BILL

Commission Accused by Mayor of Reversing Its Position on Matter of Advanced Wages in Elementary Department; Teachers Prepare for War to Prevent Final Defeat of Long-Fought Cause by the Governor's Veto.

THE breach between Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald was threatened with becoming wider and wider, last night, when John A. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, came out with a statement indorsing the attitude of the Governor. The Governor has intimated that he will veto the teachers' Salary bill. The Mayor has warned him that he'll make a mistake. The Finance Commission says Mr. Foss is quite right.

The feeling between Mayor Fitzgerald and Chairman Sullivan of the Finance Commission, as is well known, is nothing at all like the partiality Mr. Damon had for Mr. Pythias. They are decidedly un-friends. Mayor Fitzgerald having had the Sullivan statement read to him, said promptly that the attitude now displayed by the Finance Commission is "directly contrary to the attitude taken by the Finance Commission when the teachers' salary bill was prepared and discussed."

The centre of disturbance shifted late yesterday from the State House and the City Hall to other places, Governor Foss, whose constitutional five days for consideration will expire on Tuesday, would say nothing. The Governor had already told folks to look for a veto.

Mayor Fitzgerald had nothing to say until the Finance Commission statement came out, in the early evening. Then the centre of disturbance shifted back again.

In the meantime the cause of the 2,000 elementary teachers came in for a glorious amount of free advertising. Some grown men—who have votes and know how to use them—had it impressed upon them forcibly that the women teachers in the primary grades of Boston are paid from $432 to $752 a year, and in the grammar grades from $552 to $936 a year. The bill that these women have had the House of Representatives and the honorable Senate pass for them provides "more adequate salaries for teachers in the elementary public day schools of the city OF THOSE RANKS FOR WHICH THE MAXIMUM SALARY IS LESS THAN ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS PER ANNUM."

MANDATORY FEATURES START TROUBLE.

The fuss that has been kicked up over the bill since it passed both branches of the Legislature early last week and went to the Governor, is due to its "mandatory" features. It provides more money for the School Committee, but it says what the School Committee must—not may—do with this additional revenue. The Governor, having heard from School Committeeman Joseph Lee and others, thinks the bill ought to go back to the Legislature and have its "must" taken out. The 2,000 women whom it affects say, in first class, unobjectionable and polite English, that it's a fine fat chance they'll have of getting the new money if the disposition of the fund is left to the School Committee. That they have some ground for apprehension in this direction may be gathered from Committeeman Lee's statement that $20,000 of the money ought to go to "high school teachers."

The action already taken by House and Senate on the bill cannot be "reconsidered," however, if one man in either branch will stand up in his shoes to "object." Some of the younger schoolma'ams said last night that they will have very little difficulty in finding this one man. Certain members of the Legislature said the same.

Governor Foss thinks it is "Hobson Rule" to let the School Committee of Boston run the schools of Boston and pay the teachers of Boston. Here is the endorsement Mr. Foss drew last night from Boston Finance Commissioners Sullivan, Moore, Balch, Curtis and Lehy:

Finance Board Statement.

Judging from the newspaper reports the Governor's attitude seems to be: First, the Legislature thinks there should be increased salaries; second, the Legislature should authorize an appropriation so as to make the salary increase possible; third, the School Committee, elected by the citizens of Boston to manage the public schools, should fix the salary schedule, acting, however, in good faith toward the elementary teachers; fourth, the School Committee can be trusted to fix the schedule with justice to the elementary teachers and to the Boston as a whole; fifth, the Legislature should not make it mandatory for the School Committe to devote the entire increase in the appropriation to increase the salaries of one class of teachers only, thus requiring a change in salary schedules in every year hereafter.

If this is the position of the Governor it is exactly in accord with the proposition of the Finance Committee. The Finance Commission in its letter to the Legislative Committee said the Legislature should not fix the teachers' schedule. There would be no more reason for such action in the case of the school teachers than in the case of the fire, police, street or other departments.

"Finicky" Says Mayor.

Mayor Fitzgerald almost chuckled upon finding the "Home Rule" views of Governor Foss endorsed by the Finance Commission. Mr. Fitzgerald promptly declared that the statement from the Finance Commission was contradictory to the attitude they assumed when the bill was being prepared and discussed.

"A year ago," said the Mayor, "I authorized an appropriation of $5,000 for a special investigation of school expenses, with a view to determining if there was any way in which these salary increases could be granted without increasing the tax rate. After waiting nearly a year without getting any reply from the Commission I sent for Chairman Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan told me that Mr. Ernst had charge of this investigation. When I sent for Mr. Ernst, that official stated that a Mr. Koran, who was preparing some figures to be used, had been ill and consequently the investigation had been delayed.

"Subsequently I received a report which admitted that the 10 and 20 cent increase in the tax rate ought to be made to provide for the salary increases. There was no protest of any kind from the Finance Commission when this bill was being considered. If the bill wasn't right it was their duty to correct it and tell the teachers about it.

"Governor Foss will veto the bill because of finicky objections made by Joseph Lee, the author of the very bill upon which this increase bill was based."

Mr. Lee for "Home Rule."

Mr. Lee, well known as the promoter of the playground movement, said, for his part, that the primary and the grammar-school teachers ought to have more money. This was also the opinion of his associates in the School Committee, Mr. Lee said. He opposes the bill which lies on the desk of the Governor because he doesn't think the Legislature should interfere in the "administration" of the school affairs of Boston.

"This is entirely a matter for the Boston School Committee," Mr. Lee said to the Sunday AMERICAN. "Let the Legislature make an appropriation for increased salaries, and then let the School Committee apportion the money in the manner that will be fairest to all concerned.

"It is absolutely necessary that about $20,000 a year be given to raise the salaries of a certain class of high school teachers who are now so poorly paid that it is impossible to get the right kind of persons. On one occasion, recently, seventeen out of the twenty on the waiting list had been offered a position before one was found who would take it at the salary.

"The bill before the Governor makes no provision for increasing the salaries for 'first assistants.' If this bill should be approved by the Governor the elementary teachers receiving the new maximum would get within a few dollars of the salary of a first assistant, and the advantage of attaining this latter position would be lost.

"But the matter is one for the School Committee. What would there be to prevent all the other classes of teachers going to the Legislature in like manner? What would there be to prevent the janitors from getting similar legislation?

Teachers Charge Bad Faith.

"It is true that the elementary teachers made the fight and secured the legislation, but the money is the money of the taxpayers of Boston, and all deserving teachers—not merely those who made the noise that secured it—should share in the benefits."

Later in the day Mr. Lee sat down and wrote out a statement for the press, in which he voiced some of these views and some others.

In the meantime the Boston Elementary Teachers' Association prepared for war. The teachers gave out a statement to the effect that they had been "sent to the Legislature" for the relief they wanted. They charged bad faith. Some of them talked about going on the stump.

Miss Theresa A. Dacey of Charlestown, a member of the Teachers' Committee and an instructor in the Washington School, said she could hardly believe the report that Governor Foss is going to veto the bill. "Why," Miss Dacey said, "His Excellency not only told me he would sign it for us, but actually promised me the quill!" The teachers pointed out a number of "mandatory" sections in the school appropriation laws.

"Votes for Women."

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, editor of the Woman's Journal and president of the Massachusetts Suffrage Association, said at her home in Dorchester that she hopes the Governor will sign the teachers' bill, but expects a boom for the "Votes for Women" movement if the Governor returns the bill to the Legislature on Tuesday with a veto. Mrs. Susan Y. Fitzgerald, another prominent suffragist, expressed similar views. The suffragists, as such, are merely looking on. Many of the 2,000 teachers have seen fit during their two years' fight for better pay to align themselves with their sisters who want the ballot.

This was about all that was new last night on the teachers' salaries bill movement, but there was a lot doing in the political world.

In addition to signifying his dissatisfaction with the teacher's bill, Governor Foss had intimated that he will veto the fifty-four-hour bill for women and children in the cotton mills. The last Governor who vetoed an hours-of-labor bill affecting these toilers was John L. Bates. In 1903 Governor Bates vetoed the fifty-eight-hour bill. In 1904 Governor Bates was snowed under, although Mr. Roosevelt carried the State high and dry.

Senator Lomasney Speaks Up.

There has been a good deal of gossip about the Foss state of mind on these bills, but there was no sensation until Mayor Fitzgerald dropped in on the Governor on Friday to say that he thought Mr. Foss was making a mistake. The fifty-four-hour bill, by the way, has not reached the Governor yet. It has passed the House and has arrived at the final stage in the Senate, that of "enactment."

The Mayor was accompanied to the Governor's room by Senator Lomasney of the West End, brother of Martin M. Lomasney. It was the Lomasneys who nominated Mr. Foss for Governor. They gave him his strength in the Faneuil Hall convention, and when the convention went to smash they gave him Joseph A. Maynard on the Committee of Four to Pick a Candidate.

Neither the Lomasneys nor the Mayor has been entirely pleased with the way Governor Foss has been governing. Mr. Foss heard as much on Friday. Senator Lomasney is said to have been particularly plain spoken. When it was all over there were reports of a "break," and Mayor Fitzgerald at City Hall gave out a statement in which he admitted speaking up for the underpaid schoolma'ams and advising the Governor not to go back on the women and children in the mills.

There was one paragraph in the Fitzgerald statement which set the town to talking. The town continued to talk about this paragraph last night. Here it is:

> If he should do both of these things, (that is, if Governor Foss should veto the Teachers' Salary bill and the 54-hour bill) he is going to be a pretty heavy load for the Democratic party to carry this Fall, if he should be nominated.

With reference to the Teachers' bill, Governor Foss had talked to the Mayor about the principle of "Home Rule."

Warns Foss of Duty.

"I told Governor Foss," Mr. Fitzgerald said last night, "that I know my responsibilities as Mayor of Boston and that I was acquainted with the relations of the school teachers and the School Committee. I told him I felt it was his duty to these women to sign this bill. I still think so. I think it is the duty of the Legislature to pass it over his veto.

"The school teachers threshed this matter out and they were advised to 'go right to the Legislature' for relief. There was apparently no objection to their going. Now, when they have practically secured the necessary money to insure the increases, they are advised to withdraw that portion of the bill making it mandatory for the additional money to be spent for increases and leave it discretionary with the School Committee as to how it shall be spent."

Thinking it all over, yesterday, the politicians of both camps said they should not be at all surprised if, sooner or later, the Boston Democracy and the Foss Democracy pass each other on the street without so much as "hullo." Some of those politicians who pose as clairvoyants said that the Fitzgerald-Foss differences on the Teachers' Salary bill, and the Fitzgerald-Foss warning on the fifty-four-hour bill, are merely prefatory to a finish fight when the time comes, next month, for a successor to Stephen O'Meara as Police Commissioner of Boston.

Talk Police Commissioner.

When the time comes, some of these political clairvoyants said, Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Lomasney will have a candidate for this place whose initials will not be those of Francis M. Carroll. Mr. Carroll is a fine enough young fellow, these gentlemen said, but he is not "the" candidate. Some think the real candidate will turn out to be Ed. F. McSweeney. Mr. McSweeney has repeatedly turned down other things. Some of his friends believe he would not run and hide, however, if the Police Commissionership were chasing him.

Howevr that may be, said the wiseacres, Mayor Fitzgerald is merely playing at being vexed, at present, compared to the Indian performance he will give if Mr. Foss reappoints Mr. O'Meara. Then again, there is the matter of a vacancy in the Civil Service Commission. The Mayor and Mr. Lomasney want a Boston Democrat for the commission. They prefer a Boston Democrat friendly to Fitzgerald and Lomasney.

Speaking broadly, the greatest peril to Foss and the Democratic party is believed to lie in the expected veto of the fifty-four-hour bill.

On this subject the attitude of the Governor is that he had been led to expect a fifty-five-hour bill. Such a bill was the labor legislators. In the Massachusetts Senate, however, there sits a Republican Senator, Sam Ross of New Bedford, who is also quite a person in the world of textile labor.

Then Comes the 54-Hour Bill.

Senator Ross, when his opportunity came, slipped over an amendment making it fifty-four hours instead of fifty-five.

The mill owners say this is making haste too swiftly. They point out that only last year the number of hours was cut from fifty-eight to fifty-six. They think the textile business should have time to adjust itself to new conditions. Governor Foss sees merit in this contention.

Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield, Democrat, points out to the Governor that the movement for shorter hours in the mills began in 1873, when women and children were working sixty hours a week, or "from dark to dark." Representative Dean has reminded the Governor that a reduction of six hours in thirty-eight years ought to be considered far from alarming.

The Governor will act on the teachers' salary bill on Tuesday. At about that time he ought to get the 54-hour bill. A few weeks hence he will name a Boston Police Commissioner, and then a Civil Service Commissioner. Whatever happens to his experts and his messages, these matters and his disposition of them will have a whole lot to do with the future career in politics of Eugene Noble Foss.

MEMORIAL DAY FLAGS ARE READY FOR ALL

Are you going to get one of those flags for Memorial Day?

There is just about time, now, if you have not done so already, to begin clipping flag coupons and to complete your series in good season for the big patriotic holiday.

Suppose you begin to-day. You have to clip seven coupons. By next Saturday you can get your flag. If you delay a day before beginning to clip coupons, you may slip up on the other end of the deal and fail to get your flag by Memorial Day. That would be poor policy as Memorial Day is one of the best days in the year to have a flag and to fly it.

The AMERICAN is giving a beautiful specimen of the Stars and Stripes under conditions within the reach of all.

Readers all know how to get a flag. The recipe is simple, thus:

"Seven coupons of consecutive dates and thirty-five cents."

Was there ever an easier and cheaper way to obtain a splendid specimen of the Stars and Stripes, a well-made, handsome flag, worth $1.50 if it is worth a cent.

There is no waiting in line at the Flag Department, no delay. The flags are all ready for you, nicely wrapped up. If ordered by mail they will come in stout fibre-paper envelopes.

Applicants should understand clearly that all mail orders must be addressed to Flag Department, Boston AMERICAN, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

The AMERICAN is not responsible for money sent through the mail in any form other than Postoffice money order or check. Do not send cash or stamps through the mail.

The flag which the AMERICAN gives under this order is of solid woven bunting of highest grade, with colors absolutely fast. The stripes are sewed throughout with double rows of stitches and the corners are solidly fastened. A heavy canvas border, with large brass grommets for ropes, completes it.

For the convenience of AMERICAN readers who live in Providence flags may be obtained from the special AMERICAN agent in Providence, Max Silverstein, at No. 28 Canal street. He will redeem flag coupons which are BROUGHT to his store, but will supply no mail orders. ALL mail orders must be sent to the Flag Department, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

POLICE CHIEF FINED.

Hamilton Officer Guilty of Striking Woman.

SALEM, May 20.—In the District Court to-day Samuel E. McGlaufin, chief of police of Hamilton, was found guilty of striking Mrs. Mary Barror of that city and fined $25. Mrs. Barror testified that on May 5 McGlaufin called at her house and, without word of warning, seized her twelve-year-old daughter Annie by the wrist. "My daughter had been playing truant, but the chief did not utter a word as to his purpose. He had no warrant or legal papers of any kind. When he seized Annie by the wrist I protested, whereupon he grabbed me and pushed me about the room and finally struck me."

HARVARD TREE DOOMED.

Beetles Play Havoc With Memorials in the "Yard."

The famous old "Senior tree," a tall elm in Harvard College yard, is believed to be doomed. Other trees in the immediate vicinity are being cut down because of the ravages of the elm-leaf beetle, and the tree of many class day memories will probably be among those to be sacrificed.

GOVERNOR SIGNS TECHNOLOGY BILL

Institute to Remain in Boston and Permanent Site Will Soon Be Chosen.

Governor Foss when he had signed the $1,000,000 bill:

This Bill raises the question of the relation of the State to institutions of higher education. The general policy of making grants to private institutions cannot be approved. This grant to the Institute of Technology can be approved because the Institute has always stood in a peculiar relation to the Commonwealth, and therefore the grant is not a precedent for similar action in the case of other institutions.

The grant does, however, raise the question of the future relations of the State to the In titute of Technology. Governor Foss believes that even in the case of the Institute of Technology, State aid should ultimately cease unless the State takes over the management of the Institution. The present time is not an opportune one for the determination of this question, because the institute is now facing the seriou question of removal to a new site, and because its appeal to the public for funds may ultimately make it independent of State aid.

Governor Foss believes that the State may safely aid the institute to remove to a new situation, and that by the present grant the institution may be enabled to place itself in such a position that it will be independent of State aid. He feels, however, that thne present grant is ju tified only by the emergency, and that it should be the last unless the State is to assume control.

Letter from Maclaurin.

In this conclusion he finds that he is confiremd by the President and the other members of the Corporation of the Institute of Technology. President Maclaurin has written the following letter which fully covers the subject:

"In reply to your inquiries with reference to the proposed grant to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the next ten years, I have to say that in may judgment such a grant ought not to be continued indefinitely. I believe that at the end of ten years, the Institute should be ENTIRELY free from the necissity of looking to the State for such support."

"Disbelieving in the general policy of grants by the State to support private educational or other charitable institutions, I feel that the grants to he Institue of Technology ough not to go on indefinitely, but that at the end of these ten years the grants ought to cease absolutely, or the Institute ought to pass into State control."

Mr. Everett Morss writes as follows: "I agree with President Lowell's letter of the 15th inst., and President Maclaurin's letter of the 16th inst., that such State aid as the bill carries is justified only as an emergency and I believe that after the ten-year period we shall be able to take care of ourselves."

Mr. William H. Lincoln writes: "I concure in the opinion expressed by President Lowell that at the end of ten years the institute should be in a position through the assistance of its alumni and friends to maintain itself without further aid from the State, and that it should not seek for any continuance of such aid. The State will have done its duty."

Mr. Francis R. Hart and Mr. Frederick P. Fish wrote to the same effect.

"To Continue High Efficiency."

"Governor Foss's signing of the Technology bill," President Maclaurin said ot the newspapers, " will make t possible for the Institute of Technology to continue at its present high rate of efficiency. The effect of this will be beneficial to the Commonwealth and community as to Technology itself.

"The grant will make possible the development of Technology along the lines laid down by its founder, William Barton Rogers. In particular, the very generous promises of support from our alumni will now be realised. Our men have contributed generously—one aluminus pledging one-half a million dollars toward the new Technology. This was, however, conditional on the Commonwealth doing its share.

"Our friends have been very generous in their support and reliance in the school. Sufficient funds will probably be raised for the purchase of a new site and construction of new buildings. This will be our first step in the new Technology.

"This money derived from this grant from the State is to be used for running expenses only. A provision in the measure states that not one cent shall be used for land or buildings. This will not interfere with our plans as the site and building problem will be looked after by the great body of alumni and friends of the Institute. Now that the State's assistance is rendered, this promised support will be forthcoming.

"As to a new site—we will begin at once and make business offers. Until now the institute has not been in a position to make a business deal with the land owners. This will be a long and delicate proposition and will be done at once.

"I may say that the selection of sites has been sifted down to three plots of ground. These are all within easy reach from Copley square and Rogers steps. As we have no definite business deal with regard to any one in particular—it will be impossible to state that we favor this one any more than that location in some other section of the community. tI is not an easy thing to find out the price of a section of ground from twenty or thirty owners. Everything will depend upon the offers made to us from land owners. Which of the three sites is the best will be determined purely by the matter of cost.

"We shall need a considerable area for the natural growth of the institute in the next fifty or one hundred years. We don't want to move more than once.

"The buildings will cost several millions of dollars. The general plan will be along the ideas developed by Desire Desparadell, professor of architecture at the institute. Through the generosity of Edward M. Hagar, 1893—President of the Universal Portland Cement Company of Chicago—the buildings will be constructed out of reinforced cement.

"Our property on Trinity Place including—Engineering A. B. C.; the Tech. Union and the Pierce and Naval Architecture buildings can be readily sold. We have had a number of good offers for this location and property.

"Actual work on the new site and construction on the new buildings will be in operation within the next six months. It will take about two years to erect the buildings Technology will require. Of course the rate at which we build will be determined on the support of the alumni. We shall build first those buildings whose equipments and apparatus can be easiest moved."

Novelties in Shirt Waists

This is a year for novelties. There are more new ideas in waists this year than there has been for the past five. The up-to-date houses are the only ones doing business.

Tremont and Matinee Waists are the standards by which all waists are judged. They are manufactured under perfect sanitary conditions by skilled operators, men and women whose parents and grandparents for 50 years have done nothing but make shirts and shirt waists.

Our waists are adapted to all classes and types of women. They have an individuality, style, dash and go not found in other makes.

GIRL'S FATHER GETS ACCUSED ASSAILANT

Woburn Police in Taxi Hunt Wanted Man and Find Him in a Struggle.

Accompanied by ten-year-old Esther Tobin of Woburn, two patrolmen of that city scoured Woburn and the surrounding territory for an hour in a taxicab late yesterday afternoon, hunting for a man who had attacked the little girl on lonely Montvale avenue a short time before.

At 6:30 the police came across Frank H. Tobin, Esther's father, in a fierce struggle at Montvale railroad station with a man whom Esther instantly identified as her assailant.

The police whirled down on the scene and, in spite of the man's denials, arrested him. This man is William P. Doherty of Woburn, whose family lived on John street, but who has not lived at home for some time. He is thirty-five years old.

Esther's father, who had been searching frantically on foot for "a man in a checked cap," as Esther sobbingly described him, had encountered Doherty at Montvale station just after the police had passed by there on their taxicab chase.

Doherty wore a checked cap. That was enough for the excited father. He grappled with Doherty. He was just overpowering him when the police, directed back to the station by a pedestrian who saw the fight, came up in their taxi.

Identified by Girl.

Later, at Woburn police station, Esther positively identified Doherty as the man who had attacked her on Montvale avenue earlier in the afternoon. Doherty is now held on a charge of attempted assault.

Frank H. Tobin is a Boston & Maine conductor. The Tobins live at No. 5 Maple vale section of Woburn. Mrs. Tobin came to Boston yesterday afternoon shopping. At three o'clock Mr. Tobin gave Esther some change and sent her to Montvale square for groceries. There he would see a ball game in Woburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Tobin each arrived home at five o'clock. They found Esther there, crying, disrobed and with her clothing torn. Sobbing she told a pitiful story of being held up 100 yards from home on Montvale avenue by "a man in a checked cap," as she said.

"He told me to keep still or he'd shoot me," the child sobbed.

Mr. Tobin telephoned police headquarters. Patrolman John Walsh and John Roach, with Frank Fitzgerald as chauffeur, sped to Montvale in a closed taxi. Esther was put on the front seat of the taxi with Fitzgerald. The police sat inside, where they would be readily seen.

"Now you will tell us if you see the man who attacked you," they said to Esther. The child nodded.

Father Gives Battle.

Running on the high speed, the taxicab was whirled along Montvale avenue into Stoneham square, down the Winchester road to Calvary Cemetery in Woburn.

Several men were passed but Esther gave no sign. She kept a sharp lookout, however.

With the motor whirring smoothly the taxi was turned about to Montvale square and to Montvale station on the main line of the Boston & Maine. The ticket agent had seen no "man in a checked cap." Fitzgerald was directed to turn back to Montvale square. Just as the taxi approached the square a man ran into the street, shouted the taxi to stop and said:

The taxi was headed around to the station. As they came nearer the two policemen recognized Frank Tobin fighting with a man in a checked cap. Just then Esther screamed:

"That's the man, that's the man, right-ing with papa."

In a second the taxi was alongside. The policemen sprang out, grasped Tobin's opponent and hustled him into the back of the taxi.

The prisoner was recognized by the police as Doherty. When told what he was charged with Doherty vehemently denied it.

NEW STATION.

Elevated Purchases Location for Building at Coolidge Corner.

The Boston Elevated Company has purchased a large lot of land in Webster street, between Park and Harvard streets, at Coolidge Corner, Brookline, which will be used as the site of the new transformer station of the company in that district. The station will be an ornamental building, one story high, with basement of brick and stone, from plans by Peabody & Stearns, and will be in keeping with the many adjacent fine properties.

It is estimated to cost about $25,000. The lot of land contains 9,523 square feet, valued at about $8,000, and was purchased from George H. Stanton. The building will cover an area 50x80 feet. The station is the second in the system the road will establish in connection with the new big South Boston power plant. In detail it will be much similar to the first station erected, that at Kneeland square. The contract for its construction has been let to the Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation.

SAVES LITTLE SISTER.

Girl's Timely Dash for Water Prevents Child's Death.

GLOUCESTER, May 20.—Nine-year-old Beatrice Quinn was saved from death by fire today by her eleven-year-old sister Emma. Beatrice's dress was ignited by fire in a rubbish pile in the Quinn's yard on Ivy court. Emma heard Beatrice's screams and, dashing into the house, snatched from the sink a pail filled with water. Staggering under the weight Emma managed to cross the yard and throw the water on Beatrice's blazing dress in time to save her life. Mrs. Quinn, who ran after Emma, tore the charred garments from Beatrice's form. The child was badly burned but will probably recover. Four years ago another daughter, Ellen, was disfigured by fire.

Horse Backs Into Harbor.

A horse, one of two attached to a tip-cart owned by Charles M. Tolleo, backed over the edge of the dock at the foot of O street, South Boston, late yesterday and was drowned. The other horse was saved.

HALF MILLION FUND TO DEVELOP BOSTON

Chamber of Commerce Has Launched Move to Back Up Work for Busier City.

A corporation with no capital stock, but with a $500,000 "fund of guaranteed credit," and with the single aim of aiding Boston business men in the development of new enterprises that will add to the prosperity of the city, has been launched in by the Chamber of Commerce.

It is called the Industrial Development Company and is the first of several companies the Chamber is forming for the purpose of making Boston the most progressive business centre in the United States.

"A substantial number of small enterprises will be started and established capable of large expansion and growth in the future," the Chamber announces. "But in addition to this the attention of local investors will be forcibly called to the industrial opportunities in the home field, and a more favorable attitude in banking and financial circles toward local enterprises will probably be created. And not the least important result will be the favorable publicity which Boston will be given all over the country as a live and progressive city.

"The company has secured a special charter from the Legislature to aid in the development of new and existing industries in Boston and other parts of the Commonwealth. This company will have no capital stock. Instead, there will be a fund of guaranteed credit amounting to $500,000, pledged under a form of guaranty contract running for three years, in sums ranging upward to $10,000.

"The method of operation of the company jointly will be to guarantee on the security of the credit fund the notes of men with ideas and enterprise in local work who have been recommended for aid to the officers and loan committee by the chamber's committee on industrial development.

"The officers of the Industrial Development are: President, Thomas J. Storrow; vice-presidents, Thomas P. Beal, William F. Gavin and Daniel V. Wing; treasurer, Russell G. Fessenden; secretary, David P. Edwards; loan committee, Clifton H. Dwinnell, Charles P. Jopp, E. Elmer Poye, Arthur P. Stone and Arthur G. Rotch; directors, Thomas P. Beal, Elmer P. Ellis, Roland W. Boynton, Russell G. Fessenden, William A. Gaston, Edwin F. Greene, George Hutchinson, John S. Lawrence, James J. Phelan, Lebanon Pickett, James J. Storrow and Daniel G. Wing.

BURLESQUE GIRL MARRIES.

And Old John L. Is First to Congratulate Her.

Julia Loretta Irving, a pretty young member of the Pennant Winner's Burlesque company, was married yesterday in Bulfinch Street Church to Charles Henry Edward of Newark, N. J., Rev. Christopher R. Eliot officiated. The bride was attended by her nieces, Maud Alice Conroy, as bridesmaid, and little Dorothy Brechick as flower girl.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the Revere House, where all the bride's friends in the company were present. A telegram of congratulation from Mr. and Mrs. John L. Sullivan was received.

GET RINGS WORTH $300.

Two Men Carry Off Tray From Lynn Jewelry Store.

A tray of rings valued at $300 was stolen from the store of George Anderson, a jeweler, at No. 254 Union street, Lynn, yesterday afternoon by two men who had entered the place a moment before to have Mrs. Anderson, who was in charge of the place during her husband's absence, tie up two pieces of cut glass for them. It was while Mrs. Anderson was in the rear of the store that the theft was committed. The men are described as being five feet six inches in height. Each weighed about 135 pounds and wore dark clothes and straw hats.

WHITE RATS' MEMORIAL.

Actors' Union to Hold Service for Departed Brethren.

The White Rats of America, a union of actors, will hold memorial services for its departed brethren at 2:30 Sunday, June 11, in Scenic Temple, corner of Warren avenue and Berkeley street. Tony Williams is chairman of the Memorial Day Committee. There will be vocal and instrumental selections by members of the profession in Boston, and Mrs. Howes' orchestra of twenty-two pieces will play. The Rev. William H. Lewis of the Twelfth Church of the Advent; Rabbi Eichler and Rev. Fr. Hoff of the Holy Cross will make addresses. The Catholic boys' choir will sing.

BLACKSMITH A SUICIDE.

Beverly Farms Man Found Hanging From Cellar Rafter.

BEVERLY FARMS, May 20.—Mathias Ranson, blacksmith, was found hanging from a beam in the cellar of his home this afternoon. He had been dead four hours when he was discovered by his son, Brewer Hannah. The dead man was fifty years old and had kept a blacksmith shop at No. 20 Vine street for many years. He lived next door.

The cause of his suicide is not known. He leaves a widow and four children. The family say he had been acting queerly for some time.

BOSTON MAN TO FLY.

Promises All Sorts of Stunts Today at Belmont Park.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Earle L. Ovington, a Boston aviator, announces he will give an exhibition of flying at Belmont Park course tomorrow unless the weather makes such efforts impossible. If the wind is moderate, says Ovington he will cut figure eights over the field at a height of 100 feet, volplane from a height of 2,000 feet, and possibly try some original stunts. He gets no remuneration, he says, except the fun of the thing and publicity.

DARING AIRMAN AT METZ AVIATION PARK

Russian Aviator Who Is Entered for Hearst "Coast to Coast" Flight, Interests Residents.

Semontouk, a noted Russian aviator, is inspiring the most interest of all the birdmen who have arrived at the Metz aviation park in Waltham and public curiosity about this fearless navigator of the airy realm is whetted by the fact that he is going to compete for the $50,000 "Coast-to-Coast" prize offered by William Randolph Hearst. An attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a dirigible balloon has been made but the feat of crossing the Continent in a flying machine is no less difficult or hazardous. Aviators credit Semontouk with being as brave as any of their class and Waltham people expect sensational feats by him when the Metz park meet opens.

He is now busy assembling the parts of his high-powered Blériot monoplane and expects to be able to make a trial flight within a week. His plane will have to be subjected to minor repairs. It was damaged by an accident just before he shipped it to America. The meet starts June 15 and the park is the old Governor Gore estate. The Russian, who is a licensed pilot from the Blériot school, says it is a fine field from which to ascend skyward.

CUPID HANGS TAG ON 15 WELLESLEY GIRLS

Amazing Results Following Suffragette Speech on Horrid Man to '11 Class.

One can never tell what's going to result from a well-conducted woman suffrage agitation.

They had one out at Wellesley College this Spring and now the Senior class promises to graduate more engaged girls than any class in the college history.

Fifteen seniors are wearing diamond solitaires on the engagement finger. They have been duly congratulated and have each and severally, admitted in the strictest confidence that "he" is the "dearest man on earth."

The number of prospective brides gives the class of 1911 the Cupid record. When the suffragettes came out, talked equal rights and denounced man as humanity's woman, the senior girls seemed deeply impressed. The net result, so far as the suffragist orators expected, has even exceeded their expectations. The dislike of horrid man was so firmly rooted in the hearts of the seniors that fifteen engagements are announced already.

Announcement of these engagements is only a part of the ante-commencement whirl which is now upon the Wellesley collegians.

Busy Rehearsing Shakespeare.

This "a-flutter at dawn" can be taken literally, too. For the solo dancers for Tree Day practice on the green in the very early morn. This is so that the solo dances will be genuine surprises when Tree Day comes. The early bird, when gets up to catch the Wellesley worm, is regaled at breakfast by sight of fair maids skipping about the green in merry costume, with cautious glances every now and then, to make sure no unworthy girl of the three lower classes is stealing a surreptitious peep—also the Wellesley milkman.

During the day time rehearsals for various college theatricals have been held in secluded places on the college grounds. The Shakespeare Society has been holding forth in Rhododendron Hollow.

In a still more secluded spot the cast for the senior play has been rehearsing. The names of the cast, even of the play itself, have been kept darkly secret.

The Alpha Kappa Chi Society has been rehearsing through the week for its presentation in the original Greek of "Odysseus Among the Phaeacians," which was given yesterday afternoon on Longfellow Hill.

Last night brought one of the principal events, the Junior Barnswallow play, given in the Barn to a delighted audiences.

The Barnswallow Cast.

The Junior Barnswallow selection for this Spring was "Monsieur Beaucaire." The cast was:

Beaucaire.....Helen White of Cambridge
Lady Mary Carlisle.....Helena Meredith of Jamaica Plain
Duc de Winterset.....Muriel Knight of Philadelphia
Misopolis.....Florence Cohn of Rochester, N. Y.
Henri.....Esther Schmidt of Amenia, O.
Mahomet.....Ruth Hobbs of Rosette Park, Pa.
Sir Hugh.....Corinne Searls of Omaha

The production was in charge of Noni Zuckerman of New York, assisted by Mary Metz of Wooster, O., Emily Gosling of Portland, Me., and Marion Parsons of Toledo. Florence Tripey of York, Me., was coach. The play was acted with spirit and won rounds of applause. The audience was strictly feminine, of course, as the girls assuming masculine characters dressed the part faithfully.

Mrs. John Underwood.

Mrs. John Underwood, R. F. D. 2, Box 90, Waverly, Ohio, writes:

"Having had catarrh and stomach trouble and having suffered very much, I, after being doctored a long while, as a last resort, took Peruna. The result was wonderful. I would highly recommend it as a good remedy. I still use Peruna and would not be without it. I always have it in the house."

Catarrh of Head and Throat.

Mrs. L. A. Gray, 137 Main St., Menasha, Wis., writes: "I was troubled with catarrh of the head and throat for so many years that I thought there was no cure for it. Mother suggested that I try Peruna. I bought a couple of bottles and decided to see what it would do for me. I am a healthy woman today, thanks to Peruna."

Entire Stock of W. F. Purscher & Co.

Decorators at 280 Dartmouth St., Successors to Henry A. Turner, formerly of West St.

Furniture, Draperies, Wall Paper

This is the opportunity of a lifetime to secure exclusive hand-made furniture, tapestries, lace curtains, draperies and wall papers at the most remarkably low prices ever known and which may not again be approached in years.

It is hardly necessary for us to tell a Bostonian who W. F. Purscher & Co. were. Up to seven years ago Mr. Purscher was connected with the Henry A. Turner Co., and for the past seven years has been known as their successor.

For many years Henry A. Turner conducted an exclusive decorating establishment on West St. Many of the finest homes still bear witness to his high-grade work.

W. F. Purscher & Co. have now retired from business and tomorrow and while they last every piece of furniture, every curtain, drapery and piece of tapestry, and every roll of wall paper carried in stock by Purscher & Co. will be on sale in our furniture department, 4th floor, and in our upholstery and wall paper departments, 3d floor.

NOTED SPEAKERS AT EMPIRE DAY DINNER

Canadian Club to Entertain the Secretary of War and Ottawa Minister of Interior.

Empire Day will be celebrated by the Intercolonial Club Wednesday in a most impressive manner. The guests of the club include a long list of American and Canadian notables and the occasion is likely to be chosen for important announcements on reciprocity and other matters of interest to the two countries.

President Taft will be represented by Secretary of War Stimson and the Canadian government by Frank Oliver, minister of the interior. The list of speakers also includes Governor Pothier of Rhode Island, Consul-General Frederick P. Leary of Boston, Curtis Guild, Ambassador to Russia, Governor Foss, Mayor Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas T. Stokes, representing the British Naval and Military Veterans, and George E. Drummond, president of the Canadian Club of Montreal.

Asa R. Mixsell, secretary of the Intercolonial Club, who is chairman of the committee of arrangements, reported last night that in addition to the above gentlemen, the following will speak:

Sharon Graham, president Canadian Club of New York, Adjutant-General Gardner F. Pearson of Massachusetts, P. O'Longlin, president Quebec Canada Society; James Pottinger, president South Charitable Society; Dr. Wilfred Harris, president Canadian Club of London; Adjutant L. Windsh, Celtic society; Canadian Club; Dr. Joseph Armand Bedard, president Societe Historique Franco-Americaine; John J. Martin, president Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange; Alfred W. Donovan, president Boston Athletic Association Club; Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Arnold Bell McCollum, Richard Middleton, president M. I. C. James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks, E. Hooker Dunham, secretary Victorian Club of Boston; Felix Gutmesz, president L'Union Canadienne; Dr. Charles Sumner Bird, president Tufts College; Dr. Charles Eliot, president Harvard; Augustus P. Loring, president Harvard Canadian Club.

Secretary Stimson will make his first public utterance since his acceptance of the war portfolio, and is expected to have something interesting to say about reciprocity with Canada. Mr. Stimson will arrive in Boston Wednesday morning and will be met by Mr. Oliver and the president of the Canadian Clubs of Montreal. They will be entertained at luncheon by the officers of the club and taken for an auto ride about the suburbs during the afternoon.

A reception will be held at 6:30 in the club parlors on Dalton street, and at the banquet will be served in the large dining hall of the clubhouse. It is expected that 500 persons will be present. A. C. Chisholm, president of the club, will preside, and Fred J. Mitchell, ex-president of the club, will be toastmaster.

ONE KISS COSTS $500.

Decision of Lower Court Sustained in Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, May 20.—The Supreme Court has ruled that Mrs. Sarah E. Chapin is entitled to $500 from Marditros M. Stone, a business man, for a kiss.

Chief Justice Dubois handed down two opinions sustaining the award of the jury in the Superior Court. The request of Stone for a new trial was denied, and Mrs. Chapin's motion that he failed to specify wherein the jury did not give him a fair and impartial trial.

PAVLOWA IN ROW BEFORE ROYALTY

Missing Beauty's Wanderings Are Traced to Hotel Where an Actor Paid Her Expenses—Earned Money as a Model.

friend. They found Gertrude as jolly and so pretty that they often asked her to go out in their automobiles, an invitation which she eagerly accepted, it is declared.

Gertrude's father was H. M. Quimby, the son of Mrs. Francella E. Quimby. He was a Wall Street speculator. He was a dashing young man. He met the mother of Gertrude, now Mrs. A. H. Werner, when she was sixteen. They were married and they travelled together all through the country.

Quimby died in Canada, later, it is said, from an overdose of a drug. His mother says that she has spent $2,000 in trying to find documentary evidence of the marriage of her son and the birth of Gertrude, but has failed.

Mrs. Werner, then Quimby, came to Boston with her daughter and began work to earn their living. She placed the little girl out to board and Gertrude grew into a beautiful child. Photographs of the good looking widow and Gertrude, taken as the child was growing up, show that the little one was well cared for and that she showed early traces of the beauty that has proven one of the sad factors in her life.

About two years ago Gertrude's mother met Mr. Werner, a graduate of Yale College and a Boston stock broker. They were married and went to live on Ivy street, Boston. Gertrude at this time was a girl of twelve, but looked much older. She was exceedingly pretty and gave promise of a luxurious development of figure.

The Werners went to live in the new apartment house, the Amsterdam, where they are now. Gertrude attended the Girls' Latin School in the Back Bay. Gertrude seems to have taken a deep interest in the Latin vers, and (love) because most of her favorite books contained writings about the divine passion.

Talent for Drawing.

The girl had some talent in drawing, and her books show that she dreamed of beautifully dressed women, with here and there a stage beauty thrown in who was following in the footsteps of a Grace. A good deal of her time was put in in depicting dancing girls in poses that would be calculated to call forth applause from the college contingent.

Gertrude became acquainted with Mrs. James A. Travers, a wife of a chauffeur, who moved into the flat under that occupied by the Werners about ten months ago. Mrs. Travers is young and good looking. She is of a lively disposition, and has many friends who drop in with her husband to spend the evening.

The rare beauty of face and figure of Gertrude won Mrs. Travers, and it was a common thing for Gertrude to visit her. The girl began to tell Mrs. Travers stories of ill treatment at home that enlisted the sympathy of the visitor.

"They beat me something awful," Gertrude told Mrs. Travers.

"Well," replied Mrs. Travers, "when any one attempts to beat you again, just cry 'Fire!' and I'll come to your help."

So far as is known it was never necessary for Gertrude to cry "Fire." Gertrude not only told stories of bad treatment to Mrs. Travers, but she carried them to her grandmother, Mrs. Quimby. The grandmother offered, it is said, to pay the board of the girl at the Travers home if they did not care to make that arrangement.

Earned Money as a Model.

In the meantime young womanhood had come to the girl and she began to look about for something to do. She had been told that her face and figure were beautiful and that she had begun to develop in a well rounded manner.

"You ought to be an artist's model," the girl was told. "You would be the rage if you did."

But the people who told her this were not artists and when they came to it they didn't know any artists who wanted a model, but some of them suggested that she might make some money posing for photographs.

A woman whose identity is not known, but who represented herself as the mother of Gertrude, took her to a photographer's and the girl posed for a large number of pictures. They were very artistic pictures in this way Gertrude earned a small sum of money, the photographer being accorded the right to show one of the pictures for posters, trade-marks and any other legitimate business.

With this longing for an artistic life Gertrude's surroundings became more distasteful. She had shown some talent for dancing and the stage lured her. But the youth of the girl—she was only fourteen, and looked seventeen—kept her back. She stuck to school and toyed with her Latin and her drawing and occasionally turned into verse.

Missing From Home Overnight.

Through friends of Mrs. Travers and others Gertrude was getting a glimpse of the gay, careless world of light and laughter, where one has nice things to wear and good things to eat.

And then about two months ago Gertrude remained away from home over night. When she returned home her step-father and her mother both were greatly worried. The girl looked ill and was hysterical to such an extent that a physician was called to the house.

Where she had been and through what experiences she had gone she would not tell her mother. Mrs. Werner is employed in a Boston store and she confided to some of her woman friends that she was gravely anxious about her daughter.

"Why don't you take her over your knee and spank her," one of the older women told her. "It would do her good." There is no harm in her, but she is just a little flighty.

Mrs. Werner thought of this advice when she tried to extract from Gertrude where she had been, and she attempted it. Then for the first time the mother realized that her daughter was no longer a child.

For there were black and blue marks left by the resenting girl that lasted for days, her mother averred.

Things had now reached such a state that Gertrude thought that she was practically forced to take a plunge into the whirlpool of life on her own account. Her eyes gazed longingly toward the stage.

Girl Haunts Stage Door.

A musical comedy was playing at one of the theatres and Gertrude is said to have haunted the stage entrance in an attempt to get a position. With no stage experience and being "nothing but a kid," as she was told by those who really meant it for the girl's good, she was not successful in getting her.

What happened as a result of this attempt to get on the stage has resulted in the telling of several stories, one at least of which is of a startling character.

Mr. Werner, the stepfather of the girl, who has searched Boston carefully for the girl, believes that Gertrude is in New York.

This story, which is being investigated thoroughly, is to the effect that Gertrude was introduced to one of the members of the company and that for several days he held her expenses at a Boston hotel. One thing is certain, that she left Boston last Wednesday, following the close of the show's season Saturday night.

Others are of the opinion that she did not go to New York, but is in or near Boston, afraid to return home for fear that she will be placed in an institution by her mother.

Mrs. Werner declared last night that she had her daughter back and that she would make any sacrifice in her to keep her. She denied that she had ever mistreated her daughter. Instead, she said, she had given up her life in the child's behalf.

GERTRUDE QUIMBY IN TEARS AS SHE LEFT

Mrs. Katherine Travers, who saw Gertrude Quimby last Monday as she left her home, said last night:

"I met Gertrude for the first time about ten months ago when I came to live at No. 510 Audubon road. She is a beautiful child, very pleasant and willing to make friends. She had two girl friends of her own with whom she used to play the piano.

"She was quick to learn and picked up rapidly the few things she attempted to play. She used to practice for hours at a time until her parents forbade her to go down stairs at all. She was very determined and would hammer away until she got the result she was hoping for.

"Still a mere child, the glamour of the stage dazzled Gertrude, and her great ambition for years had been to become an actress. She had a collection of pictures of her theatrical favorites, used to follow the news about them with eager interest, and talked constantly of her ambition to go on the stage.

Had Talent For Dancing.

"I discouraged her all I could, and told her she was too young. Besides I don't think she had any real talent for the stage, except perhaps for toe dancing. She could and often did, in her childish way, run all around my parlor on the tops of her toes.

"She came to me one day and borrowed a black suit of mine. This is the black suit in which she was dressed when she disappeared.

"She often told me she was going to run away and I tried to put the notion out of her head. I told her to try to content herself with her home life.

"Her grandmother, Mrs. Francella E. Quimby, called on me and asked me to take care of the child. I often received letters from Mrs. Quimby to give Gertrude. One letter relates to the visit of Miss Burnett of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, brought by the grandmother."

Thursday morning.

Gertrude Dear—Have just been to see Miss Burnett. She and I think you were at home dull in bed. I came home but could get no one to wait on me to see you and I told you to write to me. I am warning you. If you are able, come to me this afternoon or evening. Come to No. 417 Massachusetts avenue. Do not fail to come. If possible. Love from F. E. Q.

Plea from Grandmother.

A letter to Mrs. Travers reads:

Mrs. Travers—Will you please hand the enclosed letter into Gertrude's hands, and I hope she will come and explain to me why she went away. Gertrude's mother came to me to find a home for her. She must now go according to the laws of the city. I am sorry to have to trouble you, but all you may do for the loved child will bring good to you. I want to know if she is going to school and if she is well. Do not say read what I have written to Gertrude. For all our sakes we will have for the right thing to come to us all.

QUIMBY.

"Last Monday, the day that Gertrude disappeared, she was very excited. I think I was the last one to see her. About 4:30 in the afternoon she came to me. She had a suit case in her hand and my child was pale. She was almost hysterical, and told me she was going to do something desperate. I tried to comfort her, but she went away crying, and that is the last time I saw her.

"I hope for news that she has come to harm and that she will come back. She promised to write to me if she ever went away, and I am grieved that she has not done so. If she sees this interview in the Sunday AMERICAN I hope she will write as I am very worried and anxious. I got an idea that she had a beau hanging around. childish ways and I hope that she is found soon as I am greatly worried about her."

Mother Makes Plea.

Mrs. Quimby-Werner, the girl's mother, wants her daughter back and will do anything to make her happy.

"Oh, if my child will only come home," she said. "For thirteen years I've stood on my feet, working as a saleslady and a buyer, part of the time on a meager salary, to earn pretty little clothes for Gertrude.

"And they say she doesn't care for me, her mother. But I know it's just because of the influence she's been under. If she'll only come home, I'll do anything, go anywhere to start her over again.

"I planned to take Gertrude down to Pemberton the first of June to spend the Summer with some friends. If she comes home and wants to, we'll go.

"My heart is yours, I hope she'll see this story and come home to her mother, who dearly loves her and wants her to be a good girl."

POLICE SEEKING OTHER MISSING BOSTON GIRLS

The mystery in the disappearance of Gertrude Quimby has revealed the fact that the Boston police are trying to solve the disappearance of more than a dozen of them of women or girls. Boston has hundreds of such disappearances every year.

From police headquarters names of the missing girls have been made public, but frequently, however, they are withheld and the public hears about them only in picturehouse. She had been married but a week. The police have been unable to trace her. She is young and pretty, and a grief-stricken husband is offering a reward for her. The girl lived at No. 82 Hudson street.

Miss Florence Brown, twenty-two years old, last Sunday left the home of Philip Ginsburg, No. 10 Fayston street, Roxbury, saying she was going to church. She did not return, and an alarm was sent out for her. She recently came to Boston from Fall River.

Mrs. Margaret McKenna, wife of John McKenna, of No. 23 Keefe avenue, Newton Upper Falls, left home with her children. The searchers are baffled for a week. Then there came a letter to her husband, from Yonkers, N. Y., asking him to send her trunk as she needed clothing for the children.

BOSTON & EASTERN ACTION THIS WEEK

Real Bill Without Subterfuge Expected in Matter of High Speed Electric Line.

The Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad bill, for which the public, especially that portion of it living along the route of the proposed high speed trolley road from Boston to Beverly and Danvers, has been waiting several years, is due to be presented this week to the committees on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs, sitting jointly. The bill is being drafted by a sub-committee.

It is the general opinion on Beacon Hill that the measure will be a real Boston & Eastern bill, and that it will contain none of the stumbling-block provisions which the railroads and street railways now operating in and to the North of Boston are trying to have inserted.

The sub-committee members are Senators Charles H. Brown of Medford and James F. Fowers of South Boston and Representatives Roger Wolcott of Milton, Henry C. Bothfeld of Everton and William L. V. Newton of South Boston.

Considerable interest in the Boston & Eastern situation centers about Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester. Washburn is House Chairman of the Committee on Railroads. Members of his committee said last night that during the early part of the present legislative session the intimation to them made them believe that he was in favor of helping the Boston & Eastern to build its road. Recently, they say, he has been quoted as a pooh-pooh the proposition. Washburn has been a leading figure in all railroad fights in the Legislature for the last four sessions. Rumored he has espoused the cause of the interests presided over by Charles S. Mellen. At other times he has been Mr. Mellen's most bitter opponent.

The cause of Representative A. Maine is generally considered to have been greatly aided by a recent talk with Chairman Walter Perley Hall of the Railroad Commission delivered to the committees on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs. It is not only said that the Boston & Eastern proposition was a righteous one, but he thumped his fist on a table and told the committee that it is the Legislature's duty to give the Boston & Eastern the right to build at once and to quit batting its petitions back and forth across Beacon street between the Legislature and the Railroad Commission.

FIREMEN'S PENSION IS VETOED BY FOSS

Message Against Bill to Be Sent to the Legislature To-morrow.

Governor Foss yesterday wrote a veto message on the Boston firemen's pension bill. The actual vetoing of the measure, which consists of returning it to the Legislature without his signature, will be performed when the Legislature assembles to-morrow. The veto message would have been sent to yesterday but for the fact that Saturday is a Legislative day of rest.

The bill provides that members of the Boston Fire Department who have become incapacitated for service or who have been in the service for twenty-five years shall be retired on pension on their own petition. The pension in case of total disability was fixed at two-thirds of the pay received at retirement. The pension after twenty-five years of service was fixed at half pay.

It was stated at the executive chamber yesterday that the Governor's chief objection is to the clause permitting retirement after twenty-five years of service, even though the firemen may be in good health. This provision would allow a man who entered the fire department at the minimum age, twenty-two years, to be retired at the age of forty-seven.

In fire department circles it was said last night that an effort would be made to have the Legislature override the Governor on this veto, but that members of the department would probably not go to the State House to plead with legislators. Fire Commissioner Daly, it was said, recently encountered some members of his department lobbying at the State House for this bill, and the meeting was not a pleasant one.

Lost in a Fog.

NEWBURYPORT, May 20.—Lost in a dense fog, two members of the crew of the fishing schooner Clarence Hall, Walter Perley Hall of the Railroad Commission delivered to the committees on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs, that not only said that the Boston & Eastern proposition was a righteous one, but he thumped his fist on a table and told the committee that it is the Legislature's duty to give the Boston & Eastern the right to build at once and to quit batting its petitions back and forth across Beacon street between the Legislature and the Railroad Commission.

Mexican Peace Proclamation To-Morrow

Figueroa Sends an Ultimatum to Madero

VETERAN PRESIDENT IS TO GIVE UP SEAT

Will Hand Reins of Government Over to Friends of the Insurrection.

MEXICO CITY, May 20.—A peace proclamation that will settle the war finally, it is believed, will be made on Monday, the date of the expiration of the armistice between the federal troops and Madero's insurgents.

It is believed that President Diaz will step down and out for good on either Thursday or Saturday next, and that then there will be a complete transfer of the government.

It has been learned that Madero will not come here from Juarez until Senor de la Barra is installed as acting President. But he is expected in this city by the first of the month at the latest.

New Cabinet Slate Arranged.

This is the latest slate of the new Madero cabinet, as it has come to this city from Juarez:

Minister of Justice—VASQUEZ TAGLE.

Minister of War—GEN. RASCONA or GEN. REYES.

Minister of Colonization and Industry—MANUEL CALERO.

Minister of Public Utilities—MANUEL BONILLA.

Minister of Interior Administration—EMILIO VASQUEZ GOMEZ.

Minister of Finance—ERNESTO MADERO.

Senor de la Barra is to name a subsecretary to take charge of foreign relations, while he is occupied in the Presidential Presidency.

Emilio Vasquez Gomez is now in San Antonio. He is a brother of Dr. Gomez, the chief diplomat of the revolution. Manuel Calero is a member of the Mexican Congress, and one of the leading champions of the reforms desired by the new progressive party. Manuel Bonilla has been recently slandered under the State of Sinaloa. Ernesto Madero is a cousin of Francisco I. Madero, Jr., and one of the most prominent financiers in Mexico. He is in Monterey, Mexico, and has not been a revolutionist.

Rebels Name Cabinet.

The choice of Gen Rasconia for the portfolio of war was made by the Federal Government, but the rebels acceded to it, as did they to Senor de la Barra remaining in nominal charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs. The rebels never have virtually named six members of the new cabinet.

The report that there had been a plot for the kidnap Madero if he came to Mexico City has been denied by the government. Another story that was circulated today was that Madero had demanded $3,000,000 in gold, the delivery of bills of large denomination in place of $3,000,000, as the terms fixed by two weeks ago. Madero himself is averse to paying anything like the full amount.

It is generally understood, and indeed the public utterances of Madero are such that the elections for President and Vice President will be held within three months, and under the present election laws as the voting will probably be all one way, it is thought these will follow soon. However, it is planned to have a more liberal franchise law enacted before the regular elections of Governors and members of the new Congress. This election is planned to take place ten months hence.

Big Presidential Field.

Friends of Madero here all agree in thinking that he will not permit his name to go before the people for the presidency in the coming election. A host of possible candidates are mentioned. Dr. Vasquez Gomez at this early day is apparently in the lead.

Despite the statements to the contrary the question as to the Ministry of War is not settled. Madero maintains his opposition to General Bernardo Reyes, and the matter is being anxiously discussed telegraphically by General Reyes in Paris. It is certain that up to the present Senor de la Barra is not inclined to have Reyes or other general can fill the post so well as Reyes.

President Diaz's entire face is affected from an ulcerated tooth. His upper lip is swollen far beyond its normal size and his face is inflamed. He speaks with the greatest difficulty, but while he is in severe pain his condition is not alarming at this time, despite these symptoms.

The scene wherein Porfirio Diaz renounced the sceptre he has wielded so many years would have been pathetic had it not been for the heroic character of the man who was the central figure. In an agony of pain, relieved only by narcotics, able to utter only a few words with difficulty, remembering only his relinquishing his power, he was still the dominant figure of the council.

Praise from Limantour.

"Not once did he think of himself," said Senor Limantour, Minister of Finance. "Every thought that he expressed was for the future of his country. He has an honest pride, but no vanity. I venture to predict that in a year or two, when the new order of things shall have been established, Mexico will regard him as her greatest hero.

"His resignation must forever silence those who would find no other criticism than that he lusted for power. He has ruled with the single-hearted aim of his country's welfare, and he resigns for the

TEXAS RANGERS WAITING FOR VILLA TO MAKE MOVE

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Special Field Correspondent of the Sunday American.

EL PASO, Tex., May 20.—Nothing of blood-curdling thrill and interest has happened during the last twenty-four hours. Therefore nothing of blood-curdling thrill and interest can be wired. Even the streets have been stillless of the Apaz tingling presence of Villa. It has been that entertaining bandit's every-day custom to prance about the El Paso causeways. Villa thinks well of himself and does not seem to be aware that in this regard he fails to reflect the general sentiment. I was hoping he'd come over to-day. With the Americans on this side of the river he's about as popular as a wet dog.

There are some dozen highly accurate El Paso six-shooters being held in abeyance for the volatile Villa, and with three rangers, one United States marshal, Sheriff Edwards, Chief of Police Jenkins in town and behind and above all, Mayor Kelley—who knows his business—to keep in touch, let it—should Villa, in the language of the Bowery, start anything, he will get his lo a volunteer.

Villa Takes Warning.

So far as El Paso is concerned the "close season" is over. Villa, that gentleman of uneasy habits, ought to understand it. There is nothing to say that he does and that his thorough appreciation of the fact that the Texas game laws no longer cover him was the reason of to-days non-appearance.

One of the impressive features in connection with insurrecto plans and movements is the energetic way in which the Madero folk will resolve to do some energetic thing and the equally energetic way in two hours refer to do nothing of the sort. This found illustration in Madero's change of mind as to his visit to Mexico City.

The morning and afternoon were devoted to arrangements for the descent—pacific of course, and by the federal invitation—of Bandit Villa upon the capital. Madero was to have started at once and stopping merely to make a "few tranquilizing speeches," as there was room as he could. At the eleventh hour he comes out with a statement. He has changed his mind, altered his plans. He will not start for Mexico City as scheduled.

Now he has retreated to the situation of the day before and cannot say when he will go. He hopes soon, but will not put his finger on a day.

This shift was due to two causes, first the explicit assurance from which these people do not trust each other; and, second, sure word of a plan on the part of Diaz either to kill or capture Madero the moment he came within reach.

Madero—ever polite, ever diplomatic—gave out his explanation in the form of a letter. "It would be indecorous for me to appear in Mexico City while Diaz remains in power."

Madero Is Wise Decision.

While that was in his mouth, what his heart said was: "It would be death for me to appear in Mexico City while Diaz remains in power."

Madero did right and wisely in this reshaping of his plans. Thousands were slain that Diaz might go to his present position. Is it to be supposed that in order to retain it he would balk at the killing of one more?

Who says so or thinks so doesn't know Mexico—doesn't know Diaz. In the death or removal of Madero, the Diaz-Limantour administration believed it would find the kingpin of the revolution, which would then break down. Madero never showed himself so completely a child as when he came to last night's resolution of deferring his meeting with the dangerous Diaz—doubly dangerous now when brought to final bay.

A Mexican likes honor, but he also likes triumph. It is perilous to make choice between the two. He hates disgrace, but most of all he hates defeat, which, in Mexican estimation, is the sublimation of all disgrace. In Mexico—it with the Russian Catherine — they never try conquerors. Success is its own apologist; a victory does not have to be explained.

Should Diaz destroy Madero, no matter how, the waves of a Mexican forgetfulness would roll over it and bury it as to either manner or method within a week.

Ex-War Secretary Reyes, homeward bound from France for various reasons, got off the ship at Havana. By his own word he did so because of Diaz's orders, and will remain in Cuba for the time. He is not with a statement intended to purr down the Madero fur. Madero reads the Reyes statements and smiles ambiguously.

He cannot confess that Reyes stopping at Havana was guilty of the same kind of wisdom which he himself evinced in not making any present visit to Mexico City. Just as there was a secret Diaz order out to kill or capture Madero at the earliest opportunity, so also are there hundreds waiting by Madero's order about Vera Cruz to kill or capture Reyes the moment he sets his foot on Mexican soil.

Men's lives have ever been of small account when gentlemen of position fell down to play thrones. Men's lives were never of less account than here, and now in Mexico, while Madero and Diaz go playing for a presidency—playing, as Bismarck put it, "with cannon balls, these iron dice of destiny."

To-morrow, red and bleeding, the last bull fighting in Juarez will be pulled off. While the bulls are being lanced and the horses disemboweled, Madero will visit the insurrecto wounded in the Juarez hospitals. This is by suggestion of General Viljoen, military advisor of Madero. The recommendation was borne of Viljoen's native genius plus his instinct for the popular.

A wounded Mexican is commonly not much attended to and little sympathized with. Viljoen told Madero, "Now is the time to rivet your popularity with these poor fellows. Go and see them; shake their hands, give them a handful of bills on account of arrears of pay. Putti a thorn from the feet of an Indian and you make him your friend for life. Kindness and justice to those wounded men in this, their hour of pain, will bind them to your uttermost fortunes with loyalty of dogs."

Madero will walk down the wan, pale line of cots in the Juarez hospitals; Viljoen, as his agent of sympathy, will visit with the insurrecto wounded who have been admitted to the El Paso hospitals.

Madero Slips Away.

While Maddero himself has remained in Juarez, his father, mother, sisters and others of his family have slunk in El Paso. No one knew or saw the two towns would blame the latter for that. There were many of the Madero family, I dare not say how many. So many, indeed, that now they have departed for San Antonio, the Sheldon corridors as empty as a church.

The Maderos settled in what is now Texas 250 years ago. When Texas bore itself from Mexico they lost all but a ranch near San Antonio. They remained moneymakers none-the-less. In Mexico they rehabited their fortunes.

During our own civil war they made dubious yet positive millions, trafficking in horses, munitions of war and other contraband goods with the Confederates. The other day Madero's grandfather died, leaving $40,000,000. Madero's father, who to-day left for San Antonio is worth $8,000,000.

Madero himself is rich. Madero's father left $2,000,000—he heard of it last Thursday—within the month in the burning by the Mexican people of a rubber works and cotton mill he owned 400 miles to the south and east of Juarez. In spite of all their losses, however, with the exception of the Terrazas family, perhaps, the Maderos count themselves and are the richest outfit south of the Rio Grande. Terrazas is the Rockefeller; Madero is the Carnegie of Mexico.

Indicating how slovenly is a Mexican when engaged in any sorts of work, there is a gentleman walking about whom the Federals fancy they have executed. Navarro ordered him shot and he was shot. Then his executioners in simple liberality of spirit stuck a listless bayonet through him to make sure. The executioners concluded the executed party played possum until what soldiers had been shooting and bayoneting him had lighted their cigarettes and gone their way. Then he pulled himself together and walked off. He is to-day a long journey from being a dead man, though he be sure he cannot be called as good as new.

REBEL CHIEFS MAY CLASH IN A BATTLE

Gen. Figueroa Anxious to Force the Issue with Madero and His Men.

By HARRY H. DUNN.

MEXICO CITY, May 20.—Fernando Chavez, a special messenger from General Ambrosio Figueroa, rebel chief, under date of the 18th below Cuernavaca, to Madero passed through the outskirts of the city this morning. Chavez admitted that he carried a message which probably would complete the rupture between Figueroa and Madero, but said the message was verbal and he could not make it public.

"Figueroa" he said, "is massing all his forces for an attack on Cuernavaca, where the garrison is now seven hundred men, not to the field guns. I can assure you that Figueroa will not abide by the latest armistice."

Figueroa is rapidly gaining the idea that he can be President, and all his men are confident that they can whip Madero, the Diaz government eliminated. Once their minds, as both Madero and Figueroa have shown that their force is better and stronger than the government army.

Captured by Rebels.

A plan to bring the federal troops north to western Mexico from Guaymas, the famous port, to Manzanillo and thence to Mexico City was frustrated by the capture of Manzanillo by the rebels yesterday. Figueroa plans on entering the city of Mexico contemplate coming in through the old pass from Puebla, over which the Americans came years ago.

Figueroa has about three rapid fire guns from Guatemala and two from a trading steamer. These guns use Mauser ammunition of which Figueroa has plenty. The arrival of these guns will give Figueroa and his men full confidence that they can take Mexico City.

There is a general belief here to-day among the merchants and professional men that Diaz will find some excuse now and not quit at the end of the month as he has promised to do.

Despite the armistice more than two thousand men are marching around this city to-night, according to reports coming in from Figueroa or other bands coming in from Puebla or Vera Cruz.

PATROLMAN CENTRE OF "GANG" ATTACK

Patrolman Edward McGarr of the East Dedham street station was brutally assaulted early today at Harrison avenue and East Dedham street by four men, three of whom escaped. He was taken to the East Dedham street "gang." The policeman was severely beaten about the head and face. After being treated by Police Physician Madden, he was sent home.

Patrolman Wise was trying to arrest John Doian of No. 92 East Dedham street, when he was assailed by three other men. The policeman said Doian grabbed a revolver from his pocket to use as a weapon. McGarr was then struck a rough-and-tumble fight until he was rescued by Patrolmen Fitzgerald and Dunham. Doian managed to be passing in the patrol wagon, but was later locked up charged with drunkenness and assaulting an officer. The other three men escaped.

MORE SCHOOL YARDS.

Mayor Approves $100,000 Item for Land Takings.

Mayor Fitzgerald has approved the vote of the Schoolhouse Commission providing for land takings for school and playground sites amounting to over $100,000. For an addition to the Normal School yard on Huntington avenue, two sites of land, one containing 7,098 feet and the other 19,845 feet will be taken. The cost will be over $50,000. For an addition to the yard of the Harvard Illustrious Chemistry, a parcel of land, No. 53 Harvard street containing 2,210 square feet will be taken. The yard of the Quincy school in the South End will be enlarged by two sites, one on Hudson street and the other on Hudson street.

GIRL STOLE ON "DARE."

Held on Charge of Larceny from Stores in Newton.

Gertrude McDonald, the South Boston girl arrested by the police for obtaining nearly $100 worth of merchandise from Newton stores under false pretenses, and who explained she did it because she would not take a dare, was held in $100 each on two charges of larceny by Judge Kennedy in the Newton Police Court on meeting on Monday. In court the girl went and pleaded guilty to the charges. She told the court in a broken voice that it was the first time she had ever stole anything, and only did it because she was dared to by another girl with whom she came from South Boston in a car ride.

FREDERICK P. VINTON, NOTED ARTIST, DEAD

Bostonian of World Reputation Painted Best Portraits of America's Great Men.

Frederick P. Vinton, who died yesterday at his home at No. 247 Newbury street, was a Boston artist, who enjoyed an international reputation. His pictures have been highly praised by the greatest contemporary painters, and his brush has preserved for us the faces of some of the most New Englanders of a generation ago.

It was Frederick Vinton, who painted Wendell Phillips in such a manner that the portrait is accepted as the best likeness of the great orator, resembling as of the great orator and statesman. His portrait of William Warren, the comedian of the old Boston Museum, is very well known as is his portrait of the late Senator George Frisbie Hoar.

Mr. Vinton was sixty-five years old when he died, and he was in the height of his powers as a portrait painter, as is evidenced by the quality of his recent work. He was an American artist who chose to pursue his profession in his native land, and who found that the United States was capable of appreciating a good artist, even though he did dwell in this country.

Student of Dr. Rimmer.

Mr. Vinton was born in Bangor, Me., in 1846. His boyhood was spent in Chicago, but when he was sixteen years old he returned to Boston. He began his art studies here at the Lowell Institute, and afterward studied with Dr. William Rimmer, and showed so much promise that in 1875 he went to Paris. He attended the atelier of Leon Bonnet and won the approval of that great teacher.

Later he secured admission to the school of Jean Paul Laurens and he exhibited his first picture at the salon in 1877, a study of a young girl leaning against a wall which he called "A Little Bohemian." This picture was bought by Thomas G. Appleton of Boston, who was delighted to find a Bostonian winning his way in Paris. Mr. Appleton was so pleased with the picture that he had Vinton paint his portrait.

Mr. Vinton returned to Boston and secured the studio of William M. Hunt, as early fame as a master who had preceded him, and which was located in Park square until 1890, when the building was torn down.

Portrayed Noted Men.

Among the portraits he painted during the next few years were those of Wendell Phillips, Charles Francis Adams, Judge Otis P. Lord, Professor A. P. Peabody, Levi Parsons, Senator Hoar, William Hayden, General Charles Devens, Dr. Henry J. Bigelow, Judge Chester Bishop Lawrence, former collector of the port A. W. Beard, Francis Peabody and many others.

He was elected an associate of the National Academy in 1882 and academician in 1885. He was a member of the Society of American Artists. He was one of the charter members of the St. Botolph Club and was a member of the Papyrus Club for more than twenty years.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Annie M. Piercy; a sister, Mrs. Lewis P. Bartlett of Lynn, and a brother, George A. Vinton of Chicago.

BOYD TRIAL NEAR END.

Evidence for Defence in, Arguments in Death Case This Week.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 20.—The fifth day of the trial of Frank J. Boyd of Wilmington for the murder of John Potter in Boyd's super house nearly finished the evidence which will be put in by the defence, and it was expected that the arguments will be made the first of next week. A large part of the evidence for the defence was regarding the reputation of Potter, Clara Grimes, a part of the defendant's testimony that about 4 o'clock of the afternoon that she took Potter's brother came to the house for a drink of cider and said that he had got to have his pay or he would "take it out of Frank's hide."

BRUNETTES! HERE'S MAN SEEKING WIFE

Has a Good Home in Yarmouth for a Dark Complexioned Maiden with Some Means.

RIGHT at the very beginning of this story you are pleased to imagine a warning sign ten feet high:

NOTICE!
Nobody is to Read This Except Dark Complected, Unmarried Ladies, from 25 to 30 Years Old, with Some Means, Who Wouldn't Mind Hitching Up with Frank I. Robbins, 33, of Yarmouth, Barnstable County, Mass.

Frank I. Robbins has asked us to do this for him, and inasmuch as Frank has for a long time been sashaying up and down Cape Cod, telling the neighbors nice things about the Boston AMERICAN, and wondering how on earth anybody can get along without it, we propose to see Frank I. Robbins happy for the rest of his born days if there's a dark complected gal, with some means, in this congregation, who wouldn't mind living in Yarmouth.

We know nothing about Mr. Robbins, besides what he tells us, except that he's a natural born booster with more blarney to him than is commonly associated with the Cape Codder. We simply introduce Mr. Robbins to the young ladies. Frank will do the rest for himself.

First we heard of Mr. Robbins, came in the shape of this letter:

Yarmouth, Mass., May 1, 1911.
To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

Dear Sir: Will you please insert a notice in your paper for a few weeks for me, being a constant reader of your paper, which I sometimes travel a great ways to get? I want to say I find it to be the best New England paper in existence. I am doing my best to recommend it to the people of Cape Cod. I feel deeply interested in the paper, and the nice free boom you give away with it. Personally I am giving my books away after I read them, to folks who do not take the AMERICAN, so they may subscribe for the paper direct. I will continue to take your paper for a lifetime, as I like it better than any other printed in Boston.

What I want of you is to print a few lines like this, or you may put it in a better form.

WANTED, A WIFE—I am a nice young man, honest and intelligent, American by birth and 33 years of age; my complexion is light; by occupation I am a farmer and I own some property; I want a girl of good faith, ability and character, who wants a good home and a nice husband.

Now, Mr. Editor, please, if possible, do what you can for me. I will never forget your kindness. I thank you for the past and what you may do for me in the future. With my best wishes for success to your paper, I remain, Ever a True Friend,

FRANK I. ROBBINS.

Quite an amazing letter, in Massachusetts, in this age, eh, it is said, that there is a woman and a half for every man. Here is Frank Robbins of Yarmouth without even 33 per cent. of what belongs to him.

The Sunday editor, a young man from the Charles, who is trying to make sure the letter was genuine. This answer came back:

Boston, Mass., May 12, 1911.
Editor Boston Sunday AMERICAN:

Dear Sir: Yes, I am single. I was glad to hear from you, as it shows you the way of doing an honest business. Would say I give you permission to publish that letter and it was sent to you by me personally.

I would like to correspond with a young girl between twenty-five and thirty years of age, good looking, dark complexion, who has some means. I will answer all correspondence.

Am living always ready and single. I have now concluded to get married if can find a good, nice lady for a wife. I am a farmer and salesman by occupation.

Would kindly thank you for what service you might do for me, and I wish to say you can say to any one that I think your Boston Sunday paper the best New England paper in existence.

Enclosed find photo, a snapshot I had taken on travelling. It is not a good one of me, as I am much better looking.

You can fix it up and advertise in a tasty manner for me, and I wish you to thank you for the interest you have taken in this matter and in this letter. You can introduce your paper, as I wish to get it in every home on Cape Cod, being a native American citizen of old Cape Cod. I remain, ever a true friend,

FRANK I. ROBBINS.

P. S.—Mr. Robbins's photograph is reproduced just as it came to us. It has not been touched up, daubed over, titivated or selfbrinkleyzed one iota.

REDUCE THE TARIFF IS THE PLEA OF HOAR

Senator Speaks at Free Trade League Dinner and Urges Quick Action.

A reduction of the tariff as rapidly as business will permit, with eventual free trade in view, was advocated last night by Senator Roger Sherman Hoar at the annual dinner, of the American Free Trade League at the American House.

"It would be a good idea," said Senator Hoar, "if such leagues as this took for their motto: 'We aim to accomplish something.' By this I mean that we should be practical reformers rather than mere theorists. Let us bring politicians into the league, let members of the league get into politics, and let us present a practical political program.

"All of us believe in free trade. Let us first unite on that. Now let me assert at this point that it would be political suicide for this league to insist on immediate free trade.

"The league will adopt as its object a fair reduction of the tariff, to be made as rapidly as business can stand it, and aiming at eventual free trade, we shall establish ourselves, beyond question, as sane, conservative friends of progress."

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot addressed the meeting and declared:

"I never expect to see our Custom House abolished such are the ridiculously very extravagant and demoralizing expenditures for army and for military and naval outlays.

"The high price exacted for labor has resulted in extraordinary degradation in the habits of life for the great part of our people. The Home Market Club, here in Boston, is a ridiculous body, clinging tenaciously to their belief that our home market is sufficient. The goal of ultimate free trade may never be reached, but progress is highly desirable."

John J. Murphy, Tenement House Commissioner of New York, also spoke.

AEROPLANE FLIGHT ON DORCHESTER DAY

An aeroplane flight for Franklin Field is one of the novel amusements planned by Mayor Fitzgerald for the celebration of Dorchester Day, June 10.

Negotiations have been opened with the officials of the Harvard Aeronautical society, and if an aviator can be found willing to give an exhibition for the $500 which the city will offer, Franklin Field will be used for the first time as aviation ground.

The city has appropriated $2,000 for the celebration and a Citizens' Committee, to have charge of the expenditure of the funds, will be appointed at a meeting to be held at the Blake House on Tuesday evening. Councillor Walter L. Collins, the Dorchester representative in the City Council, will have general charge of the celebration.

The historical exercises will include the reading of an original poem, it is said, that Edward Everett which has just been moved from the Public Garden to Edward Everett square in Dorchester. Dorchester Day will be distributed to the children of the schools in Dorchester. The Harvard Improvement Association will entertain hundreds of children on that date, also. Members of the Association will be thrown open to the public ones and an entertainment and refreshments provided.

For the Meeting House Hill district a band concert will be provided. The Meeting House Hill Improvement Association will hold a series of games and athletic events from six to fifteen, and medals will be given in the afternoon. Baseball games will be held on the Gibson playground for prizes. The Dorchester Improvement Association plans to entertain the children of the district with free moving picture shows and athletic games.

GUY A. HAM OVERCOME.

Overwork Cause of Attorney's Breakdown in Office.

Former Assistant U. S. District Attorney Guy A. Ham was suddenly overcome while in the office of the U. S. District Attorney in Post Office Square building where he was trying to obtain a further postponement of the arraignment of Victor M. Wild, in the case of the charge that he has used the mails in a scheme to defraud. Assistant District Attorney Sullivan assisted Mr. Ham to his office on Milk street and from there he was taken home by a physician. Attorney Harry Ham. He overtaxed himself by court work and is suffering from nervous prostration and will not take up his law practice for two months.

TAFT REFUSES TO BE LURED FROM BEVERLY

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Although some efforts have been made to induce President Taft to establish a Summer White House at Lake Minnetonka, Minn., near Minneapolis, the President is still true to Beverly, Mass.

The first move toward opening the Beverly "Capitol" was made to-night, when Major Archie W. Butt, the President's aide, left for that North Shore town to look over the house and grounds and see if they were in good shape.

Secretary Hilles, private secretary of the President, will go to Beverly next week and arrange for the opening of the Summer executive offices. These arrangements at Beverly indicate that the President feels certain that Congress will adjourn some time next month. Mrs. Taft is improving in health and will be able to go to Beverly soon.

It was Representative Nye of Minnesota who approached the President with a story of the delights of Minnetonka as a Summer place of residence. He said that he would get Congress to appropriate money to pay for a Summer place there. He introduced a bill in the House to that end.

"All right," said the President, "if you get Congress to do it I'll go there." The President didn't speak as though he thought Congress would do it.

French Lost 38 in Battle.

PARIS, May 20.—Official report made to the War Office on the battle between the French soldiers and Moroccan tribesmen on May 15 shows that the French lost thirty-eight killed. Minier's relief expedition is expected to reach Fis May 24.

MORSE'S SENTENCE WILL BE REDUCED

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Belief prevails here that Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, now serving a fifteen-year sentence in the Atlanta Penitentiary, will not be pardoned by President Taft, who will announce his decision next Wednesday, but that Morse probably will receive a commutation of sentence to about one-third of his term. John R. Walsh the Chicago banker, now in the Leavenworth prison, probably will fare better. Walsh will soon be in position to benefit under the parole law and, in view of this prospective early release, the President may determine to pardon him a few months earlier.

$50,000,000 FOR CHINA

Most Important Loan Ever Negotiated in Pekin.

PEKIN, May 20.—The Hukwag loan, for the construction of railroads the provinces of Hunan and Hupei, was signed here to-day by the representatives of the American, British, French and German groups of bankers. Besides proving for the original amount of $30,000,000 provision is made in the agreement for an extra $20,000,000 should that additional sum be needed for the completion of the project. Bankers here say of population that the Hukwag loan is the most important financial transaction ever signed in China. It provides for the construction of 1,200 miles of railroad in Hunan and Hupei and the loan is secure by the revenues of those provinces with in case of default, may be administered by the marine customs.

SCULPTOR FINISHES FITZGERALD BUST

MAYOR FITZGERALD is going the Palm Beach sun one better. Last Winter when he got back from Florida, his friends told him he was pretty well bronzed. That must have set him to thinking. Anyway, wherever the suggestion came from, to-day the Mayor is getting himself into real bronze. And it's quite a lot different from that sun-baking process.

The Mayor has been sculptured. After shining in various forms of art, not the least of which was his very facility with "sweet Adeline" and "My Hero," the Mayor has at last submitted himself to the sculptor, and yesterday the bust was finished.

Last Saturday, Mayor Fitzgerald had a plaster cast made of his countenance, chin, defiant cheeks, Cupid's bow lips and all. To-day the stands completed.

The sculptor who is on the mayoralty job is Hector L. Morse of Boston, an artist who has made a name for himself in his line of work. He has a new process for taking casts. Material that is almost liquid is laid upon the face, being permitted to sink into the mesh for upwards of forty minutes. Then is a slightly hardened state this material is removed.

Mayor Fitzgerald has been through the process. Patient as Job, he sat through the forty minutes. He came out of the ordeal smiling. That's why his cast looks so much like him. There's only one player in this cast—that's the mayor. The sitting over, the artist took the hardened material and poured another lot of material in it. This was allowed to "set." The result was a good countenance of the Mayor. This was then bronzed to an ancient tone.

Mr. Morse has done some excellent work, among his busts being some of prominent society people.

Erie Canal Breaks.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 20.—A break in the Erie canal that will take a month to repair, occurred at Hushnell's Basin, about eight miles east of this city. The canal wall on the tow-path side where the break occurred is exceptionally high, and the rush of water following the break swept away an embankment forty feet in height and about 125 feet wide. A wing of a house in the path of the water was carried off, and a man in the house narrowly escaped injury, perhaps death.

WALTHAM MAN, ILL, ENDS LIFE IN RIVER

The body of Thomas Kirby was found floating in the Charles River near the Newton street bridge, at Waltham, yesterday. Two boys, Thomas Cunneyan and Marshall McDonald, made the discovery. After Cunneyan had swum out and made fast a rope to the body, it was dragged ashore. Medical Examiner West pronounces the death a case of suicide.

The finding of Kirby's body marks almost the final chapter of a dreary tragedy of disease and death. Kirby was an iron molder. With his wife he lived at No. 12 Taylor street, Waltham. When Kirby was about twenty-five years old he contracted tuberculosis. He stuck to his work, but the disease gained rapidly. Presently his wife began to cough. Then, hoping to stave off the end, Kirby became an inmate of the Middleboro Sanitarium. His condition became worse, and at the same time his wife was becoming weaker and weaker.

Last Tuesday Kirby came home to the bedside of his sick wife. For the greater part of the day they were together. In the evening he left. He had not been seen since until his body was found yesterday.

Award Holy Cross Honors.

WORCESTER, May 20.—Speakers for the Holy Cross Commencement exercises June 22 are announced to-day by President Thomas E. Murphy, S. J., as follows: Valedictorian, John F. Reilly Mittinaague; salutatorian, James A. Cretty, Worcester; analysts, Edmund F. Curran, Worcester, and Harry L. Durkin, Peoria, Ill.

ACCUSED CAMORRIST CLAIMS CONSPIRACY

VITERBO, May 20.—Gaetano Amedio, who according to Giacomo Ascritturo, aided Tomasso De Angelis in the actual murder of Gennaro Cuocolo and Maria Cutinelli Chioccolo, held the centre of the stage at the Camorra trial to-day.

Amedio was interrogated as to Ascritturo's story. He admitted that he has led the life of a professional thief and has served time in prisons, but denied that he had a hand in the killing of Cuocolo and his wife, "the beautiful Sorrentina." Amedio has had the reputation of being one of the cleverest rogues in Naples, and has a long criminal record.

In his denials Amedio referred to the Cuocolo murders as "an aristocratic crime."

"I never had to do with such," said he humbly. "I am a man in a lowly station of life, and it was never my good fortune to associate with persons of high standing in any respect whatever—even to be their murderers."

Amedio denounced Ascritturo. He declared Ascritturo with a master cunning had arranged a conspiracy to send him (Amedio) and De Angelis to prison to save Luigi Alfano and the other Camorrists accused.

Amedio and De Angelis were first brought into the net of the carbineers in March of 1910 when they were detected in Naples by a mysterious woman who declared that she had knowledge of their connection with the Cuocolo murders. Father Otto Vittossi, the Camorrist priest, came forward and said the two men had confessed the crime to him. Ascritturo then admitted to the police that De Angelis and Amedio had also confessed to him.

KITCHEN "CENTRAL" KEEPS POT BOILING

WESTMINSTER, May 20.—This little mountain town is claiming the most unique telephone exchange in Massachusetts, if not in the United States, for the residents believe there is not another town that can boast of having a central in the family kitchen.

Residents say that the service could not be better if regular operators sat at the boards all day waiting for the drops to fall, for Mrs. Sarah E. Drury, the telephone agent, is able to attend to the wants of the subscribers as she goes about her household duties without any trouble.

The exchange was installed in the kitchen of the Drury home on Main street in 1904, and at once thirty-five subscribers were obtained. Since then the number has been increasing daily, until now there are ninety-two subscribers.

Mrs. Drury has passed her seventieth year, yet she is ever alert to answer the call of a subscriber, and one benefit they say they enjoy is that there is no "rubbering" in the line, for Mrs. Drury has always made it a point to mind her own business.

GIRL IN HOSPITAL, POLICE SEEK MAN

Illegal Treatment Charged, but Patient Will Reveal No Names to Police.

Miss Nina Dutton, a Lynn stenographer who came to that city two months ago from Lawrence, is in Lynn City Hospital recovering from what the hospital surgeons and the police say is illegal medical treatment.

The girl has steadfastly refused to tell the name of the man whom they are seeking in connection with the case.

"I love him. He is a splendid man. He is a good friend to me. I will not tell his name. Please do not try to find out who he is," is all the girl will answer to their urgings.

Miss Dutton is of quiet, refined demeanor and is unanimously declared by the hospital staff one of the best-appearing girls who ever was brought to the hospital from any cause, illegal or otherwise.

She has been employed as stenographer in a leather factory office and living at No. 30 Warren street. She is twenty-two years old. Last Monday she was removed to the hospital from her lodgings at request of the people of the house. When the cause of her illness was discovered the police were informed.

Finding that she came recently from Lawrence, the Lynn police advised the Lawrence police in the matter. As result Mrs. Hedwig Hummer of Park street, Lawrence, has been arrested on the charge of administering the illegal treatment to Miss Dutton and held in $2,000 bail till May 27.

The Lawrence police found that Miss Dutton is an orphan. She was graduated from Lawrence High School a few years ago. Her father died two years ago, her mother having died previously. The girl studied stenography and then came to Lynn to work. It is said by the police that the man in the case lives in Lynn and is in business there.

The police will try again to-day to induce the girl to give the man's name.

MOTHER PAUL TO SPEAK.

Head of Catholic Mission in Africa at Conference To-day.

Mother Paul, head of the Catholic Mission School in Uganda, Africa, will address the members of the Propagation of the Faith, in the Conference Room of the Cathedral this afternoon. She will give a short talk on the work accomplished by the sisters in Africa, the hardships which they endured and many interesting incidents.

Mother Paul has been stationed at the mission for eight years, during which time she has seen but three Americans. Colonel Roosevelt being the second. The ex-president spent an entire day at the mission, delighting the sisters by narratives of the busy world from which they had been long estranged.

Several of the nearby convents have been visited by Mother Paul and Sister Mary Leonard, who accompanies her. Mother Paul will not return to Africa, but will continue her missionary work in the South.

QUEEN MARY SNUBS MRS. AVA W. ASTOR

Latter's Deep Bow to Royalty Goes Unacknowledged to Joy of Anti-American Court.

LONDON, May 20.—Queen Mary loses no opportunity to let some American women here know that they do not enjoy the favor from her that King Edward and Queen Alexandra bestowed on them.

When Mrs. Ava Willing Astor was driving through Hyde Park her motor car was halted while Queen Mary passed near Stanhope Gate. Mrs. Astor bowed as low as she could, being seated, of course. Those who saw it say the Queen did no more than drop her eyelids in acknowledgment of Mrs. Astor's salutation.

The contrast between the costumes of the two women was most striking. Mrs. Astor was a perfect picture of modern "smartness," the Queen wore one of the sedate British gowns of which she seems so proud. Mrs. Astor's black satin gown clung to her so closely that one wondered how she contrived to sit down without something happening. The neck of her corsage was cut very low, revealing a dazzling white throat. Her black hat was enormously large, perhaps its size explained the fact that she was alone in the automobile. Her dress was opened at the foot to allow freer movement in walking.

Receiving as she was in the landolilie, Mrs. Astor presented a startling but fascinating picture. She wore a gown attired in a conventional bodice of gray cashmere, made with long, tight sleeves and finishing in a point back and front over the hips. Full of twenty-five years ago. Her skirt, pleated closely at the waist, was in full folds, but was small and of an old-fashioned type, trimmed with three feathers, each one side, and a velvet bow on the other.

Mrs. Astor created a sensation at Lady Savile's fancy dress dinner by coming in a beautiful harem costume.

CHICAGO DRIVEN TO DRINK.

Three Million Gallons of Beer Consumed During Hot Wave.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Three million gallons of beer have been consumed by Chicagoans during the excessive heat of the last three days. This is nearly one-half a gallon daily for every man, woman and child in the city. About one-half of the population does not drink beer, so it is inclined for the other half to use four quarts a day each.

There are more than 7,000 saloons in the city. Ordinarily the consumption of beer is three barrels a day to each saloon. This indicates that the average saloon in the city consumes about 675,000 gallons of beer a day. With the hot wave, however, there has been a big increase, and the total sale has been more than 20,000 barrels a day.

Figuring thirty-two gallons to the barrel, it amounts to about 1,000,000 gallons daily that has gone down the throats of Chicago beer drinkers the last few days.

CADETS IN PARADE.

Annual Pageant of School Soldier Held on May 26.

The annual parade of the Boston school cadets will take place on May 26 and will conclude with brigade review on Boston Common. In the Boston cadets there are now sixty-three companies and about 1,500 staff officers. The cadets are organized into five regiments and the colonels of the five regiments will act as brigade commanders at various intervals on the route. The parade will start at 9:30 a. m. from Commendon street and Columbus avenue and pass through Park square, Boylston, Tremont, Bromfield, Washington, School and Beacon streets to the Common.

IS SHOT BY ACCIDENT.

Roxbury Man in Critical Condition at City Hospital.

Charles W. Pickard, thirty years old, of No. 620 Shawmut avenue, Roxbury, accidentally shot himself in the right breast with a revolver at his home. His parents, who rushed to his side, found him lying unconscious in a pool of blood. Dr. W. N. Nutting was called, found Pickard bleeding internally and ordered his removal to the City Hospital, where his name was placed on the dangerous list.

2-BATTLESHIP STANDARD.

Democrats in House Will Not Change Their Attitude.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Padgett of Tennessee, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, announced to-day that the Democrats will not deviate from the two-battleship standard.

Bessie Chapman Gives Up Husband

HENRY CLAY PIERCE TELLS AMAZING STORY OF HIS SON'S DEVOTION TO BOSTON BEAUTY

BESSIE CHAPMAN PIERCE, WHO CONSENTS TO HUSBAND'S DIVORCE

Surprising Story Told in Court Suit by the Rich Father of Young Roy Pierce.

HENRY CLAY PIERCE, famous as the head of one of the Standard Oil subsidiary companies and many times a millionaire, told an amazing story of his son Roy's extraordinary life and views of matrimony in court at Newburg, N. Y., yesterday. Twice the young man attempted to commit suicide, his father said, when $25,000 was refused to his actress bride. Roy Pierce married the Boston beauty, Bessie Chapman, whose romantic career has thrilled Europe and America alike. Effort is now being made to have the marriage annulled.

Theron Pierce, a brother of Roy and a number of alienists, including Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, Dr. Charles L. Dana and Dr. William H. Draper, also testified, although aware that her fate as coupled with that of the millionaire son lay in the balance here, Mrs. Pierce did not appear. Instead she contented herself with issuing a brief statement in New York.

Demanded $25,000 a Year.

"My son," said the father, "told me in December that he had met Mrs. Chapman in Paris in 1908 and in this country later. He said he had married her knowing her previous life and character. In fact he said a woman of her type was more agreeable to him.

"The question is," said my son, "How much will you give me to make up to her for what she is losing by marrying me?"

"Then my son told me that she was receiving $25,000 from another source which she would lose if she accepted my son and she did not feel that it was well to let the money slip away from her until she was certain of as much through him.

"I told my son she was dragging him down and pointed out the necessity of his giving her up. He told me that he was satisfied. He said he wanted her and demanded at least $25,000 a year be settled upon her as his wife.

"I refused absolutely to have anything to do with it and then he told me that she had said she could get $500 a week by returning to the stage and using the name of Pierce and the facts of her marriage. He said she would do this unless a change took place.

Smoked Sixty Cigarettes Daily.

"At that time Roy was taking from thirty-five to forty drinks a day and was smoking from forty to sixty cigarettes daily. In the evening after I had told him what my decision was, that there would be absolutely no concession to this woman, my son was found unconscious in his room by the effects of an overdose of morphine.

"We sent for physicians and after a great effort and a short time he was revived. This was about the situation until January 9 of this year. Then he renewed the subject of money.

"At that time he declared to me that he must have the money and must know my decision in two hours. I refused to give the money and Roy said that he could not live without her and that she would not live with him unless he gave her money freely.

"He did not come down to dinner that evening and at 9 o'clock he was found unconscious. Physicians worked over him the entire night before they were able to bring him to consciousness."

The distressing physical and mental condition under which Roy Pierce suffered at the time of his separation from the beautiful Bessie was described by Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, to whose sanitarium he was removed. Young Pierce, Dr. MacDonald stated, positively was mentally incapable of contracting marriage.

Secret Settlement Reached.

When she was seventeen years old she went on the stage, her beauty and personal charm winning her easily a trial. She started with a minor role in stock at the Castle Square Theatre. In the old Globe Theatre she played in "The Parisian Romance," and was cast as Rosalind in "As You Like It."

It was not long ago that she gained the soubriquet of "Lady Betty" on account of her magnetic personality and her power to attract friends, especially among men.

She rose to become a member of Richard Mansfield's company. She came back to Boston with this company and, during this engagement, met T. Irvin Chapman, son of one of Boston's oldest and proudest families. This was in 1894.

T. Irvin Chapman was the grandson of the late Mayor Jonathan Chapman, who was known as Boston's most dignified executive. The Chapmans are connected with the Gordon Dexters, the Daltons of Beacon street and other exclusive families.

Conservative Back Bay society was astounded when it became known that T. Irvin Chapman had married "Lady Betty" Faulkner. The marriage took place at Cohasset on January 4, 1895. The couple went to live with the bride's parents in apartments at the corner of Dartmouth street and Columbus avenue.

Baby Comes to Brighton Home.

Back Bay society absolutely refused to accept "Lady Betty," the beautiful actress. Her personal charms amounted to naught in face of the lack of the lineage that the ultra-conservatives thought indispensable to social recognition.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman moved to Walnut Hill, later they had rooms at the home of Dr. Thomas on Clifford street.

On May 6 a son was born to "Lady Betty," a rosy babe, destined to be heir to a share in the short life as "the beautiful Chapman baby."

Not even the arrival of the child tended to heal the bitterness and some of the husband's relatives against the actress-wife. Gradually reports came that Chapman and his wife were drifting apart.

FIVE YACHTS ENTER FOR BERMUDA RACE

Annual Contest This Year Will Start From Boston for the First Time.

The greatest number of yachts ever entered in an ocean race have entered in the Boston-Bermuda race that starts off City Point June 3, five entries have already been received by the regatta committee of the Boston Yacht Club and Hollis Burgess and Thomas Fleming Day, representing the Royal St. George Yacht Club of Bermuda, and one more is in sight as the time for closing the entries has been extended until Monday.

The yachts already entered are the schooner Vagrant, owned by Harold S. Vanderbilt of the New York Yacht Club and winner of the New York to Bermuda race last year; the schooner Iris, owned by Francis M. Whitehouse of the Manchester Yacht Club; the schooner Sunrise, owned by P. L. Carmichael of New York; the schooner Enchantress, owned by Seward V. Weed of the Corinthian Yacht Club, and the keel cutter Chispa, owned by Captain Ernest A. Smith of Bermuda.

The entry of the Chispa is the first from Bermuda that has ever taken part in an ocean race of this sort, and is more than likely that the pilot boat Swastika, owned by A. E. Fox of St. George's, Bermuda, will also enter.

Much interest is centred about this race from the fact that for years it has been a national yachting event, starting out of New York, and for the first time will start from City Point.

The club has offered a $500 challenge cup, and the Royal St. George Club of Bermuda has given a $500 cup. The finish will be at St. David's Head, Bermuda. Many New York and Boston yachtsmen intend to be at the finish. The Bermuda yachtsmen have planned for a big celebration at the completion of the race, and, all in all, it will be the one big event of the season in yacht racing circles.

AVIATORS THRILL YALE.

McCurdy and Beachey Do Sensational Feats in Air.

YALE FIELD, NEW HAVEN, May 20.—Aviators McCurdy and Beachey of the Glen Curtiss flock to-day gave another exhibition at Yale Field under the auspices of the Yale Aero Club. About 10,000 persons were present in the enclosure and double that number saw the aviation stunts from hills and piers. Some of the feats were dropping imitation bombs from the machines on the model of a man-of-war, sending wireless messages and taking several Yale under-graduates and society girls up for exhibition trips. McCurdy surprised the spectators by disappearing completely from sight in the clouds and unexpectedly reappearing.

YALE OPENS CAMPAIGN.

Elis Hope to Draw Western Men to New Haven.

CHICAGO, May 20.—A campaign to attract Western high school graduates to Yale was started at a business meeting of Associated Western Yale Clubs, held at the Lasalle Hotel to-day. President Hadley of Yale arrived in Chicago to-day to take part in the sessions of the association. He was met at the station by a hundred Yale graduates.

PROTEST SHIFT OF O'REILLY MEMORIAL

Friends and Admirers of Poet Tell Governor Plan Is Affront to Bard's Memory.

Friends of the late John Boyle O'Reilly will present strong arguments to Governor Foss at a meeting to be held at noon to-morrow against the proposed extension of Boylston street in a straight line across the Fenway, because it will mutilate a beautiful park feature and involve the removal of the John Boyle O'Reilly monument.

Sylvester Baxter, secretary and treasurer of the Metropolitan Improvement League, is opposed to the extension of the street in this way, and declares that the O'Reilly monument was "designed expressly for that location and would not be effective for any other site that could be substituted." He adds that "there is no call for the so-called public improvement in question."

The following petition, with many names attached, will be presented to the Governor:

"We, the undersigned, are friends and admirers of the late John Boyle O'Reilly. No man born in Boston or New England ever loved them with deeper affection than did this adopted son. In his estimation of human worth he knew no distinction of race, nationality, color or creed. A true Catholic, his tribute to the Pilgrims of Plymouth was one of the noblest of his poems. Our sense of his worth deepens as time passes.

"This monument to his memory, at the Fenway and Boylston street, is one of Boston's finest works of art. It was located with great care; it was designed for that particular place. No other site available could be found. It would be an affront to O'Reilly's memory to remove it in the interest of a real estate enterprise which, in fact, could only be harmed, not helped, by the completion and beautification of the way and by expelling an exceedingly beautiful public monument from the neighborhood.

"For these reasons we urge Your Excellency to veto the bill for the extension of Boylston street as a public highway across the Fens."

ALUMNAE TO DINE.

St. Patrick's Parochial School-mates in Annual Reunion.

The final meeting of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the sixth annual banquet of the Alumnae of St. Patrick's Parochial School will be held in the music room of the parochial residence in Magazine street at 10 a. m. to-day.

The banquet is to be held at Young's Hotel to-morrow evening. Among the invited guests are several of the clergymen connected with St. Patrick Church. Mrs. Dennis F. Sughrue, president of the alumnae, will act as toastmaster. She also heads the committee of arrangements and is assisted by Miss Catherine Donovan.

$5,000 DIAMOND THEFT.

Former Boston Widow Is Robbed in Salt Lake City Hotel.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 20.—Mrs. J. C. Robinson, a Chicago society woman, was robbed of $5,000 of diamonds at the New Grand Hotel here. The looters opened her trunk with a pass key. Mrs. Robinson is said to be the widow of J. C. Robinson, shoe manufacturer of Boston.

MRS. OLE BULL'S BELIEF IN MYSTIC HINDU FAITH IS SHOWN BY HER LETTERS

STARTLING revelations of the life in Studio House, the Cambridge home of Mrs. Ole Bull, widow of the celebrated violinist, during the latter years of her remarkable career will be made in letters which will be introduced this week in the Probate Court at Alfred, Me., by Attorney Ralph S. Bartlett of Boston, counsel for Mrs. Ole Bull Vaughan of Cambridge, daughter of Mrs. Bull, who is contesting the latter's will.

The letters number thousands. Hundreds of them were sent to Mrs. Bull from Hindu priests and sisters in a monastery in India in which Mrs. Bull was interested. The contestants of the will, who are represented by Lawyer Bartlett and Attorney Sherman L. Whipple of Boston, charge that the Hindu Swami, or priests, and their converts received a vast fortune from Mrs. Bull. Numerous letters acknowledge receipts for drafts, the least of which was said to be for a hundred pounds sterling.

Surrounded by Occult Leaders.

One allegation in the case is that Mrs. Bull surrounded herself with Hindus, Japanese and Chinese—artists and exponents of the occult of many nations.

It is also alleged that both Mrs. Bull in the making of her will and her daughter, Mrs. Vaughan, were the victims of a conspiracy; that the daughter was held in Norway during the period that a supposed agent of a Hindu organization was in Cambridge with the dying mother.

It has already been brought out that Miss Margaret E. Noble, who is known in India among followers of a mystic cult as Sister Nivedita, disappeared from this country suddenly in March, after the will contest was brought, sailing from New York for Calcutta under a fictitious name.

The sums given by Mrs. Bull to the Hindus aggregate several hundred thousand dollars, it is stated. She is said to have given a Swami as much as $30,000 at one time. To Dr. Jagadis Chunder Bose, president of the Presidency College in Calcutta, Mrs. Bull left in her will the sum of $20,000.

Trial Resumed Tomorrow.

The trial is to be resumed tomorrow at Alfred, Maine. The afternoon will probably be given over to the reading of a sketch of her own life written by Mrs. Bull. This will be read by Attorney Bartlett, who has been intimately acquainted with the Bull family for many years as legal adviser.

The letters which are to be introduced in the case are exceedingly interesting. The AMERICAN to-day prints some of the most interesting of these. Those to her daughter and Mrs. Abbie Shapleigh show that at one time she regarded both with great love. It is the theory that as Mrs. Bull became more deeply imbued with the Hindu mysticism, she became possessed of an idea that those who had been her best friends had a malign influence over herself. Taken in chronological order, the letters seem to bear out this theory.

Mrs. Bull, as is shown in one of the subjoined letters, became "Saint Sara" in the Hindu cult, and she is so addressed in numerous letters. The members of the cult addressed her as Mother. The "Uncle Joe" in the letters is Joseph Thorpe of Cambridge, Mrs. Bull's brother, and husband of a daughter of the poet Longfellow. Swami Vevekananda was a priest who first came to America in 1893. He was entertained by Mrs. Bull at her home. Saradananda is another Hindu priest.

The letters follow:

Letter from Mrs. Bull to Mrs. Shapleigh Expressing Views on Maternity:

Srinagar, India, Sept. 25, 1898.

My dear Abbie—

Your letters, with the account of the Hardanger trip I am glad to receive and I can appreciate what Mr. Lund's qualities have been to Olea and yourselves, recalling how much they were to me.

The change that has come to all in dear Edwina's life in the unseen and release from the seen will make the sacredness, beauty and goodness of God's providence felt through all the pain and anguish, physical and mental. Olea is blessed among women to have received, cherished and given her child, so beloved, back again to the Lord, trusting wholly in his mercy and his love.

That you and Amelia have been blessed in sharing Olea's life, its sorrows and sacred joys to the full I also know, and that you as gladly share the external, material part Joseph will have placed at Olea's disposal the latter, and she will arrange with you both as she desires, agreeably to you.

Having welcomed your influence and desired it to be a directing one with mother and father because I believed in you in my childhood; having trusted my baby and child to you and at the times when my call seemed to the united interest of the family outside, I am grateful never to have faltered in my trust and to have given my loyal support, morally and materially in so far as it lay in my power, has been a privilege and always will be for the sake of those dear to me.

That you made mother's interests and happiness paramount to those of birth and marriage, make this privilege the deeper on my part and not to be changed. I rejoice that to mother, father and Olea your personal love and qualities have filled the place that nature called me to fill. It would have been simpler and easier had each of us found our especial vocation in our birth environment. But there has been sufficient love and service to consecrate this suffering and difficulties incurred, since this was not the case.

The years have succeeded each other in which I kept the hope that not only to a mission to bring about unity and respectability would be added a transmutation of qualities on my part that could render personal nearness acceptable to all.

I, too, with Ole, can say I know God is good and merciful and leave all with him. Since hearing that you all return home, we are falling back into the original plan of the journey.

At times I can turn my face homeward and anticipate it with hope.

Again, knowing that all help and good can be as they have been secured in the most merciful way to you all outside my presence; remembering nearness of person with failure to render help and comfort and its dangerous attendant strain, I long for rest. With Joseph's kindly assistance, all anxiety is spared yourselves regarding material interests vested in me. And so, as you say, to live from day to day is God's way for all of us at present and with him rests all.

May I prove as ready to serve the real calls of need with his help as I have been to those dear to me.

And my courage, cheer, health, with the constant nearness and blessing of the unseen and seen rest with divine love above and about and enfold you round.

Affectionately,
SARA.

P. S.—Give my love to Aunt Vina, Lois, to Alice and John, and Will when you write him. May Thanksgiving be a time of good to you all.

From Mrs. Bull, writing from Belu Howrah, India, to Mrs. Shapleigh, received New York, Jan. 14, 1899:

We are to spend a full week in Bombay—a Jain gentleman to whom we had letters is arranging for us in a delightful way all our sightseeing; and the outline for the week sounds most attractive. We have with us for a week Dr. and Mrs. Mills of Chicago, mental healers. They are friends of Swami Vivekananda, and I also knew them outside him. They are simple hearted good people and very successful in their special work, he having left the practice of medicine for it.

I am very well indeed and hope that my nerves are going to serve me well henceforth. I had a month of some physical suffering, but I felt then that it was good for me, that I should be stronger for it. So it seems to have proved. I know Swami Saradananda would wish his greetings to you.

The Jackson Sanatorium,
Dansville, N. Y., Jan. 20, 1894.

It is at this moment an unspeakable comfort to me that you can be what I am not to Olea. I want you to know how grateful I am that she finds this help in you and that you wish to and do ever give it to her.

Will you please learn what flowers Olea would like to have and order them of Moultinan. I would like some growing blossoms, lilies of the valley and 10 or 12 dozen violets, like tulips or hyacinths in pots or pans that she can have sent to her home. If she would like some music I shall be glad to have it arranged for. Lovingly,

AUNT SALLY

BOSTONIANS LOSE TO TRUST COMPANY

Two hundred and seven thousand, eight hundred and twenty-five dollars will probably be paid by Mrs. Maria A. Evans, widow of Robert D. Evans, and five other Bostonians because of an opinion handed down in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in favor of the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York.

The trust company sued for balances due on stock subscriptions in the American Silk Company, as follows: Mrs. Maria A. Evans, $74,233; Albert S. Bigelow, $74,223; Stephen M. Weld, $37,111.67; Theophilus Parsons, $11,133.50; Russell S. Codman, $7422.33, and Dr. William M. Conant, $3711.17.

The defendants denied liability on the ground that the H. W. Bennett Company of New York, which was promoting the enterprise in connection with a syndicate, exceeded its authority in raising a loan for $843,050 from the Knickerbocker Trust Company. Their contention was sustained by the late Judge Lowell in the United States Circuit Court, but denied yesterday in the Court of Appeals.

JESSE POMEROY'S LETTERS TO HIS MOTHER

His Detailed Story of His Forty Years in Prison Given Exclusively to the Sunday AMERICAN

MISSIVES PRINTED JUST AS WRITTEN GIVE GLIMPSES OF UNREVEALED PRISON LIFE

Life Story of Most Remarkable Prisoner in America Depicted by Convict Who, in His Solitary Cell, Has Changed from a Brutal, Ignorant Boy to a Well-Educated Man by His Constant Reading and Study

JESSE POMEROY, serving a life sentence of solitary confinement in the Charlestown State Prison for the murder of two children when he was a boy of fourteen, has written a remarkable series of letters to his mother within the nearly forty years that he has been shut out from the world and even from his fellow prisoners.

The letters constitute one of the most absorbing human documents ever written. The Sunday AMERICAN will print the most interesting of these letters so that the world may get a glimpse of prison life as depicted by the pen of a prisoner who by hard study became familiar with half a dozen languages and from an ignorant boy became an educated man through his own efforts in his cell.

The first of the letters that follow was written more than two years after young Pomeroy's arrest. He starts in to keep a diary and he finds his mother's letters "Goldenda." When he is seventeen he hopes that the next seventeen years will be an improvement on those that have passed. Then he takes up Latin.

The youth in prison resolves to live a good life and not "do any more wicked acts." The monotony of prison life causes him to write, "It is the same thing every day."

Finding Latin to write about he tells his mother with great detail how he had a tooth pulled and his toenails removed. He finds that he "is buried alive, though not dead yet." Then he tries to escape, but fails. It is decided to send him to Concord prison.

The letters are printed just as Pomeroy wrote them, with repetitions that necessarily would creep into them eliminated. He spells his name "Pomroy" instead of "Pomeroy," as other members of the family spell it.

JESSE POMEROY WHEN HE ENTERED CHARLESTOWN PRISON IN 1871

JESSE POMEROY

THE efforts of his mother to [illegible] the condition of her son, Jesse Pomeroy, serving a life sentence in solitary confinement in the [illegible] Prison, have kindled widespread interest [illegible] prisoner. Sent to prison as a boy of twelve, [illegible] ed almost forty years behind iron bars and thick w[illegible]roy has educated himself so that he reads readily [illegible] nguages besides English, and possesses a deep know[illegible]nearly everything that may be learned in books.

Pomeroy has always written [illegible] his mother all these years, and these letters are great human documents that tell the story of the prisoner, supposed to be without hope, but who nevertheless hopes on as long as life lasts, for freedom. The Sunday AMERICAN will print in a number of instalments the most interesting of these letters, just as they were written in the Life Prisoner's solitary cell. The first instalment appears to-day, and others of even a more interesting character are to follow.

KEEPS HIS PROMISE TO WRITE TO HIS MOTHER

I

CHARLESTOWN, Nov. 12, '76.

My Dear Mother

When you and Charles were in to see me last September, I promised you I would write about the middle of the month; I now have the pleasure of keeping that promise. I am well, and comfortable, and glad to see by your letter that you and Charles are the same. I have received all of your letters, and like them very much, especially the one I received this morning. The fruit which you send me every Saturday I enjoy (as you may well suppose) famously, and I have received those magazines which you have sent from time to time. I am very glad to see by your letters that you and Charles have plenty to do, but am sorry to hear his pay has been cut down; hope it will not be so much longer. Give him my love. Tell him I like the notes very much and to reply to his question as to what I "would like for a Thanksgiving Dinner" tell him I would like just what he has. I did intend to write you and him very long letters, but you see I am limited to one sheet of paper and cannot do as I would like to, but I hope to make this letter interesting to you.

I think of you every day and read your letters over and over again. I see by them that you often try to imagine what I am doing during the day. A short sketch of my daily life here will, I think, interest you. I get up in the morning at about six o'clock; after washing I make the bed and then, if it is light enough to see, I go to work it is light in here at about ¼ past 6, and dark at 8, I make 16 brushes every day, and make them well, I am told. We have breakfast here at about ½ past 7. I seldom eat it for I don't like it. Breakfast is always either meat or fish hash. I keep on working through the morning and by dinner time have made 16 of my brushes. I am growing more expert every day and by the time you come in next month I may be able to finish them all in the morning.

I like to make brushes; it is quite fascinating. When at work I do not allow any gloomy thoughts to come over me, but always think of you or I whistle to myself some times. Well, in this manner, by working or thinking or whistling, the morning passes away and afternoon arrives. If I had the space I would give in detail what sort of food I have for dinner, but I haven't, so must be content to say it is all one could expect. I have enough of it to eat, and always have a fine appetite for them. After dining I go to work and finish my brushes; then I wash myself and sweep the floor; then the rest of the day is my own, some times I read all the time, sometimes I walk up and down the floor. If I ever feel downhearted I read your letters, they always make me cheerful. If I want to amuse myself, I think of something funny, I have supper at sunset, it is always bread and something they say is coffee. I usually write a little in my diary. If I had the space I would give a few extracts from it. I always go to bed early, for I think it makes me feel better to do so. I sleep about five or six hours every night. The days are as you may imagine, something long to me, but when I have my books I shall study some and that will make them seem shorter. I see by your letters that you are going to send me some pictures. I shall like that very much. I will mention here what I forgot to in its proper place that Sunday I have to myself. I always receive a letter from you then. Saturday, I always wash my pillow case and towels, also the floor of my room. It is very still up here, so very silent that I could almost hear a pin drop.

Perhaps a few statistics of my brushes may interest you. They are brought down to last Wednesday. I have been at work 47 days and have made 545 brushes. I have not been idle a single day except Sundays since the 16th of Sept. Last Wednesday I commenced working on a new sort of brush, the difference between them and those I made while you were in is that they were flat backed while these new ones are oval backed and have 125 holes to each frame. I make sixteen of them and do it easily. I shall be very glad to see you and brother Charles next month. I think he is growing quite manley since I last saw him. If Emma will come I shall be delighted to see her. I hope you will please excuse the shortness of my letter. Don't think I am forgetting you, Oh! no, I never will and don't fret about me. Remember I am well and comfortable, have plenty to eat, to do and to read. I send you my very best love and respects to all our friends. Take good care of your health, and tell Charles to do the same, and before I forget I will thank you for your letters, they are real God sends to me. And now good bye for this time, write me as often as you can and try and bear up under this burden as you have so far. God bless you all from your affectionate son. Jesse

P. S.—I shall like that scarf which you will send. It is very kind in you to think of it.

PRISONER TELLS HOW HE PASSES DAY IN PRISON

II.

FIFTH CHRISTMAS AWAY

Charlestown, Feb. 11, 1877.

Mrs. R. A. Pomroy, 94 Poplar street, Boston—Dear Mother:

It is just three months since I wrote you and promised to write you again when allowed. I believe I told you last November how the day passes with me, and so can have but little to say on that subject. The only difference between what it was then and is now, is that I do not get through my work as early as I used to. My brushes have been changed several times since you were in last Dec. As usual I get up at day light and go to work and get through at three in the afternoon. Gloomy thoughts are at a discount up here. I don't allow any of them to come near me, it is such a bother to think them. I think of you every day especially when at work and when I go to bed at night. I always pray for you and Charles when I go to bed and for myself also. After I finish work I read my books and library books and study. After supper I write in my diary, then I exercise some and go to bed.

The library books here are, magazines (bound volumes) and books of travel, history and the like. There are not many of fiction and in my opinion that is as it should be. I think I will give you a few extracts from my diary, they will interest you, I think. Here is the first entry:

Oct. 4, 1876. "Made thirteen brushes, changed sheet and pillow case. I slept well last night as usual, thought frequently of home and wondered what they were doing there, God bless them all."

Oct. 16. "After finishing my work I read some of Mother's letters. I like them very much. Received a magazine."

Oct. 21. "Made thirteen brushes; read. Mr. Woods took my measure. I am 5 ft. 8 in. high, have grown six inches in three years."

I do not think there is anything that will interest you until that for Nov. 23. "I washed the floor of my room and my towels. Read some and studied. It was very kind for mother to send me the books, received fruit."

Nov. 29. "This is my birthday, am seventeen years old. I hope the next seventeen will not be so wicked as those have been. God helping me, I will try to make myself better than I now am. Read and studied."

Dec. 25. "This is Christmas day, the fifth that I have been absent from home. I hope they at home will have a good time. I like the dinner they sent me."

Dec. 29. "Mother and Bro. with Mrs. Foley came to see me. I was very glad to see them and they were glad to see me."

Jan 1st, 1877. "This is the first day of a new year. I shall earnestly strive to turn over a new leaf and to keep it free from all stains. I hope they at home a happy New Year, received a letter from Mother to-day."

Jan 12 "I received a very nice letter from mother to-day, with two magazines. Received fruit and writing book and soap and pen."

Jan 18 "Made 3½ brushes, these are the same as those I made from the 6th to the 11th of last Dec. The Chaplin came to see me to-day, I was very glad to see him."

From this date my diary is partly English and partly Latin and this leads me to tell you before I forget that I am doing very well with my Latin. I have learned to the 200th page and by next May shall have finished the Grammar part and commence to learn about the words. You brought me the right kind of books. I should like to know how you did it. It is just the same with your letter which I received this morning.

I hoped to take you by surprise by telling you you could send me a dinner the 22nd of the month but no! it seems you knew all about it. I will give the last entry in my diary and then stop for I would like to write just a line to Charles.

Feb 10 "I did not make any brushes to-day not having any stock. Washed the floor of my room and my towels and pillow case. Thought of the letter I should write tomorrow, read and studied as usual. Received fruit."

I hope you will please excuse the shortness of this letter and the fact that it is all about myself, for you know you asked it and I thought the best way to do was to give the random extracts from my diary. You may have it at the end of the year I send you my love and respects to friends. Do not fret about me. I am well and comfortable. Try and bear up under this and remember that God will see the right prevail at last. I look forward to seeing you with great pleasure.

your affectionate son, Jesse

Dear Brother

I will write you just a few lines to-day, it is I think two or three years since I last wrote you. I thank you for your notes. I think they are very good ones especially the one about our school fellows. It makes me quite sad to think that Howard is dead, he was such a fine boy. Pray take care of Mother, dont let her worry for anything. I wish I could help you. Write me all the news you can, but when you are tired do not write and believe me your affectionate brother, Jesse.

POMEROY ASKS MOTHER TO PRAY FOR HER SON

III

POMEROY ON HORACE.

Charlestown, May 13th, 1877.

Dear Mother.

I now have the pleasure of writing you a few lines, knowing that you will expect them, and that it will also give you pleasure to receive them. I am at present well, but I had a touch of Indigestion about the first of this month. I felt very weak, and had those headaches which I used to have so much at home, but (as I said before) I am quite well and expect that you are the same. I have received your letters every week, and I need not tell you I like them very much. I am very glad indeed that you and Charles have been converted. Do not neglect to pray for me for I need all your prayers. I hope that I may be brought to see all the sins of my life, and that I may sincerely repent of them. I have resolved to try to live with God's help, a good life, and not to do any more wicked acts. I liked those papers and tracts which you have sent me from time to time, Harper's Magazine, I also received. It seems to me that each number is better than its predecessor. The plant which you sent me, I have placed in one of my windows at the suggestion of Mr. Woods, for I was somewhat puzzled to know what to do with it. It is growing finely, and I have a great deal of pleasure in taking care of it. I hope you will not think I am growing conceited if I talk as much of myself. The only excuse I can have is, in your last letter you asked me to do so. I work all day as usual, I told you (I think some time ago) that I had finished learning that Grammar of mine, and I am very glad it is so. I have been such a long time learning it. All I am doing now is learning the Latin words. I memorize about one hundred every day. It is very tiresome work, but it will be done for it is one of the penalties of learning a language. The books which you sent me I like very much. I don't see how you managed to get me the right ones. But you always did know what I needed. I read a little of them every day so that I may not forget what I have already learned. I think Chess is better than Draw, and Draw is better than Caesar. Though the last (Caesar) is a very nice book. I still keep a diary though I have not much of importance to write in it. I shall keep a better one next year. I shall write it in Latin and use that book you sent me some time ago for the making of an English Latin Dictionary. I have concluded not to make one because if I did I should have to refer to it every other minute, and it would be very inconvenient to carry around with me. Besides I started out to learn Latin, and if I learned only the Grammatical parts and left the words alone how could I say I had learned Latin? On the whole I think the best place for the Dic. is in my head. I shall always know where that is and besides it will not be at all inconvenient to carry around with me.

But about that diary, I shall write down in it everything that happens to me, shall keep a list of the books I read and what I think of them and in fact it will be just as though I was keeping one at home without its variety of incidents. I am looking forward to the time when I may see you, with the greatest pleasure. The time is very slow in passing and I sometimes think June 20th will never arrive. But patience wins the day, you know. Pray write me all the news you can. Tell me how you are doing at home. I hope you have plenty of work and are comfortable. I should like to step in some one of these days and see how things are at home. I have plenty of reading and some of the books I get from the library are very interesting, especially the bound volumes of Harper's Magazine. This morning Mr. Woods gave me nine or ten copies of the Christian Union that was very kind of [illegible] present it. They are the papers I have had for many months. These summer days are very long to me, and so I am working. I often think of you and Charles and try to imagine what you are doing. I received fruit from you every week and I enjoy it very much especially the Strawberries you sent me yesterday. I have not done any work since Thursday because I had no wire. As you may imagine I have enjoyed myself the last two days. I have spent the time by reading and studying. To-morrow I shall go to work again. Tell brother Charles that I intended to write him a few lines but as my space is almost used up I could not write him anything this time. The next time I write I will endeavor to give him a whole page. I like his notes and hope he is doing well at home. Tell him to write as often as he can. I hope you will excuse this bad writing of mine my pencil is not a very good one. I lost the one you sent me and would like another. I send you my love and respects to all our friends. I hope they are well. I was glad to see Emma and Mrs. Morpeth last March. Give them my respects. I must now bid you good bye until next June when I hope to see you and Charles. Write and take care of your health and believe me your affectionate son

J. H. Pomroy.

POMEROY REMEMBERS THOSE HE LEFT BEHIND

WHAT SHALL I WRITE TO MOTHER? ASKS PRISONER

IV

SAME THING EVERY DAY

Charlestown, August 12, 1877

Dear Mother: As I sit here at my table chewing the end of my lead pencil, the thought comes to me (as indeed, I might say it came yesterday and the day before) the thought comes I say "What shall I write to mother?" What is there in my life here that will interest her?" and as I think of it I am compelled to say "I don't believe there is anything that will interest her, for I have previously touched on every subject of interest, enough to be sure, I have two or three items for her." I say this that you may know what style of life I live here. It is the same thing every day it never changes: I know what I do today I shall do every day. It is the same from day to day and month to month. The news for you, which I have spoken of above is 1st The doctor pulled one of my teeth, last Thursday, it has been hollow since 1875 but I never had any trouble with it, until last Nov. when it began to ache. Now I happened to remember that when I was at Westboro, I had a tooth which was hollow but not loose, and the way by which it got loose was by not meddling with it, by eating my food on the side opposite to the sore tooth, but then that is only my opinion. By doing as I have mentioned the tooth became loose about two weeks ago. I tried to get a piece of string around it but could not because it was so far back in my head, so I sent for the doctor. I went up into the Hospital sat down in a chair and before I could say "Jack Robinson" the doctor pulled it out, not Jack Robinson, but the tooth you know. The 24 item is My toes are beginning to get sore again. The doctor said he would try to heal them, before he would take the nails off again. The doctor is a very nice man though I presume it is no news to you. I am still at work making brushes. I get through work about 3 o'clock if I work diligently. I am yet at work over my dictionary. Have learned about 3,000 words. It is very tiresome learning them. I have thought of a plan by which I hope to lessen the labor of committing to memory of the words. The plan is to learn each of all the parts of speech separately, the nouns first, the adjectives next and so through the eight parts of speech. Heretofore I have learned the words just as they are in my Dict. which is arraigned alphabetically and I find that the verbs were the hardest to learn and the other parts of speech were the easiest. Of course, you see the advantage of separating them and how much easier it will be for me to get. Of those books which you sent me, I like them most of all. I have read almost 16 pages of Caesar, and a half dozen of those of poetry. Horace is very hard, but I am inclined to [illegible] I like been a very easy man. I often read yours and Charlie's letters, over and those written by you and your confession, and speaking of that, leads me of my own salvation. Now I really believe that the spirit of God has descended upon me. I believe that he has heard your prayers, and through his infinite mercy and goodness has been graciously pleased to open my eyes to a sense of my wickedness and unworthiness, and he has led me to accept Jesus as my Savior. The letter which Mr. Babbitt wrote me was of great use to me; it showed me by its references to His Word that the Savior stands ready to accept those who would freely come to Him and those who tried to live in God's way would have everlasting life and joy and peace hereafter. No matter what their previous life may have been I never before understood the real character of the Savior in which Jesus made for me, but it is all clear now, and I have often scolded myself for not seeing it before. I am you know, a person who is slow to give outward demonstration of what is passing within me. I am called cold, selfish and indifferent, but those who know me know that this is not true. I have learned by the events of the last few years to keep a strict control over myself instead of giving vent to the sympathy of a cold and unchristian world by exposing myself to it. The book which you sent me to day I have received but have not had time to read it yet. I get very little time from the library. The one I have to-day is "Timboktits Curse," an excellent book. I hope you are busy and are getting along well at home. Send me a letter soon, if one I had is worn out. There is nothing else that I want, just the one you send me is excellent. My pant does not grow much and you do not know why, for I water it three times a day and often stir the earth up with it so that it may not harden, but it seems to do no good. Tell me if you know what is the trouble. I do not know what you will do with letters as I am badly written and beatles there is no room in them.

I think of you every day and am looking forward to the time when you will come to see me for social pleasure. But the time is so long in passing. I have often felt as if I would be mistaken in my reckoning. Write me once in a while or send it when I am out of doors. I have not lost my interest in affairs, I hope you will be able to go out into the country, or down to Dorchester, these warm days. Be sure and take care of your health. I do not think of anything else to write except a short note to brother Charles, so I will now bid you good bye for the present and hope to meet you next Sept. if the Lord be willing. Think of me always as, your affectionate son, Jesse.

TOE NAILS PULLED OUT

CHARLESTOWN, Oct. 28, 1877.

Dear Mother:

I think you will be surprised in receive a letter from me under this date, but the reason for which you will soon learn. My toes you will remember became sore some three or four months ago, and the doctor proceeded to pull out the nails. This morning or rather noon, I should say he pulled out one of them (the other being sore yet) so that now I shall have no further trouble with them. As I cannot think of anything else to write about and because I think you will be interested I will doe-rike to you what I recollect of the operation. The doctor came down to my cell and called for me. Then we went up into the hospital and I sat down on a chair until he was ready to commence operation, which was in about ten minutes. During that time the table on which I was to lay was set. About this time the Warden came into the room. He spoke to me saying, "I hear you are going to have your nails pulled out." When all was ready I was strapped down to the table and then I took a sponge to my mouth and was telling me to draw a full breath. You know how either is made, so I will not say anything about that. I was then obliged to do my duty and though I tried to escape and failed still I am of the same opinion. I am under [illegible] and therefore justified to make test attempt to escape. I hope you will not fret about me, you know I am in God's hands, and he will do with me as he sees fit. I shall not attempt to escape for a time because I cannot get away. I have no more than I am any one else you more than I am, and I would not give you pain by such an attempt. I have kept a short [illegible] Diary which I promised you you can have when you come next month. I look forward to that visit with eagerness, and hope it will be longer than the last. I will close now as I wish to write a few lines to Charles. Pray for me dear mother and don't worry. I wish you a happy new year. Your affectionate son,

JESSE TO MOTHER.

Dear Brother.

I write a few lines to thank you for your letter. Am glad you are well and hope your wife is soon. Seems but a short time since you and I were playing ball on State's field, but now you are married and almost 20. I am sorry that you have to work so hard Charlie and you know how about me. Glad you like it well, gladly I would help you if I could, but I am in the care of another. Be sure that you take care of mother and do not allow yourself to be fretting about me. Give my love to your wife and write to me when you have time. Also your wife; don't forget to pray for me. From your brother, J. H. P.

To be Continued in Next Sunday's AMERICAN.

In the next instalment of Jesse Pomeroy's letters, written from the Concord State Prison, he tells about his reading habits, his studies and says that he will not try to escape again—because it would be useless.

The prisoner delves into his Latin and studies his French dictionary and grammar until he can read both Latin and French as readily as he can English. He is already beginning to talk of the next language he shall conquer and sends his mother about some books in Spanish.

It is natural that he thinks a great deal of his boyhood days of freedom and longs for another of mother's pies. One would hardly expect a prisoner to write about the weather, but he does. It is Spring, and no prison walls are so thick that they can shut out the sweet breath of the warm air and the merry songs of the joyous birds.

reason. Of course, I do not want his dictionary, if there is a better one at less price, but you need not pay more than $1.50 for it. I have not been working lumber since last Monday because the contractor cannot here blocks for me. The latter having burst so I have had a very long holiday. I congratulate you and his Charles on your birthdays which come this month. I send you this as a birthday present. I would it were something better. Give my love to all our friends especially to Mr Babbitt for his kind letter which I received this morning and tell him I thank him for taking so much trouble on my account and hope he will write to me often if he can possible. I regret that my space is so used up that cannot write him but I will write to him one day about that. Be last Thursday eve. I thought it was the freight busses of the railroad it lit my room so much that I could not sleep it was so bright. I saw some sparks fly around out in the yard. I can remember when Holmes factory was built though it is more than 3 years ago as you know whether the house we used to live in at Lexington St was burned. Do you know when I am going up to the new prison I hope it will be a better place than this though I have tried to bear this the best I could I have always tried to do my duty and though I tried to escape and failed still I am of the same opinion. I am under [illegible] and therefore justified to make test attempt to escape. I hope you will not fret about me; you know I am in God's hands, and he will do with me as he sees fit. I shall not attempt to escape for a time because I cannot get away. I have no more than I am any one else you more than I and I would not give you pain by such an attempt. I have kept a short [illegible] Diary which I promised you you can have when you come next month. I look forward to that visit with eagerness, and hope it will be longer than the last. I will close now as I wish to write a few lines to Charles. Pray for me dear mother and don't worry. I wish you a happy new year. Your affectionate son,

Dear Brother.

I write a few lines to thank you for your letter. Am glad you are well and hope your wife is soon. Seems but a short time since you and I were playing ball on State's field, but now you are married and almost 20. I am sorry that you have to work so hard Charlie and you know how about me. Glad you like it well, gladly I would help you if I could, but I am in the care of another. Be sure that you take care of mother and do not allow yourself to be fretting about me. Give my love to your wife and write to me when you have time. Also your wife; don't forget to pray for me. From your brother, J. H. P.

Comment Amuses the Warden at Prison.

TOE NAILS PULLED OUT

CHARLESTOWN, Oct. 28, 1877.

Dear Mother:

I think you will be surprised in receive a letter from me under this date, but the reason for which you will soon learn. My toes you will remember became sore some three or four months ago, and the doctor proceeded to pull out the nails. This morning or rather noon, I should say he pulled out one of them (the other being sore yet) so that now I shall have no further trouble with them. As I cannot think of anything else to write about and because I think you will be interested I will doe-rike to you what I recollect of the operation. The doctor came down to my cell and called for me. Then we went up into the hospital and I sat down on a chair until he was ready to commence operation, which was in about ten minutes. During that time the table on which I was to lay was set. About this time the Warden came into the room. He spoke to me saying, "I hear you are going to have your nails pulled out." When all was ready I was strapped down to the table and then I took a sponge to my mouth and was telling me to draw a full breath. You know how either is made, so I will not say anything about that. I was then obliged to do my duty and though I tried to escape and failed still I am of the same opinion. I am under [illegible] and therefore justified to make test attempt to escape. I hope you will not fret about me; you know I am in God's hands, and he will do with me as he sees fit. I shall not attempt to escape for a time because I cannot get away. # "WORLD IN BOSTON" RECEIPTS $130,000

Great Missionary Exhibition Closes Interesting Month In Mechanics Building.

"The World in Boston," the great missionary exposition, closed last night in Mechanics Building. It cost in the neighborhood of $191,000. The receipts will amount to $130,000. $60,000 will be paid back to 166 guarantors, among them United States Senator Crane, Bishop Lawrence, Rev. Dillon Bronson, presiding elder of the Methodist Church in Boston; Rev. P. H. Ritterhouse, bishop elect of the Episcopal Church in Pennsylvania; Robert Treat Paine, John D. Rockefeller and Robert H. Gardiner.

"The World in Boston" has made a profound impression upon this city," said Dr Samuel B. Capen, president of the exposition, last night. "Missionary work, methods of missionaries and the various problems surrounding them have been brought to light.

"I believe that more volunteers will be forthcoming for foreign fields. All through this country the exposition has been talked about. The Christian church has sung with a will and has been taught how to help on the great work. We have been doing the past four weeks."

The Rev. W. E. Gardner, head of the stewards, who is in charge of the mission ary work in New England for the missionary society of the Episcopal Church, thought that the exposition as a whole had done much to interest all classes in the work of missions.

"It is one of the best efforts up to date to familiarize people with what the Christian churches are doing in the missionary field," he said.

The work of the exposition will be carried on by what is known as a "Follow Up Committee," which will have quarters in room 806, Congregational Building. Those who have taken part in the exposition will be expected to meet regularly with the committee at stated intervals during the year, and the duty of continuing the interest of missionary work among the young and old people of the churches will be pursued by those who were formerly stewards in the exposition.

It is estimated that within a year, two hundred persons will give themselves to the cause of missionary work. The continuation committee is taking steps to promote the exposition some time in the Fall in Chicago.

OLD SOLDIERS CELEBRATE.

Fiftieth Anniversary for the First Massachusetts Volunteers.

To-day marks the fiftieth anniversary week of the First Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. Memorial services for the departed comrades will be held in Faneuil Hall. John C. Bates will deliver the eulogy. Thursday, the fiftieth anniversary of the date of enlistment, will be the closing day of the festivities.

The First Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry was called into service by the Governor of the (Vil) War. There was scarcely a single of any importance in which the regiment did not participate. Of 1,530 who marched to the front in 1861, only 825 now survive.

ELIOT ON COLLECTIVISM.

President Emeritus of Harvard Points Out Evils.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, in his "Collectivists' Remedy," said: "Social service evils of to-day are the results of tremendous revolutions which have taken place in the great industries of the world. Industrial and political liberty have been produced, and in turn have produced the inevitable result of liberty, freedom to evil. Though there are enormous fortunes in this country, there is also astonishing distribution of property, and the collectivists have seen that where there is freedom there will be riches and evil in private hands. These rights of property are going to be supported by the growing intelligent agricultural population of the country."

SUFFRAGE CLUBS IN EVERY BOSTON WARD

That's What Women Plan to Show Men They Can Use Practical Political Methods.

WHEN the May Festival of the New England Woman's Suffrage Association is held in the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club on Thursday evening next there will be an informal discussion among members living in this city of the work that has been done to organize the local Suffrage party on ward and precinct lines. Mrs. Charles Park, who is secretary of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government, is enthusiastic over what has been accomplished, and she is one of the leaders in executing a plan which will show the capability of women in organizing for effective political work. Men politicians are beginning to take keen interest in the movement on the part of Boston women to show that they are competent to take a practical, efficient part in Boston municipal affairs. Already committees have been organized in several wards. The ward chairmen to date are: Mrs. Stanley McCormick, 1 and 2; Mrs. Mary Shea in Ward 3, Mrs. Patrick Shea in Ward 7, Mrs. John Jack in Ward 23, and there will be a ward organization formed in Wards 11 and 12 next week. Until the Suffragettes propose to have an efficient organization in each of the twenty-five wards in Boston committees will give all kinds of campaign information to those of their sex interested in the "votes for women" crusade. There will be ward proceedings with meetings following. Mrs. Park said regarding what is being done:

"Similar work has made headway in New York, Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania and Ohio. We are going to organize in Boston on the most conservative principles, and will take advantage of legitimate methods of work in political parties whereby we can inspire greater interest in our movement. Many prominent men in Boston women have shown a decided interest already. Through ward committees we can get closer to the people in every part of Boston."

Miss Paris, a Radcliffe graduate, and began to take an interest in woman suffrage when an undergraduate.

The May Festival of the New England Woman Suffrage Association will be presided over by Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, and presidents of several State associations will be present. Among the Boston speakers announced are Mrs. Lionel Marks (Josephine Preston Peabody) and Mrs. Elizabeth Upham Yates. The business meeting of the New England association will be held in Park Street Church at 10 o'clock next Friday morning.

O'BUQUE'S AFTER FISH.

Arch Men Folk See Visions of Big Spread Later on.

Friends of John O'Buque perked up quite a bit last night when he told them he was leaving. They seemed to be glad. It isn't very pleasant to have your friends glad that you are about it. But in the case there was a reason. They had visions of express packages of shiny bey-yu tee-full fish. You see, John had told them he was going on a fishing trip to the Grand Lake stream, and in addition there was a complimentary vision of a big spread when the angler came back. Anyhow, there will be a whopping big salmon that will stand being cried up by everybody. Mr. O'Buque is the proprietor of the Arch Inn. He left for Grand Lake last night and will be gone ten days.

Cannot Be Sunk as Monitor Puritan Was Recently.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—After an examination of the seven-year hulk of the monitor Puritan, sank by high explosives in the mouth of the James River, and now in dry dock at Norfolk, naval experts have reported to Secretary Meyer that owing to the great advancement in marine construction since the Puritan was built, heavier and broader armor belts and stronger bulkheads in the modern battleships of the navy would have been able successfully to withstand the attack to which the Puritan yielded.

FAST ATHLETES FOR ODD FELLOWS' PICNIC

For several months the committee in charge of the arrangements for the sixth annual field day of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of the Massachusetts jurisdiction has been perfecting plans for the event. This year the field day is to be held within the city limits, at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, and the date is set for Saturday, July 15. The many subordinate lodges, Rebekah lodges and encampments of Greater Boston are showing a lively interest in the occasion, stimulated by a friendly rivalry to win the silver shields offered as prizes to the lodges disposing of the greatest number of tickets for the field day.

Under the direction of President John E. Crook and the members of the executive board, Leonard B. Berry of Newton Lodge, No. 192; E. F. Rowe of Miriam Rebekah Lodge, No. 101; E. F. Storrs of Hesbah Lodge, No. 83; William S. Lamerton of Security Lodge, No. 175; William F. Howes of Commercial Lodge, No. 97; Joseph M. Lipp of Orient Lodge, No. 10; A. F. Beardsley of Warren Lodge, No. 18; Harry Horne of Mt. Pleasant Lodge, No. 170; Hor Van Wart of Newton Lodge, No. 95, and Phineas L. Woods of Crystal Bay Lodge, No. 93, a program of decided interest to the Odd Fellows and their friends has been arranged for the day.

In addition to the band concert, dancing, field sports and games open to Odd Fellows and Rebekahs only, the exemplification of the degree of chivalry and the performance of the "Midway" there will be several open athletic events under the sanction of the N. E. A. A. U., in which many of the "stars" of the athletic world will participate. Fred Hedlund, the Harvard-Dartmouth Marathoner, the winner of the 1911 Marathon, are expected to be among the contestants.

FIGHT FOR SCIMITAR OF CAPT. PERCIVAL

Court Asked to Settle Ownership of Weapon Worn by Hero of "Old Ironsides."

Miss Sarah Minns of Louisburg square, has filed a bill in equity to restrain Chester A. Reed of Dedham from disposing of a scimitar given to Captain John Percival of the frigate Constitution during the war of 1812 by a sultan of Zanzibar. The treasure has been handed down from generation to generation, sold and given away. The case is unique in the history of Massachusetts courts.

Captain Percival was in command of "Old Ironsides" and had performed great services for his country. On a visit to Zanzibar he received the sword as a gift.

At the time there was a rule in the navy no officer should accept a gift from a foreign country. Consequently the sword was given over to the custody of Captain Percival's private secretary, Benjamin Stevens, who was inter president of a large insurance company in Boston.

The sword fell into the hands of Percival Gardner, a grandson by adoption of Captain Percival, a member of Roosevelt's famous Rough Riders, and at present United States consul at Nice, whose name does not appear. This lawyer died, and the sword was left to his wife. When she died, Charles H. Swan, another lawyer, settled up the estate and sold some of the property. It was at this time Miss Minns claims to have purchased the sword.

GIVES UP A FRENCH COUNT FOR A PLAIN BRITISH TEA MAN

But Miss Moeller Would Have Had to Pay One $500,000; Gets Fortune with Other.

WEDDING GIFT OF $100,000

Mrs. Hinckley Tells Story of a Good Looking Thief, and Mrs. Postley Explains.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS May 20.—Miss Nellie Victoria Moeller, daughter of Paul Moeller, European manager of the New York Life Insurance Company, has turned down a titled Frenchman for an English tea man.

Last January Mrs. Moeller, who is a leader of foreign society in Paris, announced with pomp and ceremony the engagement of her eldest daughter, Nellie, to Count De Hourait, the scion of a house whose annals are lost in the twilight of history. The Count has a ramshackle chateau which will take a long purse to restore and, incidentally, he has plenty of debts, but said he was willing to work only he did not know how to do anything.

The tea man, for whom Miss Moeller broke off her engagement with the Count, owns the Ceylon Tea Room in Paris, tea plantations in Ceylon and the "Nimrod," Sir Edward Shackleton's famous yacht. Had Miss Moeller married a title last Tuesday instead of the tea man she would have had to give the Count half a million dollars of dowry; the tea man gave her a wedding present of $100,000.

Honeymoon in Ceylon.

Captain Valentine Webster, for such is his name, is taking his bride to the "spicy breezes" of Ceylon, for she is just recovering from a severe fit of illness. Mrs. Webster is the author of a book of poems. Of that bevy of beauties which included Miss Mainston Drake, Miss Marcely Singer, Miss Hilton and Miss Redding, Miss Moeller is the first to wed.

"I don't care so long as the thief did not get my rope of pearls," said Mrs. Arthur J. Hinckley of Paris and Chicago to an admiring crowd at the Hotel Majestic.

Mrs. Hinckley, who just returned from London to Paris, was narrating the partially unsuccessful attempt made to rob her and her mother at Euston Station, London. Mrs. Hinckley was formerly Miss Josephine Beach of Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Beach and consequently a cousin of the late Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. Her mother is now Mrs. James Tuthill Wood of New York. Mrs. Hinckley is the widow of the New York yachtsman, who married her four years ago when he was more than four times her age.

The occasion of her outburst over the rope of pearls was because it was a wedding present. Mrs. Hinckley was seeing her mother off for America when the attempt to rob them was made. A good-looking thief, who gave the name of Benjamin to the police, was making off with two dressing cases, a cloak and five hundred dollars. Mrs. Wood recovered her belongings, but would have lost the Mauretania had she not paid $160 for carrying herself and her traps from London to Queenstown by special mail train.

Mrs. Hinckley Philosophical.

"Had the thief taken all I should still have my yacht," said Mrs. Hinckley, in sheer delight over the adventure, for Mr. Hinckley left his widow the "Iolanthe," from whose mast floats her flag in the Bay of Monaco. Since it has become known that Mrs. Hinckley has inherited the yacht and a large fortune, she has been pestered by the usual corps of titled fortune hunters, although the regulation period of her mourning has not yet expired.

Close friends of Mrs. Clarence Postley have been informed that the last of the long series of marriages in her family is about to be celebrated here. So great is her relief at finally ending these numerous rematchings that she could not conceal longer the forthcoming marriage of her son, Stirling Postley, who so recently divorced Miss Ethel Cook of San Francisco.

This somewhat premature statement was called fourth at the recent wedding of Elise Postley to Guernsey Curran. One of the guests remarked that Rose Ambler Curran, Guernsey Curran, Ethel Cook and Elise Postley, Guernsey Curran's first wife, were now all remarried and sympathized with Stirling Postley as the only one not remarried.

Mrs. Postley Winds up the Story.

"Your sympathy is misplaced," replied Mrs. Clarence Postley, "for my son is already engaged and will soon be married."

Mrs. Postley would not state who the fiancee is, but one may surmise that she is Miss Kelly of New York, who went to Rome, Florence and Monte Carlo with the Postleys the past Winter.

To remove a recurrence of the cause of her divorce, Ethel Cook, namely, his being "too much in the house," Mrs. Postley has purchased a $200,000 interest for Stirling in the firm of Hutton & Co. She receives a report that Stirling, who is stopping at the Plaza Hotel, New York, goes regularly to his office. He is coming to Paris in June to make preparations for his next marriage.

Frenchmen are kicking because the laws of the country were, at least apparently, set aside in the case of Guernsey Curran and Elise Postley's marriage. In France a divorced woman is not allowed to marry for eleven months after her decree. Another kick is had because the Mayor of the Sixteenth District went to the house of Mrs. Postley to perform the ceremony. This was unheard of in France.

A certificate of the American custom from Consul-General Mason got over the eleven months' delay, and the fine Italian hand of the family lawyer, Arthur K. Valois, got the Mayor to perform the ceremony at the house. Guernsey and Mrs. Curran are back again in Paris, not having gone beyond Versailles for their honeymoon.

IDA RUBENSTEIN, WHO HAS WON LOVE OF D'ANNUNZIO

D'Annunzio Loses His Heart Again

This Time to Ida Rubenstein, Russian Singer, but Husband and Tenor Bar His Way.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, May 20.—It really looks as though Gabriele D'Annunzio had found time even in the stress of his dramatic enterprises and business misadventures for another "grand passion." At any rate it is current here that the Italian poet, whose love affairs have been the talk of Europe for years, has now so thoroughly lost his head over Ida Rubenstein, the beautiful Russian dancer who plays the title role in his new play next week, that it is said he is quite ready to marry her.

She accordingly began divorce proceedings, but her wealthy Russian husband, M. Gorovitz, suddenly stopped them.

Recently, as is an open secret, Mlle. Rubenstein fell in love with Baklanoff, the Russian baritone. It is believed that she will follow Baklanoff to America next season and Signor D'Annunzio is likely to follow in their wake in order to prevent their marriage.

By the by, the Russian season at the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt afforded another sensation on Thursday night. Baklanoff was to sing "The Demon," and the theatre was crowded. The curtain was supposed to rise at 8.30, but nothing happened. At 9 the audience began to clamor, and finally at 10 o'clock the announcement was made that no performance would be given and the money would be returned at the door.

The side boxes at the left were filled with Americans, including Bradley Martin. This is the Russian Opera Company which Mr. Russell, of the Boston Opera House, had engaged for America.

The final explanation of the fiasco was that the conductor had taken away the score of the opera because another man had been put over his head, so the orchestra was unable to play. Alexander Kahn, agent of the Boston Opera House, went to the police and asked them to try to get back the score in time for the performance, but they refused to interfere.

KITCHENER'S RECOGNITION.

Will Command Expeditionary Army After Coronation.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, May 20.—Lord Kitchener is being discussed at every club and probably at every tea table just now. He has his enemies, especially among the men of the old school at the War Office, but in service circles it is generally agreed that King George did well in giving him supreme command of all the military arrangements in connection with the Coronation.

It is now understood in service circles that after the imperial conference Lord Kitchener will be given the command of Great Britain's Expeditionary Army, and will be responsible for the organization whereby the overseas units could join that army in case of war. This task would take Lord Kitchener several years, and it is suggested that oversea regiments might in turn be taken to England, South Africa or India for training with regular troops.

KAISER A MATCHMAKER.

Gossip Says He Wants Matrimonial Alliance with England.

LONDON, May 20.—Court gossips have been busy recently marrying the young German princess to the Prince of Wales, who is only two years her junior. During his visit this week the Kaiser proposed a visit of the Prince of Wales to Germany for a month or more in the Autumn. The Kaiser is said to be particularly desirous that the British heir-apparent should make a closer acquaintance of the young German princess, and there is a possibility that his invitation will be accepted.

Charming, vivacious Victoria Louise has certainly made an impression on the British imagination. With the crowds that watched the royal progress about the streets this week she was easily the most popular member of the German royal party. The Kaiser was elaborately guarded by Scotland Yard officials from the moment he landed until his departure. At the Victoria unveiling a small army of detectives guarded all approaches to the royal visitors.

NEW TREATY A STEP TO AN IDEAL WORLD

Stead Sees in Proposed American Arbitration Plan a Realization of 15 Years Labor.

FIRST PROPOSED IT IN 1896

Convention Embodies the Proposition He Has Made Ever Since First Hague Tribunal.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, May 20.—When I read the draft of the proposed general American arbitration treaty I felt like singing "Nunc dimittis." It is indeed seldom that any one sees within so brief a term as fifteen years the realization of an ideal which, when it was first propounded, seemed utterly beyond the bounds of practical politics.

When in 1896 I published my pamphlet "Always Arbitrate Before You Fight," my plea was distasteful alike to arbitrationists and militarists. I stuck to it, and at the first Hague Conference I almost got involved in a duel because of my hot insistence upon my favorite specific. That specific was not arbitration in the strictly judicial sense of the term, by which cases are sent before the tribunal and both disputants pledge themselves to accept the award whatever it may be. My contention, in which I stood almost alone in those days, was that no State would ever arbitrate matters of life or death if all appeal to the sword was barred in advance as a preliminary condition of calling in the services of an arbitral tribunal; whereas if the rights of appealing to the sword was reserved, anything might be sent to arbitration with tolerable certainty that in 999 cases of 1,000 the right of appeal would never be exercised.

When the first Hague Conference was in making I proclaimed that a clause relating to an international commission of inquiry which might be held to inquire into question of fact without any preliminary pledge to accept the conclusions of the report was one vital article of convention.

Almost Provoked a Duel.

These commissions, I pointed out, would be arbitral tribunals all but in name, and it was the vehemence of my protest against Roumania's demand to exempt the questions of honor and vital interest from the scope of these commissions which brought me to the edge of a duel with the Roumanian delegate. Roumania, however, triumphed and the honor and vital interest were inserted.

I had the satisfaction during the Russo-Japanese question of seeing my contention justified, for the suspension of the honor and vital interest clause had to be agreed [illegible]

So obstinate, however, were the hidebound pedants of international diplomacy that at the second Hague Conference that convention came up for revision and I could not induce the English and American delegates to excuse the limiting clause notwithstanding the experience of the Dogger Bank incident. Hence my surprise and delight at finding in the American arbitration draft tardy, but complete recognition of the principle for which I had contended almost single handed for fifteen years.

That principle is not that which is embodied in the clause sending all disputes to arbitration, which now as before demands prior pledges to accept the award whatever it may be. It is the principle embodied in the clause providing that questions which one or the other or both disputants regard as unjudicable by arbitration shall be referred to the commission whose decision, unless it be a decision in favor of sending the dispute to arbitration, shall not be binding upon either party. That is the vital clause which makes the new treaty so valuable.

Vital Question at Issue.

No matter what general treaty you may make declaring all questions shall be sent to arbitration, no really vital questions will ever be sent to arbitration unless both parties are free to appeal to the sword in the last extremity.

That right is secured by the clause declaring that the report of the commission shall not of necessity be accepted in advance. As a matter of fact, in nine cases out of ten the report of such commission would have the effect of an arbitral award, for here indeed would be cases in which any disputant would dare to draw the sword after such commission on full examination had decided against the justice of its claim. Reference to commission is also valuable because it does not require prior consent of the Senate.

London has been absorbed all the week by the visit of the German Emperor and his family. The weather has been delightful and London and the Thames Valley, through which the royal imperial party drove to Windsor, are now at their best—horse chestnuts, laburnum and hawthorn in full bloom.

There is no more fascinating man living than the Kaiser when he is in good humor and when he sets himself to exercise his charm. I note as an instance of the supersession of the railroad by the automobile, that this year for the first time the King and his imperial guests preferred the road to the rail when they visited Windsor.

DRINKS SOUR MILK; NOW 105.

"Eat What You Like," Says Bulgarian Peasant.

BERLIN, May 20.—Although the natural span of human life—said to be three score and ten—possibly is quite long enough to satisfy most men, the peasants of Bulgaria, who live very largely on sour milk, reach a much greater age. Edison, who believes that he has discovered a way of prolonging human life to 150 years, and who has decided to live as long himself, will no doubt be interested to hear particulars of a man of 105 called "Old Roppel," who lives in Chermoschel, in the north of Prussia, enjoying perfect health. The old man takes his daily walk and is able to read and write. He is the oldest man in Germany, and can still remember the march of the Grand Army through the Palatinate in the year 1812. "Eat what you like," he says, "and live to be 100."

Starts Out to Rival Prince of Monaco in Exploring Secrets of Ocean Depths.

ALBERT GIVES HIM POINTS

F. Townsend Martin Tells He He Was Robbed of Family Gems at a Madrid Hotel.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, May 20.—Gould Brokaw of New York has started out to rival Prince Albert of Monaco of oceanography. Mr. Brokaw is now in the Bay of Monaco on board his yacht Valhalla. The rivalry is quite friendly, and the American has given a dinner in honor of the head of the House of Grimaldi. The dinner was on board the Valhalla.

This yacht is fitted up specially for scientific investigation of the deep. Prince Albert examined the equipment, praised it, and made some valuable suggestions. The Prince has the reputation of being the best living authority on oceanography. He has written much on the subject and is a member of the French Academy of Sciences.

He has also lectured a great deal on his pet subject, and it has been said that he contemplated giving some lectures in America. Oceanography is blamed for having lost him his princess, for he paid more attention to the ocean than to his helpmate, formerly Miss Alice Heine of New Orleans.

Mr. Brokaw, who is making a tour around the world, studies the ocean as he proceeds.

As you have possibly learned, Frederick Townsend Martin was robbed in Spain. This is his own story of what happened:

Townsend Martin's Story.

"I was in the Seville Hotel, Madrid. One night when I carelessly neglected to turn the key in my door, a guest in the hotel, who occupied the room immediately above, entered my room, took my rings and a pear-shaped pearl pin to the value of $15,000, which were given me by my brother Bradley and other members of my family. The most remarkable thing was that the thief left my day and night gold watches and gold cigar cases.

"He also took out of my pocketbook, which contained a letter of credit, 250 francs in Spanish money and three gold pieces of American money, of $10 each, but left the letter of credit.

"The chief of police said he thought the thief was afraid the rattle of the watch chains might wake me up and added, 'If you had wakened and sprung at him, you would probably have lost your life with the stab of a knife.'

"On the morning after the robbery a guest of the hotel who had registered from Lisbon, aroused the servants, and in a very excited way said that he was going to leave by the 7 o'clock train and must have his bill. He was so excited that the suspicions of the staff were aroused and a porter took the number of the cab in which the thief left the hotel.

Jewels Recovered.

"The manager then telegraphed the chief of police and all the detective force was put in communication at once with the Spanish government and every town on the frontier of Spain was policed.

"The pawn shops were notified, and on Saturday night, May 13, about two weeks after the loss of my jewels, I received to my joy a telegram from the Consul-General at Seville: 'Congratulations; your jewels recovered in Lisbon.'"

Amid the din and dust of our three Salons, to wit, The Salon of French Artists, the Salon of the National Society of Fine Arts, and the Salon of Independent Artists, the voice of the mighty Ingres, dead this many a year, is heard distinctly. An exhibition of his works has won the hearts of all art lovers. He is compared with Botticelli. His portrait of Mrs. James Rothschild calls forth more enthusiasm than the attraction of this year's Salon.

Former Miss Dorothy Deacon, Youngest Competitor, Is Victor in Italy's International Ladies' Riding Competition.

Special Cable to the Sunday American.

ROME, May 20.—It is speaking temperately to say that the American colony in Rome is delighted by the splendid equestrian victory won by the beautiful American, Princess Antoine Albert Radziwill, formerly Miss Dorothy Deacon—a victory won in the face of family opposition and a thunder storm. Princess Radziwill is the beautiful sister of the international beauty, Gladys Deacon, who is a daughter of Mrs. Edward Parker Deacon and granddaughter of Mrs. Baldwin of New York, widow of the late Admiral Baldwin. The Princess has just carried off the big prize in the international ladies riding competition at the Tor Di Quinto, outside of Rome. She was the youngest of the competitors, all of whom are members of the Rome hunt. She cleared the last fence to the loud cheers of the people while the thunder roared and the most vivid flashes of lightning illuminated the low hills around Rome in her honor. The prowess of the Princess when seated in the pigskin is so well known here and in Paris that in both places she is called "the Deacon Diana." She used to practice her horsewomanship in and around the woods of Versailles, where Louis XIV rode centuries ago, for the Princess and her sisters and their mother spent many seasons in the Royal town of Versailles. So finished was her riding that cavalry officers took special delight in studying the way she took her horse to the well known and difficult water jump.

Miss Fanny Reid, Henry Cachard, Count De Loubersac and other friends have telegraphed their congratulations. Since her marriage, contrary to the wishes of her husband's family, the Princess, with Prince Radziwill, has taken more than ever to her favorite pastime of horse riding and never misses a meet on the Roman Campagna.

As a matter of fact the Radziwills, because of a division of interests, have never become thoroughly reconciled to the Deacon alliance. Some members of the family are extremely fond of the American Princess while others maintain a haughty attitude toward the new member. Though considering themselves Lithuanians, the members of the Prince Antoine branch spend most of their time at the Villa Bon. Campagni, near this city.

LONDON, May 20.—London hotelkeepers and shopkeepers received a rude jolt this week when dispatches [illegible] steamers [illegible] Americans were given [illegible] a wide berth on a [illegible] prices demanded for [illegible] apartments.

A [illegible] to [illegible] is that [illegible] have trebled [illegible] and refuse to [illegible] for visitors arriving [illegible] reply. Certain West End hotels may be filled despite their high handed methods and extravagant prices, but a few minutes farther out there are hundreds of typical English private hotels where any number of visitors can find comfortable accommodations amid surroundings fully as attractive as those nearer Piccadilly.

Central London is already full in at least one sense of the word. The streets are so crowded with traffic that it often takes a motor bus or taxi half an hour to [illegible] a mile. This coronation crowd is so maddening that men in a hurry are often seen leaving their taxis in the middle of the crush and proceeding on foot to arrive at their destination on time. ### [illegible] Portraits on Exhibition

The [illegible] of Queen Alexandra from the Victoria Memorial unveiling this week is [illegible] commented on. This connected with the official announcement that [illegible] the coronation fetes the Queen Mother will be absent from London, has already begun to intensify a shrewd suspicion that the health of Alexandra is not so satisfactory as official reports imply. This general disquietude is reflected in the increased rush of hotel proprietors, shopkeepers and speculative builders of stands to take out policies in Lloyds insuring against postponement of the coronation through some untoward event in the royal family.

Even the majority of the members of Lloyds who pride themselves on their willingness and capacity to insure everything and anything now refuse to accept any more postponement risks at any price. A few daring spirits did write a certain number of risks at fifteen guineas per cent and then advanced the rate to twenty per cent and even this exorbitant premium was readily paid, but towards the week end the underwriters became frightened and now refuse any further business.

Queen Mary's determined attitude towards dress and other questions is having its desired effect. At all recent fashionable functions it has been noticed that women have already considerably modified their costumes. No woman connected with the court now wears expansive hats, and ladies in waiting are required to wear toques, and their skirts, which must touch the ground, have to be two and a half yards in width.

An Anti-Cigarette Edict.

The Queen's latest decree is that no woman connected with the court or hopes to be invited to court shall be seen smoking cigarettes in public. In King Edward's time women smoked over the bridge tables in his presence, although Queen Alexandra never liked it, but no woman dares produce a cigarette in Queen Mary's presence.

Among the many Americans who attended the command performance which the two monarchs honored with their presence was Mrs. Joseph Stickney, who scored a signal triumph by appearing with the Duke and Duchess of Somerset. Mrs. Stickney's millions were crystallized in a new diamond crown, barbed with pear-shaped emeralds.

Mrs. William Leeds, after much preliminary trumpeting, has at last settled into beautiful "Adam" house in Grosvenor street, which still belongs to Mrs. Keppel. Every one is much interested regarding her plan of campaign. Mrs. Leeds is under the wing of Lady Paget, who can of course make a success of any party Mrs. Leeds may care to give.

Events of the immediate future to which Americans are looking forward are a dinner concert to be given by the Duchess of Marlborough at Sunderland House, and a ball at the Ritz Hotel by Mrs. James MacDonald, second wife of the Standard Oil magnate. Mrs. MacDonald has had a very uphill social fight in London, as her husband's health has often compelled her to be abroad for months at a time, but she has obtained a strong ally in Mrs. Williams, a shining light in the Edwardian set who astonished London the other night by giving a dinner to 120 people at Claridge's Hotel, followed by a magnificent ball.

Loom City Enthusiastic in Planning for a Week of Festivity.

FALL RIVER, May 20.—Fall River Looms Up!

Fact. The city LOOKS busy. Activity on the horizon, like another rising sun of industry. And there's a reason for this.

The Fall River Cotton Centennial Carnival is on the way.

The week of June 19-24 is the time, and Fall River is the place. It will be the biggest event in the history of Fall River, the first cotton manufacturing city in America and the second in the world. Not only that, but Fall River's mammoth exposition is going to prove itself epochal in the story of New England's growth.

Today Fall River is up to its ears in work. Every man among its population and every woman, too, for that matter—is planning, planning, planning and working, working, working, and all to the end of making the triple "C" celebration a red letter week in commercial and industrial chronicling.

FALL RIVER'S "RADIUM WEDDING DAY."

This gala week in June is going to be Fall River's "Radium wedding," as one citizen described it to a Sunday AMERICAN reporter. It is going to be a great carnival. For six days and as many nights there will be an endless succession of spectacles, pageants, parades, concerts, banquets, receptions, illuminations, Mardi Gras events, fireworks, warship salutes, aeroplaning, speech-making and a thousand and one other things to fill out the program. The most distinguished men in the nation will be entertained.

There will be something doing all the time, as one of the members of the Merchants' Association's committees ballyhooed it into the ears of a reporter to-day. Probably no city before has any city of the State undertaken a celebration on as grand a scale.

The carnival is to mark the 250th anniversary of Fall River's marvelous cotton industry. That gives the carnival its chief significance. There will be exhibitions of cotton in the growing and cotton in the factory, or cotton from the bale to the buyer, as the advertising committee is billposting it over the highways and by-ways of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Yes, it is true. Fall River people simply will have their way about it. And their dictum is

King Corn is dead, long live King Cotton

SIX DAYS OF BRILLIANCY.

This scheme of municipal decoration will be most elaborate. There will be illuminated signs across the larger buildings, and Main street will become the Great White Way with its added incandescent lights.

Industrially, the chief feature of Carnival week will be the Cotton Centennial Exposition. The exhibits will be of a wide variety. There will be none but actual Fall River products. This will be peculiarly a Fall River affair, clear through.

For exhibition purposes, the committee of the Merchants Association has obtained the large, granite State Armory building and the use of the entire Bradford Durfee Textile School. It is probable the library will also be used. These three buildings are contiguous, standing on the big bank bounded by Main, Durfee, Bank and Elm streets, in the very heart of the city.

The women of the Quequechan Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, have obtained the use of Masonic building for exhibition purposes, so that in reality four spacious structures will be given over to the exposition proper.

In the armory will be the exhibition of local products. Every foot of space has been eagerly gobbled up. Fact is, exhibit room cannot be had now for love or money. Here will be miniature factories making goods on the floor. Overhead will be a novel lot of decorations.

In the Textile School will be the cotton exhibit at its best. Here will be demonstrations from in every stage of its growth and in every nation. There will be manufactured in plain view of the spectators, cotton cloth and duck. It is probable the library will be used for the exhibit of the Fall River paintings and other works of art in Fall River proper. The private Masonic club in the Masonic building will be used for an exhibition of antiques, and record from Fall River homes.

There are several souvenir things about this coming centennial. One is the absolutely leverly unportable "dog on" cases. Millmirrors, calendars, mirrors, mirror cards here will put all over to show the work of mill operatives, members of the unions, firms and other employes. Today Fall River gives a perfect instance of what co-operation can mean in a municipality.

Another thing that is notable is that there is not the slightest thin anywhere of the mercenary spirit. There will be no advertisements in the official programs. The committees have waged the public against "fakes" and lists for these are no real and lines of advertising. Everything is being done in the most public spirited manner imaginable. All the contributions come wishing from rich and poor alike. Last is one reason why the carnival is going to prove an entire success financially. Also it is one reason why Fall River will run through six days with the pathway loaded in all the light and heavy things that money can buy and energy can do. Some rush I guess will be here. It is expected that President Taft will attend. The committee of members of the Merchants Association has started to bring Governor Foss is to be here. Likewise, Governor Foss is to be here. Likewise, president the Governors of other New England states. Also the mayors of many cities including Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston if he can come and Mayor Fletcher of Providence. Indeed, it will be a congress of distinguished mayors that will assemble on the floor of the Textile School during the carnival parade.

There are other leading men of the financial, industrial and commercial world for whose presence here the Merchants' Association is planning. The association expects that Vice President Sherman will attend the centennial bloc, are leaving nothing undone to put Fall River into the spotlight. Inasmuch the week of June 19 and there after to keep the city in the public eye.

Will Boom the City.

The prime reason for the carnival is to set forth to the nation and world the advantages Fall River has for manufacturers and people of all sorts. But incidentally the citizens are seeking to get all visitors to the city carnival week will have a royal good time. There is expected action of all causes to make the celebrating a big success. Hospitality will be the keynote just as "Fall River Looms Up" is the slogan of the industrial-boom-boosters.

The city is already preparing to receive the guests. Everything and everybody will be decorated. Streamers will sway across the main thoroughfares. Bunting will be plentifully displayed. An immense arch is to stand over Main street. Fourteen columns are to be erected along Main, between Bedford and Pocasset streets.

Employers, Business Men, Workers and Women Join for Success of Event.

Fall River is now in the throes of a new kind of publicity promoting. He the mayors of Providence, Newport, Taunweeks at it, the time. He does his writing ton, Brockton and New Bedford.

To add to the brilliance of the evening, there will be a number of military companies in the procession, coming from all the nearby cities and towns. Warships manned by the gayest men will boom their salutes and light up the harbor.

Saturday Will Be Climax.

Friday will be merchants' day. There will be plenty going on, with a band concert all day. At night there will be a Mardi Gras with confetti in abundance.

Saturday will bring the events to the week of events. Under the leadership of Chairman Frederick Wells a committee has arranged a fine water carnival to top off the week. Warships will be here, an aviator is under contract to fly up and down the harbor and over the city as one of his stunts. It will also be famous as a regatta on the harbor, coming from the water of Mt. Hope Bay. His is similar to that will be from the waters of the bay over the city to the statue of Wattopa Pond and back to the bay.

At Lake Cattle will also race a fast motor boat, using his hydroplane. This will be the first race of the kind. Other events for the afternoon will be numerous yacht and boat races, including a twelve-oared cutter race between Fall River companies of the Knights of St. George and companies from Providence and New Bedford.

At 8 o'clock the yacht club will conduct events on the inner harbor of very unusual. Members of the Weetamoe Club are arranging for the swimming and boating events to take place in the water immediately in front of their clubhouse. Likewise in front of the King Philip Yacht Club, will be a variety of diving, swimming along with rowing races and other aquatic features. The Fall River Yacht Club is also planning a list of sport for its afternoon.

J. L. Potter, chairman of the Narragansett Fall River Racing Association, is endeavoring to have the day made a championship of sport and he will probably secure the attention of former Mayor Cox of the association for such events. There will be prizes for sailing craft and all classes of power boats.

Several yachts will be used to further the hospitality the city will extend to all its guests. The yachts will make trips up and down the river and bay, taking the visitors for short sails.

FALL RIVER WOMEN AID CELEBRATION

The women of Fall River are doing their share of the work of preparing for the big triple "C" celebration. Early in the start of the movement, they volunteered their services. So effectively have they been working that now they have engaged the entire Masonic building as an auxiliary to the main exposition features.

Music Hall, the largest in the building, will be given over to an exhibition of Fall River antiques. There will be scores of priceless heirlooms, the treasured possessions of Fall River families. These will be so arranged as to illustrate the various stages in the growth—socially and otherwise—of the city.

The other halls will also be used along similar lines. One of the things the women are planning to do is to establish a refreshment and lunch parlor. This will be a necessary feature as the city will be overrun with a transient population, and the regular dining places will be more than taxed to their capacity. They will also make up the women's reception committees to help in the receiving of all visitors.

Quequechan Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was one of the first of the women's organizations to join in the movement. Of its own volition it seized upon the idea of getting the women to do their part. And right nobly has it done it. It was through the Misses Durfee, members of the chapter, that the Durfee building has been obtained to make the fourth of the exposition halls.

Mrs. Grace H. Allen, a reporter, is an ardent worker. Assisted by the past regent, Mrs. Jean H. Allen, she has left no stone unturned to get the women of the city in the support of the Merchants Association.

In securing the loan exhibition committee to arrange for the exposition of antiques, it was peculiarly fitting that the work devolved on Mrs. Elmer B. Young, wife of a prominent Fall River merchant. She is a woman of great energy and initiative, as I discovered, is the great great-granddaughter of Colonel Jesse Durfee, who built Fall River's first cotton mill in 1811.

With her committee, Mrs. Young has rapidly pushed to completion her task of providing all the exhibits in Music Hall. These will include articles of furniture and china from the home of Colonel Durfee, the cotton pioneer. There will be valuable numbers of persons not living in the city have been turned down as the exposition will be kept a distinctly Fall River affair.

Of the women and girls who will be in the city, all of them will wear a style or dress of some past period of the city's history. Most of them will wear the old colonial costumes of Puritan ancestors, others will wear reproductions of those of the days of the white fluffy period, while those of Mildred Hamlin, who is to wear the wedding gown of her great grandmother.

Cute Little Stickers.

The sticker being used is one of the cutest things about this triple "C" celebration. The sticker is small, printed in the thousands and doled out to everyone. They outline a bale of cotton, with some of the white fuzz fluttering through the slits in the bale. At one end can be seen "1911" and at the other "1911." Labeled in the centre is the brief title

"Fall River Looms up
Cotton Centennial
Carnival
June 19-24, 1911.
Merchants' Manufacturers"

The publicity work is in the hands of William D. Wilcox. He's not a newspaper man, though one would think he was. He may not know one type from another, but he delivers the goods. He has created him on the publicity staff of the Merchants' Association.

CITIZENS TO HONOR 'NINTH' OF '61 DAYS

Committee Planning Exercises for Brave Men Who Marched Away Fifty Years Ago.

A church service, street parade and banquet, in which seventy five survivors of the command will take part, will be one of the interesting features of the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the departure of the old "Fighting Ninth" Regiment from Boston for the war in '61. The anniversary will be observed in Boston, Sunday, June 11, and will be under the direction of a committee of which James J. Phelan is chairman, Joseph A. Dennison, secretary, and former Congressman Joseph H. O'Neil, treasurer. Active members of the Ninth Regiment, Colonel J. J. Sullivan commanding, will take part in the parade. The Ninth Regiment Veterans' Association, composed of men who served at one time or another in the regiment, will also take part in the parade, as will also the veterans of the Spanish-American war. Several G. A. R. posts and Sons of Veterans will also be in line.

In the morning of June 11 the active regiment, escorting the Civil War survivors of the regiment, and the citizens' committee, headed by Mr. Phelan, will gather at the East Armory on East Newton street. They will march to the Church of the Immaculate Conception for solemn high military mass. At noon luncheon will be served at the armory. From that hour until 2 o'clock there will be a general reunion and camp fire. The street parade will be at 2:30.

Banquet at the Armory.

Following the parade the banquet will be held in the armory. Plates will be laid for 2,000. Governor Foss and staff, Mayor Fitzgerald and City Council and a number of prominent military and naval officials will be among the guests.

The history of the "Fighting Ninth" in the Civil War is one that stirs the pride of people of Irish blood the world over. Among the first to proffer his services to should be permitted to carry the Irish flag. Governor Andrew at the outbreak of the war was Thomas Cass. His idea was to organize a regiment of Irishmen, who With the Governor's approval he perfected such an organization — the "Fighting Ninth."

The officers of the regiment shared the spirit of Colonel Cass, of his untiring devotion, his unfaltering belief in the ultimate triumph of the cause; so that when he fell in battle, mortally wounded, the regiment's loss was more bereavement than disaster. His mantle fell on Colonel Guiney, who proved a worthy successor.

Officers of the Regiment.

Lieutenant-Colonels—Cromwell G. Rowell, Robert Peard, Peard died of disease while in the service; Patrick R. Guiney, Patrick J. Hanley (Brt. Colonel).

Majors—Robert Peard, Patrick R. Guiney, George W. Dutton, Patrick J. Hanley and John W. Mahan.

Assistant surgeons—Patrick A. O'Connell, Francis M. Lincoln, James F. Sullivan, Henry H. Fuller, John Ryan, James W. Fitzpatrick.

With its flag of green in the peninsula campaign the regiment bore a beautiful national flag, the gift of the boys of the Eliot School, North End. It was a big surprise to the people of Alexandria, Va., on that March morning, to see a thousand boys in blue marching to the national tune of Ireland and flying their Irish flag, and a little greater surprise to see that same flag flying at the peak of the United States transport State of Maine, which took the "Fighting Ninth" to Fortress Monroe.

The citizens' executive committee in charge of the anniversary exercises on June 11 is:

James J. Phelan, chairman; Joseph H. O'Neil, treasurer; Edward M. Gallagher, secretary; Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge, Mayor Robert E. Burke of [illegible], Major Patrick F. Butler, Mayor John T. Cahill of Lawrence, William J. Cashn, Major William J. Casey, William P. Connery of Lynn, Colonel Peter H. Corr, James E. Cotter, Matthew Cummings, Joseph A. # Young Men Take Notice! Girl Graduates Can Cook

PRACTICAL ARTS FIRST GRADUATING CLASS.

MORE interest is felt in the first graduation of pupils of the Girls' High School of Practical Arts, which will be held in Latin School Hall in June, than in any scholastic event of the commencement season. It is the only school of its kind in the world and a city of Boston institution. It attempts to give girls a training which will make them capable in all domestic arts. Graduates are supposed to be model housekeepers and ought to make the best of wives. They are taught how to make a home beautiful and comfortable at the least cost.

The school was started four years ago in Lyceum Hall, Dorchester, with a few pupils and only four teachers. Now its faculty numbers twenty-seven and 500 girls attend it. It is said to be a success and if there was a referendum attached to its plea for $300,000 with which to build a suitable structure for the institution citizens would authorize the money by an almost unanimous vote.

They Can Cook, Too.

The girls are taught to sew and to cook besides many other things. They can trim a hat so that it will look like a Parisian importation. All the apparel they fashion has style and beauty and does not involve any waste. In the cooking line the Practical Arts girls are real chefferines. A visitor to the school recently had luncheon with girls who cooked and served everything on the menu which was pronounced a culinary triumph. With prices it reads: Escalloped lobster, 6c; lobster salad, 10c.; St. Germain soup, 5c; spinach salad, 5c; sponge cake, 3c.; chocolate pie, 5c; and coffee, Bavarian cream, 5c.

While the school chiefly gives its students a chance to display genius for household work, most of them have talents which will grace a home in other ways. They can sing, play, draw or write. The literary ability of the pupils is shown in "The Shuttle." It is the school publication and it has class. The girls not only write it, but illustrate it as well.

Also Dramatic.

Next to getting diplomas the graduates of the 1911 class are most interested in the morality play, "Everywoman's Road," which, with the assistance of the Misses Irma McKenzie, Jessie Guttentag and Katherine Borst, who are juniors, the Misses Ella Root, Esther Dunican, Pauline Bayne, Geraldine Caswell, Gertrude Kent, Alice Meehan, Jessie Weaver, Dorothy Frazee, Winifred Preble, Gladys Farwell, Grace Fitzgerald, Isabelle Best and Selma Pick as principals, presented in Jordan Hall last evening and which will have another performance with the same cast in the same place to-morrow night. The girls who take part in the play, and there are seventy-three characters and a big chorus, made their own costumes. They studied the garments they reproduced at the Peabody Institute. As it is a play which embraces the world of women, from the cave dwellers to the present, they had to study the dress of their sex in all ages. Special music and dancing are remarkable features of the performance. "Everywoman's Road" will soon be given a professional production in a leading New York theatre. It is the work of Miss Josephine Hammond.

ONLY ONE BAY STATE TOWN WITHOUT BOOKS

Newbury has the distinction of being the only town in this State without a free public library.

Wahsington was the last town to fall into line. Recently the town voted to have books deposited in two of the schoolhouses, with the teachers acting as librarians.

Ninety four towns and villages have received the benefit of traveling libraries through the co-operation of the Woman's Education Association of Boston. With these libraries go also twenty-three sets of pictures. The association has made 143 visits to 109 places.

In order to give special pleasure to the children in the rural district, the Walter culated in many of the smaller towns, where the children have few advantages.

Down on Cape Cod, where there is a colony of Portuguese near Cotuit, the demand was for pictures of the deposed ruler of that country with pictures of those who had taken charge of the republic. These were circulated and much appreciated by the young members of the Portuguese colony.

Oak Bluffs made a request for the books and pictures of King Edward and the accession of King George.

In 253 libraries of the State, the public is allowed to consult the shelves of books that they may find those which suit their taste and save work for the librarian in waiting upon themselves. This liberty is refused in sixty five of the libraries, but the number opposed to it is rapidly decreasing every year.

Boxford has two "self-acting" delivery stations, one in the village store and the other at the railroad station.

The books are changed every few weeks and the patrons charge themselves with the volumes taken in a blank book hung by the shelves. No book has yet been lost by this system.

Dartmouth allows three books to a reader at one time. Lexington has no limit and neither has Milton, while Walpole allows no limit on the number of books which are non-fiction. Quincy has no limit except on fiction, and Winchester gives way to "any reasonable demand either of fiction or no-fiction, not new or in great demand."

A project is now under consideration of one town being allowed to lend books to another town. This is recommended by the State Free Library Commission, which is composed of Charles F. D. Belden of Cambridge, Miss Elizabeth P. Sohier of Beverly, Frank H. Howes of Newton, Hiller C. Wellman of Springfield and Miss Anna M. Bancroft of Hopedale.

$90,000 NORWICH FIRE.

Flames Discovered in Rear of the Lucas Building.

NORWICH, Ct., May 20.—Fire, which started in the rear of the Lucas Building at Shetucket and Littlewater street to-day, destroyed half of that building, the livery stables of O. H. Reynolds and the stables connected with the American house, doing damage estimated at $90,000.

UNITARIANS HERE FOR BIG MEETING

Unitarians from all over the United States are gathering in Boston for "Anniversary week," which will open to-morrow and close Friday. Noted leaders in the Unitarian Church will take part in the proceedings.

Besides the customary opening events, the women Unitarian ministers will hold a public meeting to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 in the South Congregational Church. The chief address will be by the Rev. Elizabeth Padgham, of Rutherford, N. J. Her topic is "The Church and The Growing Child." The devotional service will be led by Rev. Margaret B. Barnard, of Rowe.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot will preside and make a short address at the laymen's meeting in Tremont Temple Wednesday evening at 7:30. Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, chaplain of the United States Senate and the pastor of President Taft, will conduct the religious services. Addresses will be given by Adelbert Moot of Buffalo, N. Y., Hon. Hugh McK. Landon of Indianapolis, Horace Davis of San Francisco and others.

As the discussion last year on "Socialism" caused some friction when presented in the Arlington Street Church, the discussion of that subject this year will be behind closed doors, and only ministers will be admitted. The address will be given by Professor N. P. Gilman of Meadville, Pa.

Rev. Samuel M. Crothers of Cambridge will preach the annual sermon before the association on Tuesday evening in Tremont Temple. The devotions will be conducted by Rev. John H. Lathrop of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Rev. W. M. Backus of Minneapolis.

Ex-Governor John D. Long will make an address on "A National Church for Unitarians at Washington," Friday morning, at the annual meeting of the Laymen's League in King's Chapel. The memorial tribute to Julia Ward Howe will take place on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Ford Hall. Brief addresses will be made by Mrs. Florence Kollock Crocker of Boston, F. B. Sanborn of Concord, and Mrs. Julia Elliott of Boston. Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey of Rochester, N. Y., will make the principal address on "The Next Step in Religion," before the Free Religious Association at its annual meeting in Ford Hall on Friday morning at 10.

The public reception to all the delegates will be given to-morrow evening in Hotel Somerset at 8. President and Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. William L. Lawrence, Franklin C. Southworth, and Mrs. James A. Bentley will receive.

Savings Bank Closed.

NEW YORK, May 20.—O. H. Cheney, State Superintendent of Banks, to-day closed up the Knickerbocker Savings & Loan Company at No. 78 Park row and action was necessary because of discoveries made yesterday during the course of the regular examination of the banking department. The officers are, Joseph Ostman, president, Herbert H. Gibbs secretary, and T. Atherton Black, treasurer. The company has been in existence about ten years. It was originally capitalized at $200,000.

CROKER TELLS WHAT TO DO IN FIRE PERIL

"Don't Jump, and, Above All, Keep Calm," Says Former New York Chief.

EX-CHIEF CROKER'S 10 RULES FOR GUIDANCE OF PEOPLE IN FIRE

1. At the first sign of fire do not run away from it.
2. Get well acquainted with the surroundings where you live.
3. Do not resist a fireman in attempting rescue.
4. Do not be too hasty to jump from high places.
5. Fire drills should become a fixed law.
6. Everybody should learn how to use fire appliances.
7. At any cost calm the fears of little children.
8. No matter how hot the fire, bend every effort to keep calm.
9. Cleanliness in the home an important preventive of fire.
10. In case of too much smoke try to get a wet cloth about the mouth.

Edward F. Croker, who has been a fireman for twenty-seven years, Chief of the New York Fire Department twelve years, and regarded as one of the foremost fire-fighters in this country, when he lately resigned the work of fighting fires for that of preventing them, suggests ten rules for guidance of people in event of fire.

"The great trouble with most people lies in the fact that the subject of fire is not given very much thought until we are in the midst of it," says the chief. "For instance, a person will go into a hotel, say in the evening, register, take an elevator to his room without taking any observation as to the surroundings, lock his door and retire. There he is for the night and has not the least idea as to the locations of the fire exits, stairways and in fact might not even be able to find the way to the elevator again.

"After the Asch Building disaster girls on the witness stand swore they did not know where the stairways were, and some of them had been employed there for a year or two. This is reckless, to say the least. The truth is that there are more ways than one of getting away from a fire if people will only try their utmost to keep cool.

One Great Mistake.

"A great common mistake made is at the first outcry of fire to try and run away from it. In cases without number a fire at the beginning is very easily put out—one bucket of water will do a great deal—so that instead of running away from it, the thing to do is to try to find it. The next requisite is to keep cool. Right here I want to say that women as a rule, are cooler in great emergencies than men. They seem to grasp the situation more clearly.

"One brave woman taking the initiative in cases of great trial can accomplish much in calming the fears of others. When people become panic-stricken they are apt to follow a leader more readily than at any other time. Therefore, fire drills should become a matter of law especially where many people are employed. Thus everybody becomes accustomed to the clang of alarm and they go right to their places—perhaps not even knowing if there is a real fire or just a drill. They are out even before they have had time to realize which it is.

"While I do not believe in strikes, I think that every company of employes should insist that doors be kept unlocked at all times—in other words, they should demand this from the proper authorities.

Learn Use of Appliances.

"Another overwhelming reality is that nine people out of ten do not know how to use fire appliances. This is a gross mistake. At least men should know exactly how to use common fire extinguishers, especially those on hand where they are employed. They must learn their use before a fire that the work may be done quickly when it breaks out. It is an easy matter even for women to learn this. They daily handle much more difficult tasks, why not this? Many women have more presence of mind than men.

"No one should resist a fireman at a time of rescue. I remember in the Windsor Hotel fire this was one of our greatest difficulties. Some of the observations there were even ludicrous.

"A grievous mistake is that of too much haste in the matter of jumping from high places. Many people that might have been saved become hopeless cripples in their eagerness to escape by jumping.

"People are overcome by smoke more from nervousness and excitement than they would be under ordinary conditions. If it is possible to get a wet cloth and tie it around the mouth at the first sign of smoke, this will do much toward keeping one from succumbing to it.

Word to Housekeepers.

"A point of great importance is that cleanliness in the home is a pregnant factor in the prevention of fires. This may seem farfetched, but the truth is evident that the accumulation of dust in unfrequented corners acts as oil.

"The woman in the home can do much to dispel distress. It is an easy thing to call 'Fire!' and 'Save me!' while a fire is gaining ground. I might say that almost half of the fires could be extinguished by man, woman or child if they would but aim to suppress excitement and use a little nerve at the right moment. Above all things, make an effort to keep calm."

NEW JAP-CANADIAN PACT.

Favorable Resolution Adopted in House at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, May 20.—The House of Commons devoted considerable time to discussion as to the renewal for two years of the present treaty with Japan. Canada has declined to assent to the British treaty and insists upon having its own arrangements with Japan. The members from British Columbia put up a vigorous protest against any treaty with Japan, but Mackenzie King pointed out that the agreement made three years ago by Postmaster-General Lemieux had absolutely restricted and prevented the immigration of Japanese except in the case of merchants or students. The resolution was adopted despite the vigorous protests of the opposition.

METHODISTS' LIQUOR WAR.

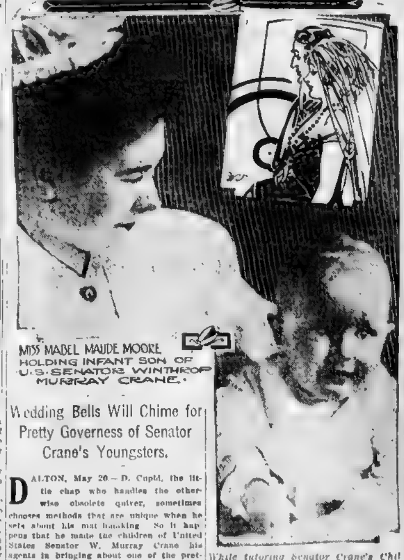
Make Contribution of $10,000 for Maine Campaign.

PORTLAND, Me., May 20.—It is announced that the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, through its board of managers, meeting in Chicago, has voted to contribute $10,000 to be used in the approaching campaign in Maine in behalf of the retention of the amendment to the constitution forbidding the sale of liquor. The Rev. Samuel Dickey, president of Albion College in Michigan, will have charge of the raising of the fund.

CUPID WINGS A PRETTY NURSE APOTHECARY IS ALSO SHOT



MISS MABEL MAUDE MOORE, HOLDING INFANT SON OF U.S. SENATOR WINTHROP MURRAY CRANE.

While tutoring Senator Crane's Children Miss Moore fell in love with the Dalton druggist she is to marry

Wedding Bells Will Chime for Pretty Governess of Senator Crane's Youngsters.

DALTON, May 20.—D. Cupid, the little chap who handles the otherwise obsolete quiver, sometimes chooses methods that are unique when he sets about his mat hunting. So it happens that he made the children of United States Senator W. Murray Crane his agents in bringing about one of the prettiest romances Dalton has had in a long time.

It is the romance of Miss Mabel Maud Moore, and it began when the young woman was engaged as governess for the Crane children.

On Tuesday next Miss Moore is to be married to Charles Roy Silvernail, who has a drugstore here, near the Senator's home. The couple fell in love on one of the visits the pretty young woman made to the pharmacy to get medicine for one of the little Cranes. Acquaintance ripened and the druggist began the courtship which is to end with the peal of marriage chimes in the church here three days hence.

It is expected that the children, who played so large a part in her romance, will be among the wedding attendants. The Crane children have come to love their governess, so they're going to send her presents and be among her wellwishers at the marriage.

Miss Moore is the daughter of Dr. S. Edward Moore of Brooklyn. She was graduated three years ago as a trained nurse from the House of Mercy Hospital in Pittsfield. It was shortly after her graduation that Mrs. Crane employed her as governess for the children.

Mr. Silvernail is prominent in Dalton business affairs.

STATE CHURCHES TO POOL CONGREGATIONS

Protestant churches in Massachusetts are massing together. The Massachusetts Federation of Churches has been at work for eighteen months studying church conditions in the Commonwealth. It now recommends that the several Protestant churches in many towns, which are overchurched, come together and form one strong church organization.

The town of Hampton is one instance among many where there are too many churches. This town has a population of 581 and the seating capacity of the three churches, Congregationalist, Baptist and Methodist, is 1,200. In this town it is maintained that one church would do the work, and an effort will be made to unite the different denominations into one strong congregation.

Lanesborough in the heart of Berkshire Hills, six miles from a railroad station has four churches for a population of [illegible]. Other towns which are overchurched are Woods Hole, where there are three churches for 500 population. Southwick, with the village of Granville, with a combined population of 1,553, has six churches. Somerset, with different small villages adjoining, as Pottersville and South Somerset, having a population of 2,797, has seven churches.

At North Truro, a federated church having two separate church organizations, Methodist and Congregational, hold services in one building and have Methodist and Congregational ministers alternately. This is the most successful federated church in the State.

Rutland is a town where in one church may be found by means of this federation, fourteen different denominations worshipping in a single church.

Rev. E. Tallmadge Root, who is the field secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches and a recognized authority upon the overchurched communities of this State, says: "The waste of maintaining several churches, where one could serve the population is obvious in the erection and maintenance of buildings and salaries, etc. Especially wasteful is it to ask several trained men to preach each to a handful, for it is easier to preach to 200 than to 50, and the same sermon to the larger number is many times more effective."

The churches of the Back Bay have an understanding through this federation with each other, so that they may avoid "overlapping" in week day services.

Trinity church has a daily noon service. Central, Arlington street and First churches hold their daily service at 4:30 respectively on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Emmanuel Church has an 8 p. m. service on Wednesday, and the Church of the Advent on Friday evening. By this means of arranging services the different churches in the Back Bay aim to co-operate with one another.

8 HOURS FOR OPERATORS.

New Schedule for Telegraphers to Start June 1.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—In a special bulletin issued by the American Federation of Labor the statement is made that all key men in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company will be granted an eight hour day beginning June 1, together with a substantial increase in wages. "The most pleasing feature, however," the bulletin says, "is the announcement that President Vail of the company has gone on record as being opposed to any discrimination against telegraphers who belong to a union."

Slain at Coney Island.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Detectives attached to the Coney Island police station are to-day attempting to solve the mystery which surrounds the murder of a well dressed man aged about forty, whose body, with his head nearly torn off, was found in Harway avenue. The man was still breathing when picked up but died soon after in the Coney Island Hospital. Seven cents in money was found in his pocket but no papers that could throw light upon his identity. The body was discovered by an automobilist.

HYDE PARK, TOO, IN THE SPOTLESS LIST

Billboards and handbills must go in the general cleaning up of Hyde Park. The Civic Improvement Committee, just organized to beautify the district, means business. The committee is composed of two representatives from fourteen different associations and clubs in the town.

The organizations and clubs represented in this committee include the Women's Current Events Club, Ladies' Evening Current Events, the Ladies' Thought Club, the Business Men's Association, Readville, Hazelwood, Clarendon Hills and the East River Street Improvement Associations, Phillips Brooks Club, Cobra Tennis Club, Congregational, Baptist, Methodist and Clarendon Congregational Churches. The total membership of the organization numbers sixteen hundred.

The officers that have been chosen are: Francis W. Darling, chairman; Frederick V. Bowker, secretary, and Miss Annie [illegible], treasurer.

"We have started to beautify the town and give it the appearance that it should have," said Chairman Darling. "Billboards and handbills have got to go. We will try to have the owners of the property where these billboards are located, especially those that are near the entrance to the railroad stations, take them down. If we are unable to do so we will place trees along the tracks and have the boards hidden from view. Sod and trees will be placed in different parts of the town where it is needed, the railroad stations entrances will also be put in order.

"The organization will, of course, have to depend upon the different clubs and associations for backing, and a subscription list will be passed around for the purpose of aiding us in the work. I am going to devote all my spare time, and if we get the co-operation of all the members, I see no reason why Hyde Park should not be one of the prettiest towns in the State."

MIDDLETON WILL LIVE.

Inability to Find Work Made Him Drink Poison.

Despondent because he had been unable to find work, Harry A. Middleton, thirty three, a lodger at No. 33 Gray street, South End, attempted to commit suicide by drinking lysol. He is at the City Hospital, where the doctors say his condition is not serious.

Middleton was found unconscious on the floor of his room with a small bottle which had contained the poison near him. He returned home late last night melancholy, and a few hours later other lodgers in the house heard moans coming from his room. An ambulance was summoned and Middleton was hurried to the hospital. He was placed on the operating table where it was found he had not drank enough of the poison to cause death.

Harvard Expert Shows Grand Trunk the Way to Boston

Bruce Wyman, Railroad Authority, Suggests Taking Central Massachusetts Line

BRUCE WYMAN, of Cambridge, for the past eleven years professor of law at Harvard and a well-known writer on economics, is the latest notable accession to the ranks of those who want the Grand Trunk Railway to come to Boston.

Professor Wyman contributed a full page on Boston and the Grand Trunk to the Evening Transcript of yesterday. His thoughtful and well-written article, and the public spirit displayed by the Transcript in not only printing it but displaying it, are among the most telling blows that have been struck for Boston and New England since the AMERICAN opened the campaign to get the Grand Trunk to this port.

The author of "Railroad Rate Regulation" and "Restraint of Trade" finds that Boston not only needs the Grand Trunk but ought to have it. He finds that the State can and should help, that it is not only advisable but constitutional. He suggests that the Grand Trunk might come in over the lines of the old Massachusetts Central, which, while it has no Boston terminal, comes as far as North Cambridge.

Delighted by Professor Wyman's support of the most vital movement before New England to-day, and pleased to find a contemporary displaying so fine a spirit in the matter, The AMERICAN prints Mr. Wyman's article in full, in order that all may see it:

PROFESSOR WYMAN ON THE GRAND TRUNK SITUATION

By BRUCE WYMAN,

Professor of Law in Harvard University, Author of "Railroad Rate Regulation," and "Public Service Corporations."

Prof. Wyman's Letter.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

As you were kind enough to think that the suggestions I happened to be making to you a few days ago about the railroad situation in New England [illegible] of some interest to your [illegible] I am glad to write out informally what has occurred to me without in any way committing you [illegible] indeed, even myself—to advocating [illegible] I am merely suggesting [illegible] would be worth while to consider [illegible] which has seen what will [illegible] the final steps in the long [illegible] of the New Haven road to [illegible] complete monopolization of [illegible] transportation lines of New England. And many persons must [illegible] whether or not it is for [illegible] interests of New England [illegible] this monopoly should be as complete as it now is. We saw almost [illegible] local transportation of the New England States come into the hands of the New Haven road when it [illegible] control of the Boston & Maine [illegible]

Based on Public Opinion.

This was not done without due notice and long discussion, so that it is probably only fair to say that the ultimate acquaintance of the general public in this merger of all the local lines was based upon the final opinion of the great majority that one system might give New England better local service. But one may believe in the next stage of a single local system without being satisfied to see the through lines of transportation practically excluded from New England, except on such terms as the local system may from time to time dictate.

Last month New England had two of the greatest railroad systems of the North American continent—the New York Central lines and the Grand Trunk Railways system—crossing it to tidewater independently of the New Haven monopoly. By the lately announced agreement respecting the Boston & Albany, the New Haven has virtually eliminated the New York Central. There remains only the Grand Trunk, and the question is what should be the attitude of the State toward its apparent ambition to spread its terminal lines over New England.

Why Boston Wants It.

I wonder if all your readers appreciate how great a territory this Grand Trunk system will cover when its lines are completed which it now has under construction. Some of your older readers may appreciate the change by remembering the Grand Trunk of a generation ago, practically a local Canadian road with an almost absurd service, managed in an ineffective way from London. But for many years now, particularly since Hays took charge of it, the Grand Trunk has been one of the most progressive roads on the continent.

The present Grand Trunk Railway Company operates in a really modern way about 5,000 miles of track, entering such large [illegible] centres as Portland, Montreal, [illegible], Buffalo, Detroit, Toronto [illegible]. But of even greater [illegible] the present lines in [illegible] the Grand Trunk Pacific [illegible] partly built and [illegible] by the Canadian Government [illegible] it is certain [illegible] as construction [illegible]. When this Grand Trunk Pacific [illegible] all its proposed branches [illegible] Rupert, its Pacific terminus, [illegible] its furthest Atlantic outlet, it will have almost 5,000 miles of track itself.

The Grand Trunk Railway system as a whole will, therefore, in a few years be almost 10,000 miles in length, spread over the vast territory [illegible] from the Atlantic to the Pacific [illegible] from the Great Lakes to [illegible] character of this [illegible] is even more worthy of [illegible] its extent. Into that [illegible] north of that narrow strip [illegible] hitherto been thought of as [illegible] is flowing such a tide of [illegible] making toward no other part of the earth. It is perhaps the last free soil for the Anglo-Saxon in the temperate zone.

The enormous crops of the virgin soil will move across the continent to the Atlantic for shipment. And, in the coming days of Canadian prosperity, the trains will go back laden with goods of all sorts which a population [illegible] while growing rich so suddenly. Moreover, there is the throng [illegible] of the Northern world to consider, for [illegible] so far about the [illegible] higher latitudes, from Asia to [illegible] is several days shorter [illegible] ern route. I may be too credulous in believing all the claims for this new Canada; so I will not repeat the stories as to the fabulous ores in the Rockies and the July strawberries in the Arctic. Enough has been said to show that the Grand Trunk will be one of the great carriers of the continent with a huge traffic to exchange with its Atlantic terminals.

The Atlantic Terminals.

A glance at the map which I send with this letter will show how the Grand Trunk has distributed its Atlantic terminals among the northeastern ports of the continent. Montreal and Quebec the Grand Trunk Railway already has in Canada; Halifax and St. John it will add upon the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Portland and New London it has now in New England. It is already building toward Providence and can one doubt that it is looking toward Boston?

If the Grand Trunk is spreading out its terminal lines to the principal ports along the Atlantic littoral from the St. Lawrence River to Long Island Sound, can this system be complete without having its own rails into the port of Boston? It would seem that it would not willingly make this region its terminal territory without running into its business capital, Boston. There must be a policy behind these far-flung lines to the seaboard. It is probable that it wishes a variety of ports through which it may direct its foreign shipments as expediency may dictate from time to time; and it wishes at the same time to have many commercial shipping points from which it may draw its back freights.

Will Favor Best Terminal.

From season to season it will favor in turn the Northern ports and the Southern ports. From week to week it will favor the port which temporarily quotes the lowest ocean freight rate or it will send its cars to the point which is offering the most freight in return. And it will give its principal business on the average to that terminal which upon the whole will serve its interests best. Can any Bostonian doubt that this means our city, with one of the best harbors on the Atlantic coast for the greatest freighters, and at the same time one of the largest manufacturing centres in the Western hemisphere for the things a growing people need?

Considering the situation in the large, it seems almost a manifest destiny that the Grand Trunk must ultimately run into Boston. It is all very well to indulge in this large talk, but how shall this result be accomplished as a practical matter?

Traffic Agreements Already.

It may be said that the Grand Trunk has already traffic agreements by which it may, perhaps, be said to be running in and out of Boston at the present time. At White River Junction, Vt., on the upper Connecticut, it connects with the Boston & Maine; and this gives it a sufficiently direct route by the Concord Division to Concord and thence by the Southern Division into Boston.

It is not altogether a satisfactory outlet, but it is good enough in itself. The Concord Division winds through the mountains and climbs over the divide with its single track and countless wooden bridges; but from Concord down the best trackage of the Boston & Maine system runs practically without grades to Boston.

Over this connection the Boston & Maine hauls the two principal passenger trains through which the Grand Trunk operates between Boston and Montreal; but it takes nearly five hours to run the 150 miles.

Of course at White River Junction the Boston & Maine gladly takes whatever Boston and way freight the Grand Trunk offers it for further transportation; but the Grand Trunk with so many Atlantic terminals of its own does not willingly share its seaboard rate with another road.

Direct Line to Boston.

It may be admitted that this connection gives a very direct line into Boston; and doubtless the physical conditions of the Concord Division could be bettered.

But direct as it is, and improved as it may be, the best that the Boston & Maine could offer the Grand Trunk for this route is what it does now—a traffic agreement.

[illegible] Southern Division from Concord [illegible] Boston through Manchester, [illegible] and Lowell is so busy that running rights are probable impracticable; [illegible] give an independent railroad [illegible] it free to run its own trains [illegible] over this division would [illegible] workable as an operating [illegible]

But even if some trackage arrangement [illegible] be worked out it is very [illegible] it would not satisfy the [illegible] plans of the Grand Trunk. [illegible] Grand Trunk was working [illegible] plan for building into Providence [illegible] the New Haven came forward [illegible] it trackage rights through [illegible] but the Grand Trunk [illegible] refused to accept the proposal [illegible] the application to the [illegible] Railroad Commission [illegible] state of exigency for its [illegible] the commission definitely [illegible] that such trackage rights [illegible] effectively meet the situation.

[illegible] difficulties in anything short [illegible] ownership of the trackage [illegible] more than physical. What [illegible] of fixing what shall be [illegible] for the service if another [illegible] it must interfere with [illegible] of the through carrier [illegible] whole rate. And particularly [illegible] the through railroad has [illegible] of entry it will use them [illegible] thing so as to get everything [illegible] itself.

Possibility of New Construction.

The Grand Trunk might be offered the right to build its own line into Boston from any convenient point on its Central Vermont line which crosses Massachusetts on its way from Montreal to New London through Millers Falls, Amherst and Palmer.

At Palmer, it is only about eighty miles from Boston; and, if I am any judge of its strategy, it is from Palmer that it would build to Boston, as it is now building to Providence. This would make Palmer the diverging and converging point for its New London, Providence and Boston divisions. Anyone with the slightest acquaintance with the fundamental principles of railroad operation does not need to be told the operating advantages of bringing through trains into Palmer and dividing them for distribution there, or of collecting business from the three lines and sending it through to the Northwest in single trains.

From the point of view of the Grand Trunk, with its ten thousand miles of trackage spread over the northern part of the continent, New England cannot be anything more than a great terminal yard, and its trackage would be operated upon that basis. But even building eighty miles of road across the eastern end of Massachusetts would be an expensive matter.

Takings for the right of way would come high; grade crossings would not be permitted, other railroads would object to new intersections, and when metropolitan Boston should be reached the cost of getting in would grow high into the millions. Nor would there be any local advantage from such construction for the Grand Trunk or for the Commonwealth.

Would Be Boon to Boston.

In this eastern end of Massachusetts we have a network of trackage already too closely knotted. From the view of the State it would be hardly justifiable to authorize the charge upon the community of new construction in an already overbuilt territory if any other way could be found. And yet I thoroughly believe that the practical advantage of getting the Grand Trunk into Boston over its own rails would greatly outweigh this theoretical disadvantage.

My idea—and I merely contribute it to the discussion for what it is worth—is that a new line should not be built until it is seen whether some of those old lines may not be utilized. There may be some other existing line the utilization of which may be more practicable, but what I would suggest as a way into Boston for the Grand Trunk is the taking of the Central Massachusetts road.

Take the Central Massachusetts.

The history of the Central Massachusetts is so inglorious that many of your readers may never have heard its name. It was designed to cross the State from east to west midway between the Fitchburg road to its north and the Albany road to its south. It stumbled along in its construction for a generation, now and again stopping for lack of funds, every once in a while appealing to the Legislature for extension of the time limits in its charters. Finally it reached the Connecticut River at Northampton; and there it stopped a little over one hundred miles from Boston.

Probably it had cost nearly $10,000,000 to get so far, and, although it had been reorganized, it had outstanding then $2,000,000 bonds, $4,000,000 preferred stock and $3,500,000 common. So badly located was it for local business and so isolated was it from through business that it gave up operation, leasing itself to the Boston & Maine upon the harshest terms imaginable, the stockholders receiving nothing at all.

Purchase by Boston & Maine.

About ten years ago the stockholders got together and began litigation to get free from this lease; and the Boston & Maine felt forced to deal with them. Legislation was passed authorizing the Boston & Maine to buy shares of the Central Massachusetts at prices to be fixed by the Railroad Commissioners, and provision was made for taking the stock of dissenting shareholders by eminent domain.

The Railroad Commissioners fixed $65 per share for the preferred and $21 per share for the common, which, with the outstanding bonds, made their valuation of the property as a going concern about $5,000,000. There has been very little physical change in the property in the last ten years and very little development in its traffic, so that it is reasonable to suppose that if some tribunal were again called to fix the value of this Central Massachusetts as a going concern to-day its present value would not be found to be any more than this $5,000,000 for its hundred miles of track; and there are reasons for believing that it would not fetch so large a sum.

If the Grand Trunk, being authorized to seize it by eminent domain, should get it at that price or lower, it would undoubtedly be the cheapest way for it to get its own trackage into metropolitan Boston. It is not in the best of physical condition for heavy traffic, but the Grand Trunk knows how to develop such a property.

A Strategic Position.

The Central Massachusetts is valued low in the Massachusetts railroad market because it has little value in itself. It runs through an undeveloped part of the State which is thinly populated; and experience has shown that there is hardly local freight or local passenger business enough to even pay its operating expenses as a separate road.

In the hands of the Boston & Maine it is doubtful if it has done much better, and it is a question what use the New Haven has for it even in its comprehensive scheme for local New England service. Either the Maine or the New Haven runs into practically every large local point served by it; and with the Fitchburg lease and the Albany entente the New Haven has so much better through lines that it would not consider working out through business for it.

At present its owners move a few local trains slowly across it each day; and that is all. To take it away from its present owners would not deprive them of any integral part of their system; nor make them give up any trackage which they use in their through business. It would be grossly unfair and ruinously expensive to authorize the Grand Trunk to seize the Boston & Lowell, by which it now enters Boston; but this Central Massachusetts is another matter.

At the same time the Central Massachusetts runs across the State in just about the way the Grand Trunk would build into Boston if the question were altogether a new one. Within the corporate limits of Palmer, it comes within a few rods of the Grand Trunk; and then runs parallel with it to Amherst.

Plan For Connection.

A mile or so should be built from Bondsville in, to make a Y; and the parallel lines from Palmer to Amherst could be used as a long passing siding. Palmer, as has been seen, would seem to be the natural centralizing point; and the Grand Trunk would probably build into Boston from that point in any event, even though it increases the mileage over its present connections.

For freight this increase is negligible and for passenger service it simply means a higher speed for the day express. But the strategic advantage to the Grand Trunk—and indeed to the Commonwealth—does not consist altogether in its present rails. It comes within a few miles of Worcester; and it could seize the disarticulated line which runs from Oakdale to Worcester to get in. It comes within a few miles of Springfield, and to get in it could build the recently authorized Hampden Railway, which the New Haven has just abandoned. It intersects the cross-over lines between the New Haven and the Boston & Maine systems at many points—Waltham, Sudbury, Berlin, Clinton, Jefferson, Bondsville and Northampton. The Grand Trunk could at these junctions distribute and take up freight for all New England under due and fair regulations.

Boston Terminals for Grand Trunk.

A serious difficulty with the Central Massachusetts proposition is that it has no Boston terminal. It runs into North Cambridge, and then comes into the North Station over the Southern Division. Even in these last miles it is not probable that the Grand Trunk would be content to seize the running right in, or that it would be comfortable after it got in. But, as it would get the Central Massachusetts at a low price because it has no Boston terminal, it could afford to pay out something to build its own.

Since I am suggesting that my scheme is at least practicable, I must go into this terminal question in some detail. My suggestion is that it condemn a strip of land to the south of the Southern Division over which it runs at present until it reaches East Cambridge; and there at Lechmere square, I think, is the place for its passenger terminal. Lechmere square, it will be noted, is the terminus—and the ground level terminus at that—of the new elevated extension to East Cambridge, which is nearing completion. Thus Lechmere square is as much in touch with the other railroad terminals in Boston, and the whole local transportation system, as any station within the corporate limits of Boston could be.

Moreover, although that time is being extended from year to year, the time will come when all the pile bridges must be cleared out of the Charles River. This probably means that the Boston & Maine station must be built on the north side of the river. New docks could then be built on both sides of the river up to the dam; and the landscape architects have long wished to have open water flowing thus about Boston. To have the passenger station on the Cambridge side of the river would not only save millions but would be for the best development of Greater Boston.

Docks in East Boston.

The principal thing which must be arranged in order to get the Grand Trunk to Boston is ample dockage facilities upon the deepest water, freely accessible to the great ships of the near future. It is generally agreed that East Boston is the best place up the harbor front for the construction of new docks of this sort; and there the Grand Trunk would want to go. To East Boston runs the Grand Junction Railway which in Cambridge crosses location for the outlet proposed for the Grand Trunk, so that the trackage is there. And the Grand Junction Railway would doubtless be held to be a terminal railway, which can be compelled to take loaded cars at a switching rate.

If the Grand Trunk should officially show its disposition to come to Boston there is no doubt, in view of the present agitation for the immediate development of the port of Boston, that the State would build these docks, and see to it that the Grand Trunk should have access to them. If the Grand Trunk comes it will be largely for commerce of the world through the port of Boston; and the matter is of such public concern that public money should not be spared in building such docks as would make Boston one of the best terminal ports in the world.

State Aid for Grand Trunk.

As a practical matter the Grand Trunk would not come into Boston over its own trackage without being aided therein by special legislation. And I assume that the Grand Trunk would want to come in on the basis of being the sole carrier to the seaboard without being obliged to divide its rate with any connection. For as I have pointed out earlier, this great system would want its own exclusive trackage, its position having been sufficiently shown by its action with regard to the Providence terminus in refusing the New Haven's offered trackage. There remain then either new construction of its terminal line across from Palmer or thereabouts, or the outright seizure of the Central Massachusetts.

To build a new line it would have to have eminent domain, which is constitutional obviously; and then it could force its way across the State, a costly advance at all stages, into the heart of Boston. To seize the Central Massachusetts it would have to have special legislative authority; but I have no doubt of its constitutionality in Massachusetts. There is a plain precedent for such a seizure in a Massachusetts case which the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed.

A Pertinent Precedent.

Once upon a time the Marginal Freight Railway in Boston failed to extend its service as the community desired, and the Legislature chartered the Union Freight Railway with power to seize all the trackage of the Marginal road and its very franchise by eminent domain, paying what should be found to be the value thereof. As this seizure was held valid, there is no apparent reason why legislation authorizing the Grand Trunk to seize the Central Massachusetts would not be, particularly as the charter of the Central Massachusetts has always been expressly subject to legislative action.

If I were arguing this matter with lawyers, some of them would quote against me the principle that property acquired by eminent domain cannot be taken by eminent domain. As against specific legislation, there is not much respect for this principle in the country at large; and there is none at all in Massachusetts.

This was said explicitly by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court in supporting legislation giving the Eastern Railway power to seize terminal property of the Boston & Maine for its own Boston terminal, and this is certainly close to the case in hand. With us in Massachusetts the Legislature is the final judge of the propriety of such transfer from one public service corporation to another according to its conviction of the greater preponderance of public convenience.

Public Policy Involved.

But it is not enough to justify State action to show what can be done constitutionally. What is really for the permanent interests of this region is the question. I, for one, have faith enough in the probable benefits of substantial monopoly regulated by law to be willing to see the New Haven have practically entire control of our local transportation. But I must at the same time say that the always present fear of a really potential competition has a salutary effect upon any railroad service.

The New Haven management has shown a great genius for solving the problems of local transportation; the passenger service to the south of Boston has for years been strikingly better than that to the north. But the New Haven is a local system. With the exception of the Ontario road, it does not cross the Hudson River, which really bounds New England. It has no way to demand recognition from the railways to the continent, and it has shown no skill in diplomacy in getting export freight to the South Boston piers. As I said at the beginning, but recently we had two of the greatest railway systems of the continent with Atlantic terminals in New England. Now the New York Central, which made Boston its terminal port, has gone into alliance with the New Haven. Do we wish to see Boston without an independent through railroad?

Of Great Import to New England.

If not, we must see to it that some plan be devised which will be so attractive to the Grand Trunk that it will make arrangements to come to Boston at once. As I am only writing this letter to help in the discussion of what I regard as a matter of overshadowing importance to New England in general and metropolitan Boston in particular, I will take the useful attitude in a discussion of maintaining that, until a better way is shown, in no way can that entrance be opened to the Grand Trunk at so little expense as by giving it the right to seize the Central Massachusetts. However, I hope I have no pride of opinion in this solution I am suggesting. If another way seems better to others, I do not doubt I would agree with them. The important thing, as I see it, is to make some proposition to the Grand Trunk which would be attractive enough to it to make it hasten the development of its plans. Any way of getting the Grand Trunk running into Boston before 1915 is better than not having it in Boston by then.

PORCUPINE, THE NEW GOLD FIELD

Millions of Gold in Sight Puts This Camp Beyond the Experimental Stage.

Special to Sunday American.

PORCUPINE, Ont., May 20.—Across the desert plains of Nevada to Goldfield, up the ice-driven Yukon to Klondyke and down the fever-fraught coast of West Africa to Johannesburg and the Rand, countless hordes of hardy gold-seekers have forced their way within a generation.

Gold—gold—gold has been ever the lure. No other metal lays its desire so potently upon the brain and hand of purposeful man. Neither the fever scourge of the swamp, the death thirst or the arid heat of the desert or the ice blast of the north wind deters his purpose or stays his search when the yellow metal is his quest. Its beckoning glow calls him irrevocably, veritably to the ends of the earth. The hunt is never ended.

With each new discovery the nomadic thousands of prospectors shoulder their packs and set their faces toward the common goal and its rich promise of wealth. The prospectors of the world are of many types, but no matter how varied may be their individual characteristics one impulse is common to all, the impulse of the seeker. They have no part or interest in the actual work of mining. They are the forerunners [illegible], rather than a part of mining or mining camps. To organize, to develop, to mine is not for them. To find, to declare and point out, and then to relinquish into the hands of the operator and the mining engineer, and seek again, is the part they play. The Porcupine of yester-year was his, the Porcupine of to-day he has consigned already to the other and more systematic up-building hands. A month ago the prospecting hordes reclined idly within the portals, waiting the season's consent to "go forth." The genial sun of the North land has spoken, and with the dogged determination of all wanderers he has shaken off the semi-civilization of the full-fledged mining camp and is rambling up and down back and forth, throughout the pine woods from Sudbury upon the south to the James Bay country, north, a stretch of six hundred miles.

Often Walk Away from Riches.

What an unsystematic "Happenso" search his is. How often he has raked his breakfast camp fire and walked unwittingly away from the riches of a future mine. Nothing contains more pathos than the many stories of lost opportunities that confront one in a mining camp. The original staker of the now world famous "Hollinger," who abandoned it as unworthy of his further labor, throughout the past Winter served sandwiches and "ham and" in a little eight by sixteen lunch room at Kelso to the many thousands en route to see the fabulous riches of the property he had cast aside. Truly how different it "might have been." But, however random may be his search, along the prospector's trail of 1911 will be found the to-morrow of Porcupine and its extension in other years.

In Porcupine proper, embracing the townships of Tisdale, Delora, Whitney and Shaw, everything is settled down to the humdrum of mining development. Each day brings its stories of new strikes, richer veins and additional tons of ore blocked out, but so common have these become that it is only the most spectacular that command attention.

Despite the inconvenience of reaching Porcupine from the railroad, a considerable influx of mining men continues daily. It is most interesting to note the growth of their confidence in the field during the first few days of their stay within its bounds. A well-known Western mining man recently said to the AMERICAN correspondent upon his arrival that he expected his stay would be short; to quote his trite expression, "I came looking for gold, not stumps." Despite the first impression, he trudged off through the mud and muck, first to the Dome, then to the Vipond, the Imperial and to the Rea, viewing many other showings in the course of his circuit. Within a week, in reply to the question, "Well, when do you expect to leave?" he abruptly said, "I shall spend the Summer right here." Another incredulous arrival from the great Goldfield of Nevada required only four days to vouchsafe the confidential information that he had seen more gold than ever before in his life.

The West Dome property consists of four undersized claims immediately adjoining the Great Dome property on the west and south, which were originally staked by C. A. Foster, who has the reputation of having been one of the pioneers successively in each of the Ontario mining camps. The property was acquired and capitalized for $3,000,000 ($5 par value) by F. Augustus Heinze, the Montana Copper King, who is now its president. It contains 160 acres. Immediately upon becoming interested in this property, Mr. Heinze put his own engineer in charge, and a new epoch began in its development. Whereas the work up to that time had consisted of shafts upon what was known as the Foster vein, Messrs. Heinze and Weiss immediately abandoned work at that point, and began shot drilling at an angle of thirty four and seven tenths degrees, very close to the Dome. At 226 feet these drills began to cut a highly mineralized sulphide ore, and a ten-stamp mill was promptly purchased. Since that time Manager Weiss has added two more shot drills, which he has put into operation in the western part of the claim.

Heinze Believes in the Camp.

Mr. Heinze's opinion of Porcupine as a camp is of great interest. He believes that while there will be some properties that will prove of little value it will have many great producing mines.

The Dome Extension's capitalization is $2,000,000 (par value $1.00). It consists of 200 acres of five claims, one of which adjoins the North East claims of the Dome upon the east. This property is in charge of Captain H. Anchor, to whose expertness the Dome Mines owes much of its present greatness. Upon this property a vein seventeen feet in width has been traced for 6,000 feet. W. S. Edwards, president of the Dome Mines, Ltd., is also president of the Dome Extension. A shot drill has recently been put into operation.

The Preston East Dome is capitalized at $3,000,000 (par value $1), and takes its name from the location of its principal holding in Delora township, one-fourth mile south of the Dome Lake, and one mile southwest of the Dome, also its three claims adjoining the Dome on the southeast and east. The large number of small veins is the peculiarity of this property. In the Golden Rose vein and the Dollar Cross vein very high values have been found. A compressor, crusher and two-stamp nissen mill, together with an adequate power plant, is being installed. Water for the mill will be pumped from Dome Lake. They will also have their own electric light plant, their own assaying outfit and are already operating their own sawmill. Diamond drilling is now being done on the Preston claim, where the first shaft will be sunk, and the work of installing a twenty-stamp mill is promised as soon as the railroad reaches Porcupine and machinery can be shipped in. The early financing methods of this company were entitled to considerable criticism, but it is understood that the management have now protected themselves against any further stock-dumping process.

The Porcupine Imperial Gold Mining Company is capitalized at $2,000,000 (par value $1.00.) The property consists of one very rich claim in Delora Township, upon which a two companion shaft has reached the 100-foot level. This property has been one of the surprises of the camp, as its claim was not at the outset highly rated. It has showed up some very remarkable ore from the beginning of its shaft sinking. At 83-foot depth, however, Manager Crampton reports a very rich strike. This property now takes rank among the better mines of the camp. Two drills and a large compressor (four-drill capacity) have been installed. R. W. Norington, a well-known Western mining man, and president of the Niagara Porcupine Mining Company, whose property lies in Delora between the Powell and the Delora Porcupine—is vice-president of this company.

One of the most interesting underground pieces of gossip this week is the constant rumor that efforts are being made to effect a merger with the Hollinger, the Vipond, and the Rea; three of the most important properties thus far developed, under the control of Bewick Moreing & Company, the renowned English firm. Any definite conclusion to these negotiations would unquestionably greatly affect the stocks of all these companies. Bewick Moreing & Company already hold control of the Rea, and a very large interest in the Hollinger. Nothing definite, however, can be learned about it up to this writing.

On Monday, the fifteenth, a daily train for freight, express and passengers began to run between Kelso and Fredericks-house, thus bringing railroad service twelve miles nearer Porcupine. The Ontario government deserve great credit for their unusual zeal in crowding work upon the Porcupine branch of the T. & N. O. railway. They still hope to get their trains as far as Golden City by June 15, although people recognize that probable delays may be experienced in completing their work. Much difficulty has been encountered with trackage through some of the muskegs, in which the grades will probably require frequent filling for months or even years to come.

SECRETS OF THE MAY WHEAT DEAL EXPOSED

Chicago Board of Trade Investigation Is to Avert Injury to the Market.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, May 20.—The officials of the Chicago Board of Trade, in ordering a thorough investigation of the manipulation by the longs in May wheat, are endeavoring to elude a possible general turning down of the big trade market by the authorities at Washington.

From the number of letters received by the writer from many sections of the United States, complaining of the forced changes in the May wheat future, it may be said without fear of contradiction that the president of the Board of Trade has received hundreds of complaints from disgruntled persons who may possibly have suffered losses and who took this method of evening up conditions with those supposed to have gotten their money.

The Armour Grain Company, through its president, George E. Marcey, has denied positively that that concern has had anything to do with the May deal as a principal. The deal does not look like an Armour deal and it does not look like a Lietstern deal.

Big Men Had Purchased

It is more than likely that some rich men, more than a year ago, believing that wheat was likely to do better, ordered the purchase of 10,000,000 bushels of the May future through the Armour Grain Company. Suffering a decline of possibly five cents on the line already purchased, the La Salle street concern was ordered to purchase an additional 10,000,000 bushels.

A still further decline in prices brought out another big buying order, and with 35,000,000 bushels as a line, a wait was made for a possible crop scare from one section or another of the Winter wheat belt of the world. The deal had been not only unprofitable, but quite unsatisfactory.

It reminded old leaders of the time when "Tin Plate" Reid attempted to corner the market at Chicago through Harris, Gates & Co. This was years ago. While this multi-millionaire (Reid) was advised differently by his brokers at Chicago, he made up his mind that the supply of corn in the country was not as large as generally believed, and an old-fashioned bull movement was inaugurated in consequence.

Farmers Unloaded on Reid

Reid's losses were large, and he was greatly put out by the actions of the farmers in unloading on him when prices were around the highest levels. The "corpse" was a big one when the deal ended.

The longs in May wheat have struck a snag not unlike the snag encountered by Reid in the way of supplies, and in addition to the larger offerings by the country the crop prospects have presented higher prices, being maintained without continued purchases being made.

The May wheat deal, which is now nearing an end, has proved to be a loss to all connected with it. The longs have suffered the loss of many a fortune, and the shorts have also been set back financially.

Just what the longs in the May future expect to do with the grain "corpse" that is to be left on their hands is known to no one, not even the principals, at this time as the Board of Trade has constructed a barrier around their movements in preventing sales being made at outside points at prices below those ruling at Chicago.

The situation in corn has veered around until the market may be called an affair of the bears. Once again, James A. Patten has sized up this cereal, as no one else in the country seemed to be able to size it. He has been short a goodly line of corn and his followers have been on the same side.

They have refused to cover on the hard spots that have been developed in the belief that with the rush of Spring farm work at an end, the country would again come to the front as a heavy seller, and that, in many instances, they would be willing to meet the lower views of buyers.

STOCK PRICES IN ASCENDENCY

Copper Shares Also in Position to Respond to Better Conditions.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, May 20.—At last the stock market has received an impetus which has brought it out of the slough of despond. The recent Supreme Court decision came none too soon, for affairs were reaching the breaking point and the general business situation was in a threatening position. A wave of optimism has spread over the country at large as a result of the government's victory over the Standard Oil Company, which has given expression in a spontaneous regaining of confidence by the American people. It has resulted in a period of aggressive bullish activity in the stock market in which the end is not at hand. Leading issues have risen from $2 to $6 per share in a moderate and healthy manner. Reactions have followed the extreme high levels, but this goes toward an added incentive for an increasing interest the coming months on the part of the public.

Good Frequently Comes from Bad.

It is a "street" axiom that good can frequently be made from what appears on the surface as being bad. This may not apply in the present case so much as in the past, for the remedy is specifically pointed out in the Standard Oil case and no hardship is wrought. Values continue undisturbed. It is a case of conducting the oil business in accordance with the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court. The Interstate Commerce Commission's report early in the year was different. It was generally expected that the railroads would at least be allowed a part of the increase in the freight rates asked for, but they were turned down flat-footed. The result was a very bad period in the stock market, but upon mature reflection it was found to be the best good for all concerned. It proved to be the turning point in the high cost of living.

Little or no interest has been taken in the stock market for a year or more by the great outside public. Accumulation has been going on by the big interests awaiting such an event as that just passed. "The heart was willing, but the body was weak," to use an oft-repeated phrase. The concerted move in stocks is bringing the public back into the speculative field again. Some of the leading interests on the "street" profess to the belief that the coming Summer will witness an active bull market in which copper shares will receive their share of attention.

Now for the Copper Merger.

Already the copper metal market has benefitted by the change of affairs while the share market has responded nobly to the bettered market conditions. The belated copper merger can now be put through on the plea of a conservation of this product of mother earth. A big part of the copper produced last year was at a loss to the company mining it. Another large proportion did not yield anything and a very small proportion brought a small profit. Truly this would seem to warrant a merger on a "reasonable" basis. Once copper is taken out of the ground it reduces the asset of the company so doing it just so much. It is different from wheat, corn, oats or any other commodity which is grown each year. Already there are signs of animation in copper circles. The recent move in the selling agency business was preliminary to greater efforts on the part of these people.

Brokers' Views

Hunt, Ellis & Co.—The principle has once for all been settled. Henceforth, mere magnitude in itself will not be accepted as proof of iniquity of our corporations. Legitimateness, not magnitude, will hereafter be the fundamental point. A corporation properly constituted and governed by fair principles will be able to do business in every State of the Union and in every country of the world without interference from the highest tribunal in the land. The incentive to build up splendid industrial corporations has not been taken away. Our material progress is not to be hindered.

Hayden, Stone & Co. Discussion of the decision will gradually die away, but its effect will be lasting. It is already appreciable in copper circles. If business is to recuperate, as is hoped, it is most interesting to speculate on the future of the metal. Production, as we know, is large; foreign consumption has also been large, larger than most people appreciate. No very great increase in demand can reasonably be expected from this source. The future of the metal, then, will depend principally on domestic demand.

H. A. Brown & Co.—The stock market has had a sharp advance this week, which to our mind marks the beginning of one of the greatest bull periods in the history of Wall and State Streets. The buying has been of the very best character and it has been found that stocks are comparatively scarce and only to be had by bidding for them. We urgently advise the purchase of stocks, believing, as we have said, that we are on the verge of a great speculation.

L. M. Taylor & Co.—We believe, as we have stated in all our market letters since the first of the year, that the main trend on security prices is upward, and in this we have been borne out by the fact that both bond and stock prices are now higher than they have been at any time since January 1. We feel that the big rise has as yet only begun and that the real bull movement will last for perhaps two years.

Wiggin & Elwell—Good crops will undoubtedly stimulate industrial activity and we expect to see the metal trades more active the latter part of the Summer. This will increase the consumption of copper and unless there is a new producting larger than we now anticipate there should be an advancing market for copper this year.

Thompson, Towle & Co. While the bear account has perhaps been materially weakened since the beginning of the week, we do not expect to see any material setback from present prices and think the market is a purchase particularly Union Pacific, A. C. P., Reading and United States Steel.

PORCUPINE STOCKS.

Furnished by J. Thomas Reinhardt, No. 38 Broad street, New York, No. 18 King street, West, Toronto, and No. 54 Devonshire street, Boston.

Trading was active in the leading issues including Hollinger, which is up 75c a share for the week, Dome Extension and Swastika 5 cents higher, while Dobie and Rea Mines sold lower under profit taking sales, and Foley-O'Brien suffered from forced liquidation. Porcupine Northern, which was put out at 50c, started in the trading around 74c and closes at 69. Porcupine Gold Mines, Preston East Dome and Porcupine Central were firm throughout the week. The Camp is decidedly busy with development work on various properties, and gold discoveries are reported almost every day.

INVESTORS BOUGHT HEAVILY AT CLOSE

[illegible] Purchasing of Stocks at [illegible] Figures, With Net Gains for Short Session.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Just at the close of the market today belated investors, alarmed lest they fail to get the stocks wanted and began purchasing freely, with the result that the market closed strong, active and at the top figures of the day, with net gains for the session. Union Pacific and Steel were the leaders and they will be the leaders in the long campaign for better times that has at last been begun in the stock market.

This campaign will run side by side with the [illegible] movement in business that is now [illegible]. The West is pessimistic [illegible] the financial situation rises in the last [illegible] gray mists of early dawn [illegible] dispelled in the West. The West will wake up in a few weeks.

One of the most bullish influences was the action taken by Attorney General Wickersham against the lumber trust. It proves that the government in future [illegible] actions will bring corrective actions and not destructive ones. Wall street [illegible] pictured but not destroyed. The bank statement was satisfactory [illegible] was [illegible]. [illegible] trading [illegible] was one [illegible] exception to the general market, [illegible] declined two points. American Cotton Oil was somewhat heavy in sympathy. Reduction of the dividend on both these stocks is expected.

Oil Bank Conserves.

Although the crisis is passed in regard to the Standard Oil Company, the National City Bank did not show in its weekly report any material shrinkage of reserves. They declined only three-tenths of one per cent. Probably the bank is holding itself in readiness to handle the reorganization of the Standard Oil Company besides making a large bid on the Panama bonds.

Prices have advanced sharply since the decision was made public. New high records for the year have been established in many of the standard issues. Steel and Union Pacific have gone in the last week to prices 10 and 15 points, respectively, above the low figures of the year. Standard Oil and American Tobacco have sold at the highest prices of the year.

Entire Market Stirred.

The entire stock market has been stirred to its foundations and the most important feature of the situation is that an unusually large percentage of the buying orders is for investment.

Millions of idle money that have been held out waiting for these decisions have finally been released into the market.

Not half the investment orders placed with brokers following the decision have been filled, because so many have been waiting for a reaction that does not come. A reaction of course, will come.

It always does after such a violent rise, but when it comes the bargain hunters will be there waiting to snatch stocks in such volume that any decline in the market in the near future will be small and brief.

The only obstacle to a renewal of general business and to a revival of active trading in Wall Street is the fear that the sweeping character of the decision will cause agitation for a more drastic interstate commerce law than that just interpreted.

Politicians are already busy with such a measure, but the substantial business interests disapprove anything of the kind, believing the law as interpreted by the court is sufficient to protect legitimate business against oppressive combinations.

The cry that the Supreme Court has passed a new law is pure nonsense. Courts are established to interpret laws and Congress has the power to repeal the Sherman anti-trust law immediately and pass another that the court cannot misinterpret. No harm, therefore, has been done and much good will result from this proof that the Supreme Court has not been stampeded by the indiscriminate denunciation of corporations.

WOOL ACTIVITY CENTRED IN WEST

Local Demand Has Petered Out, but Prices Are Well Maintained.

Though last week's activity on the local wool market has petered out, heavy transactions in the new clip wool in the far West are reported as [illegible]. [illegible] buyers are [illegible] for the crop before it has been [illegible].

[illegible] the local market buyers have generally withdrawn because the goods [illegible] and tariff outlook are still depressing factors. While mills are being pushed for deliveries it is also true that the market for woolen goods remains rather spotty, and 40 per cent of the machinery is idle. In this connection, of course, the increase in machinery throughout the country must be taken into account and some in the trade declare that the actual yardage of cloth sold this year will be up to a normal year, although this statement seems to be doubted as a general thing.

There is plenty doing in the new wool clip and buyers have already taken well over ten per cent of the new crop. Prices are said to be still a few cents out of line with Boston, but as the demand continues growers will make no concessions. However, most of the buying has been by St. Louis houses.

London Maintains Advance.

The Liverpool East India auctions opened strong at par to 5 per cent advance, with American operating only in a limited way for carpet wools, while London has maintained its advance steadily on active English and Continental competition. About 400 bales of South American wools have been shipped this week from Boston [illegible] the market there favoring such a course of action by local dealers.

Trading in fleece wools has been very moderate, while territories have moved hardly better. The woolen mills are reported to be calling for a little more stock but their demands are hardly large enough to be especially noteworthy. A limited demand for crossbred New Zealands is reported and further call for Buenos Ayres and Montevideo wools for shipment to England has developed, but otherwise the market for foreign stock has been dull.

The demand for scoured wools has not been pronounced, but a moderate demand has been evidenced. One lot of some 500 bags of fine scoured is reported at 48 to 50 cents. More or less scoured pulled wool has also been in demand, particularly A's and B's. A call from one of the dealers has about cleaned up the market of scoured East Indias.

Manufacturers Are Indifferent.

Demand from the carpet mills so far as Boston is concerned has been practically nil, supplies being extremely limited and held at firm prices, while manufacturers are showing only an indifferent attitude according to reports in the New York market.

For clothing wools of this class the demand seems to have improved quite considerably, owing supposedly to [illegible] orders on woolens in certain quarters. Prices are maintained on a steady basis.

No special demand for pulled wools has been in evidence, although some further moderate sized lots of A and B supers have moved in the range of prices noted last week.

Only a limited trade in noils is reported this week and prices have shown no particular change, being weak and, if anything, inclined to tend downward.

COTTON IS SCARCE AND PRICES SOAR

STORROW GIVES 100 NEWSBOYS A "HIKE" — CAMP IN THE SHADOW OF MT. WACHUSET

NEWSBOYS OF BOSTON OFF FOR COUNTRY AS GUESTS OF J. J. STORROW

One [illegible] newsboys are [illegible] lives to-day [illegible] guests of James J. Storrow in the [illegible] of Mount Wachuset. They are [illegible] a crowd [illegible] pavements can [illegible] dropped [illegible] delight [illegible] Storrow [illegible] atmosphere about the [illegible] yesterday [illegible] noon, of so [illegible] who were [illegible] for over Sunday.

[illegible] were 100 boys [illegible] trappings that indicated that they were off for a hike. The boys had been [illegible] by Mitchell Fishman, Alexander I. Peckam and Max Mitchell, judges of the Newsboys' Court. Everything was done with military precision.

"Get in line there—watch out—look sharp" and other such orders served to keep the company on the move and in order.

Finally the boys were marched through the station and to a special car where Mr. Storrow was waiting. When the boys caught sight of the banker there was an involuntary cheer.

"Hurrah for Mr. Storrow" came from the boys, although the leaders tried to suppress it, knowing that Mr. Storrow did not care for a demonstration of any kind.

"All aboard," sang out one of the leaders and there was a grand scramble.

"Here you," rang out, "quit your shoving."

"Well, some one's shoving me," was the reply.

"Take your time, steady there!" Max Mitchell cried, "there's plenty of room. Everybody will get a seat."

Mr. Storrow looked on smilingly. He kept an eye on the boys and saw that none of them was hurt. Soon they were all on board and eager for the bell to ring.

"Off for a good time?" Mr. Storrow was asked.

"Yes, we're going for another hike. The boys like it and I like it just as much as they do."

Max Mitchell said they were out for a "joy walk."

"We have a hundred boys in the squad," said Mitchell. "We're going as the guests of Mr. Storrow. He is a great friend of the newsboys. We're going to camp and play ball and walk and have a good time in general. We'll be back tomorrow night and the boys will be ready for Monday's papers."

NEW BROOKLINE CHURCH STARTED

This afternoon at 4 Archbishop O'Connell will perform the solemn ceremony of laying the cornerstone of St. Aiden's Church to be built on the corner of Pleasant and Freeman streets, Brookline. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Joseph Frances Coppinger, the pastor. Mgr. Splaine, rector of the Cathedral, will be master of ceremonies. The Rev. Edward F. McLeod, chaplain of the Massachusetts General Hospital, will be cross-bearer. The newly organized Holy Name Society and Society of the Children of Mary will act as a guard of honor. The procession will leave the parochial rectory at 4 o'clock. Clergymen from the neighboring parishes will assist in the ceremony.

The cornerstone, of Westerly granite, bears on one side the coat of arms of the archbishop and on another the date of erection. The stone, as well as the silver trowel, with which it will be [illegible] is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Henry [illegible] Smith of Brookline and New York.

St. Aiden's parish was established on Christmas Day. A most remarkable showing has been made by the pastor and members. In this comparatively short time funds have been created through social affairs and various collections for the purchase of the land. The edifice, when completed, will be one of the most imposing in the archdiocese. It is the hope of the pastor to celebrate the first mass there early in November. There is an intense interest among the parishioners, who comprise some of the most influential families of Brookline. On Sunday morning four masses are celebrated at Whitney Hall, Coolidge Corner. Daily mass is celebrated at the house chapel.

GIRL IS KIDNAPED, FLIGHT IN AN AUTO

HAZARDVILLE, Ct., May 20.—An alleged kidnaping which took place here last Monday became known for the the first time to-day. Nettie L. Kenyon, aged ten years, daughter of Ira B. Kenyon, was taken from the local grammar school, being called out by a woman who said she was the girl's mother and wished to speak with her. The child was taken into an auto driven by an unknown chauffeur and whisked out of town. The father believes that the woman was his divorced wife and has placed the case in the hands of a lawyer. Mr. Kenyon says that he was given the custody of the child when he secured a divorce in February 1908. He came here two months ago.

Look To Your Heels!

Do you know that in the course of an ordinary day your heels have to bear the strain of several hundred thousand foot pounds?

Every time you throw your weight forward in walking a distinct shock is sent through your heels up to your spinal column, and through your nervous system.

Nature has provided the human heel with a cushion of flesh to absorb this shock. But when man invented hard leather heels he defeated Nature's intention.

O'Sullivanize Your Walk

With O'Sullivan's Heels of New Live Rubber taking up the shock of every step you can soon learn to walk Nature's way.

If you have never worn O'Sullivan's Heels try a pair and you will be astonished at your light and buoyant step. You will feel as if you were walking on air. These heels act as a buffer against the daily grind. They are to the delicate machinery of the human body what a shock absorber is to a machine.

O'Sullivan's Heels will save your shoes. They will keep the heels straight and in good shape, and the cost is small when compared to the cost of shoes.

Made for men, women and children, and the cost is 50c a pair attached.

At all shoemakers and shoe dealers.

CARDINALS TRIM THE RUSTLERS ONCE MORE 4 TO 1

Steele Proves True to His Name Against the Tenneyites in a Fast Game at South End Park; the Eleventh Straight Loss

Rustlers Make a False Alarm Rally in the Eighth, but Only Net a Lone Tally; Tyler Pitches Fair Game for Locals

By R. W. LARDNER.

NO, they haven't broken any records yet, nor tied any. The Red Sox once lost twenty in a row, if you'll remember. Our Rustlers still have also to go to reach that proud mark.

The eleventh chapter in that Book of Defeats was entitled S. Louis 4, Boston 1. Its contents were easy to dope out after one had read the first few lines.

"Doc" Miller, specialist on poisons, was thinking about the effect of carbolic acid on a fresh mackerel in the first inning, when Rube Ellis of the Pacific coast lifted a long fly in his direction. Before directed to the national pastime. Mr the current of Doc's thoughts had been Ellis' drive had fallen safe in the vicinity of the fence. As Mr. Huggins had been passed to first, he now scored and Ellis didn't stop until third base was reached. He counted a moment later while the large Koretchy was being shot out at first base.

Tyler Looked Good Once.

Inasmuch as the Cards earned their other two runs and their victory was won by a margin of three, you can't blame Doc for the defeat, but his misjudgment undoubtedly made it easier for the Brenahans to cop. Roger himself scored one with a home run smash over the left field fence and the other was manufactured on a double by Ellis, a hit which he converted and a single by Lou, alias Steve. Evans Tmps Brennan may be held partly accountable for the fact that Evans drove in a run. The umpire called a strike on Lou, alias Steve, which the latter thought was a ball. This made him mad, and you can't do a thing with Steve when his blood is up.

Notwithstanding all that, George Tyler looked mighty good and there is much comfort in that knowledge. It means he will be a winning pitcher when the Rustlers strike a winning stride. He was fast and his curve ball broke sharply. Even the Cards will admit that he was no cinch to hit. He gave too many bases on balls to suit himself or his manager, but his pass to Huggins in the first was the only one that was turned into a run. Only one single was made off him, and it was the one Evans slapped out in a fit of rage. Two of the other four hits were doubles, one of them Eddie's cheap triple and the other one Manager Brennahan's circuit wave.

The chief obstacle in the way of a Boston victory was Bill Steele. Steele has the artistic temperament. He doesn't like to be talked to or at by his manager, and is as likely as not to pick his grub and leave the city if said manager gets too harsh. Knowing this, Mr Brennahan and the rest of the Cards are a bit careful about the conversation they address to Bill. They must have handed him some verbal bouquets yesterday, for he showed no inclination to leave town. It would have been better for the Rustlers if he had caught the noon train.

Steele Was Very Good.

Steele pitched just as good a game of ball as we have witnessed this year. He had the good habit himself, but there wasn't a chance for it to get him into trouble. He had too much stuff with it. Neither Miller nor Ingerton got a lucky hit, so you can see for yourself that Bill was there.

The attendance wasn't large enough to require extra police. The day was a huge improvement over Friday as far as weather was concerned, but good weather alone won't draw crowds.

Previous to the battle, mother, M. Tenney announced another one of the shakeups in the much abused batting order. Arthur Butler was given the lead-off position. Bill Sweeney, who has been hitting hard, was awarded second place. Henry was in his old berth and Miller, Ingerton and Goode followed as named. Tenney and the battery brought up in the rear. The new line-up didn't produce many hits, but it's doubtful if any combination would have done so, the way Steele was pitching.

During the Cards' batting practice, Mgr Brenahan took occasion to "call" some of his young pitchers—Buttermilk among the others—for their horrible work. The call was occasioned by the manner in which these youngsters served up the ball for the hitting rehearsal. They must have thought they were drilling the Cardinalmen on how to draw passes to first. As everyone knows, the St. Louis athletes lead the league in grabbing passes and don't need that kind of practice. So Roger lost his temper and delivered a curse talk, in spite of the fact that his

WILLIAMS WINS COLLEGE MEET IN CLOSE FINISH

Beats Out Dartmouth by Surprising Showing at Pratt Field; Green Was Favorite; Williams' Victory a Surprise

Records Are Smashed In Great New England College Contests at Springfield; Big Crowd Sees Many Thrilling Events

PRATT FIELD, SPRINGFIELD, May 20.—With one of the strongest squads of sprinters and middle-distance runners sent out from Williamstown in many seasons, Williams came to the front this afternoon with a rush and swamped Dartmouth and the twelve other colleges in the 26th annual N. E. I. A. A. meet held here.

The victory came as a great surprise to the admirers of the Purple and White as every college conceded the victory to Dartmouth.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology was third with 18 points, Maine fourth with 15, Vermont fifth with 12 and Amherst sixth with 11 points.

Williams secured at least one place in each of the eight events on the track except the 220 yard hurdles, in which event none of the Purple and White runners qualified.

Three first places, in the one mile run, 440 yard dash, and two mile, went a great ways toward bringing the victory home. Williams secured one place only in the field events.

Seven Records Go By Board.

Seven records went by the board, five in the track events and two in the field events.

Perhaps the next greatest surprise to Williams' winning was the big slump by the boys from Hanover. Although Dartmouth failed to win the meet, they carry home with them the championship cup, as the cup goes to the college winning the most number of meets in ten years.

During the past ten years, Dartmouth has five victories to its credit. Amherst had its name engraved on the trophy four times.

This is the first year Williams has won since 1901. The Purple and White won out in 1900 and 1901, but since those years has had to be content to be the runner up on several occasions.

Records went by the board in the 440 yard dash, 220-yard hurdles, 880-yard run, hammer throw, pole vault, one mile run and two-mile run.

Many Dark Horses.

The meet brought out many dark horses, who forced former stars to step fast to even secure a place.

Perhaps one of the biggest surprises of the meet was the mile in 4 minutes 24 2-5 seconds, made by Keith, a slight built runner of Worcester Technology. Keith had never been heard of before, but he stepped out like a veteran and won handily.

Captain S. L. Gutterson, of Vermont, captured 12 points for his team and Vermont, through the efforts of this one athlete, rested in fifth position when the meet was finished.

Fully 6,000 were gathered here at 2.30 o'clock when six sprinters from as many different colleges toed the mark in the first trial heat of the 100-yard dash, the opening event on the program. Pretty girls, wearing arm bands and waving banners of the different colleges competing, were prominent in the long uncovered grandstand.

With ideal weather and the track in perfect condition, several records were expected to go by the board. A hot sun beat down on the athletes and the spectators in the stands were forced to use umbrellas.

Several sections were reserved for the different colleges, and concerted cheering under cheer leaders, and college songs, rang out as representatives of the different colleges appeared on the field.

Bartlett Wins Shot Put.

Bartlett, the Brown giant, won in the shot put as was expected. His put of 42 feet 2⅛ inches made in the preliminaries yesterday was not bettered in today's trials. Bartlett failed in an attempt to break the shot put association mark of 44 feet 10¾ inches held by Robbins of Amherst. His best effort was 43 feet 9 inches.

A surprise was sprung in the century dash when Robeson, the Wesleyan sprinter, was shut out. He had been credited with doing the distance in close to 10 seconds, but was several yards behind Boland, the Holy Cross runner, in the heat for second men.

Fourteen runners started in the mile run. Holden, the Bates star, who was looked upon as a winner, didn't start. The runners were all bunched at the end of the first quarter, with Newton of Williams in

NAVY BEATS SYRACUSE.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 20.—The Syracuse crew lost to the Naval Academy to-day in a two-mile race on the Severn, when the Middies set a fast, powerful stroke at the start and maintained throughout the race, beating the New Yorkers by over four lengths. The distance was covered by the winning crew in 11 minutes, 2 seconds, while Syracuse crossed the line in 11 minutes, 10 seconds.

CORNELL WINS BOAT RACE AT PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., May 20.—The Cornell, Princeton and Yale crews finished in the order named in the triangular regatta on Carnegie Lake this afternoon. The Tigers finished three lengths behind Cornell and seven lengths ahead of Yale.

The race was for 1½ miles. The time was Cornell, 9 minutes 1 second; Princeton, 9 minutes 13 seconds; Yale, 9 minutes 45 seconds.

Princeton caught the water first, but the Ithacans were quick to recover, and shot to the lead. Yale was a trifler from the beginning. Throughout the race Cornell never rowed above 34 strokes to the minute. The Tigers rowed 36 till the final sprint, when they hit 38. The Yale stroke was 38 and 40.

Each of the contesting crews exhibited a different style of rowing. Yale used the distinct English variety. The oars men kept the blades perfectly straight in the swing, but there was a tendency to fall down on the finish and this defect proved its undoing.

Cornell's stroke was a most the extreme opposite of Yale's. The sweep was neither as short nor were there as many strokes to the minute as appeared to the casual observer on account of the rapid shooting of hands recovery. The backs of the men were not kept so rigid as those of the Yale men. But the Ithaca shell seemed to glide evenly over the water with scarcely any perceptible check between strokes.

The stroke of the Princeton eight was a degree between that of Cornell and Yale. There was a slight check in the running of their boat caused by the tendency of the men to give a little final jerk to their sweeps at the end of the stroke. The oars of the Tiger shell are an inch shorter than those on either of the other two boats and this fact made the Princeton oarsmen take about one stroke faster to the minute than the crews with the longer sweeps in order to get to the same run on their course.

RED SOX WILL TRAIN IN PERMANENT CAMP

No more coast to coast trips for the Red Sox, and no more "bolting out" at Hot Springs. A new system of training will be put into effect next Spring, President John I. Taylor. It will consist of his Reed Boys and the Cincinnati Reds for Clark Griffith and Garry Herrmann are also in on the scheme.

The Red Sox and Reds will have their own "hotels," their own grounds, their own training table, similar to that used by football squads, their own chef, their own specially prepared food which will not include pie, doughnuts nor any of the things not designed to build up athletes their own front and back fences for individual homers, a new crew from Springfield High School, who won both sprints in record time and form, and taking a third in the broad jump for a total of eleven points, giving his school fourth place in the meet.

The best race of the day proved to be in the mile run, which was won by J. D. MacKenzie of Exeter in the record breaking time of 4 minutes, 26 4-5 seconds, bettering the record of 4.28 3-5 made by H. P. Lawless of Brown and Nichols school two years ago, by almost two seconds and beating the world's schoolboy record made five years ago by Melvin Sheppard. MacKenzie took the lead almost at the start and raced along at a wonderful speed. It was not until the last half of the last lap that Ainsworth of Worcester Academy began to push him, with a burst of speed which for a moment threatened to bring him in the winner. By a great effort, however, MacKenzie spurted a bit more and finished several yards in the lead, the third place man being fully forty yards behind it. It was a beautiful piece of running, the winner finishing very fresh.

The second record to go by the boards was in the high jump, which was won by Johnstone of Worcester with the excellent performance of 5 feet 11 3-4 inches, this breaking the record set by Marshall, the old Yale high jumper in the Interscholastics in 1904, by two and one half inches. Such jumping would not only be a credit to any school boy performer, but in those days might come very close to winning the real Intercollegiate meet high jump. This man also added laurels to his crown by taking a second place in the running broad jump with a good leap.

WORCESTER BOYS WIN SCHOOL MEET

The Go by the Board, Old's Mark In Run Made by Exeter Academy

Exeter Athletes Finish in Second Position, With Brookline High Third, Springfield Fourth and Andover in Fifth Place

Thrilling Contests at Stadium Witnessed by Large Crowd; the Events Are Closely Contested and Finishes Exciting

By TED PARKE.

By a good sized margin Worcester Academy yesterday afternoon walked away with one of the greatest interscholastic track meets ever held in the Stadium, three records being above the average. Worcester scored 39 points, Exeter was second with 29 1-2 points, while Brookline High school sprung a surprise on the crowd by coming in third with 13 points. Owing to the phenomenal performance of a colored contestant named Drew, Springfield High School was unable to take fourth place two points behind Brookline, while Andover was a very poor fifth with only 3 1-2 points.

Worcester Academy started to fall in line for points when Cole took second in the 100-yard dash.

The day was ideal for a meet of this sort, there being little or no wind, while the cinder path was in perfect condition, and the athletes were able to show their best form and do themselves justice.

The big star of the meet was Captain Whitney of the winning team, his victories in the shotput and pole vault, and second place in the hammer throw making it possible for his team to run home with the interscholastic championship. Close behind him for individual honors came Drew from Springfield High School, who won both sprints in record time and form, and taking a third in the broad jump for a total of eleven points, giving his school fourth place in the meet.

The best race of the day proved to be in the mile run, which was won by J. D. MacKenzie of Exeter in the record breaking time of 4 minutes, 26 4-5 seconds, bettering the record of 4.28 3-5 made by H. P. Lawless of Brown and Nichols school two years ago, by almost two seconds and beating the world's schoolboy record made five years ago by Melvin Sheppard. By a great effort, however, MacKenzie spurted a bit more and finished several yards in the lead, the third place man being fully forty yards behind it.

Worcester started the big rush when the field events began. Whitney took the shot put and the pole vault, Johnstone got the high jump and second in the broad jump and also scored in the hammer throw

A night scene in Worcester.

A Safe and Sane Scheme.

The Red Sox and Reds have been using the grounds at Hot Springs in partnership this Spring for the Reds went to the Pacific Coast and left the Reds to train at the Arkansas resort in company with the St. Louis Browns. Boston and Cincinnati have been sharing the expenses at Hot Springs. They will do the same in their new camp, and the owners believe the scheme will be discovered when the system is in working order.

The next move is to secure the desired spot. The camp will probably be in Georgia or Tennessee. There are plenty of cities in both these States with enterprise enough to make an effort to land the big attraction. The Boston and Cincinnati clubs will send down scouts to look over the ground and President Taylor and Garry Herrmann may make the trip South to approve or disapprove before the selection is finally made.

ATHLETICS BOMBARD TIGER TOSSERS AND WIN, 14 TO 12

Gainor, Tiger First Baseman, Breaks Wrist and Is Out for a Month.

DETROIT, Mich., May 20.—"Wild Bill" Donovan essayed an early debut here to-day and was slaughtered by the Athletics who knocked him out of the box in three rounds. Accumulating a lead which the Tigers, despite a batting rally of importance, were unable to reach. Oldring, Collins and Coombs did some terrific hitting, the last mentioned but facing all the Detroit pitchers with three singles and a double in four times at bat.

He also scored three runs and drove in three by his vicious slashes to the outfield. The Tigers got the range on Coombs in the seventh. Encouraged by the triple of Delehanty, in the eighth they kept up the bombardment, Plank being called on to finish. The Tigers suffered a severe loss in the first inning, First Baseman Gainor being hit in the right wrist by a fast pitched ball. A bone was broken and he will be out of the game for at least a month. A triple play by Ness and Bush, made with men on first and second, was a feature.

The play occurred when Davis on a hit and run, hit on a line to Ness. He caught the ball, touched first, retiring Lash. Willett, who relieved Donovan, was hit hard in one inning only. He was taken out to allow Schaller to bat.

CLEVELAND WALLOPS THE SENATORS, 8 TO 4

CLEVELAND, O., May 20.—The Naps won their third straight game from the Nationals to-day, 8 to 4, Paige pitching swell ball.

Stovall scored in the second on his single, an out and Ball's single. Graney made the circuit in the third on a single, a gift and Easterly's sacrifice fly. After Birmingham had forced Stovall in the seventh, he registered on hits by Ball and Fisher.

Cunningham's fumble, Jackson's steal, Stovall's single, Birmingham's single, Ball's single, Cunningham's error on Fisher, and Paige's double gave the Naps five runs in the eighth.

The Longest Hit on Record

By William F. Kirk

I'VE heard of hits by Speaker, that scaled the left field fence,
I've read about full many a clout tremendous and immense;
I know about that old-time wheeze where Ryan hit a ball
That lit upon a steamer due in London late that Fall,
But the longest hit on record was hit by Dan O'Shay
When the Bankers played the Brokers just five years ago to-day.

But when it came to batting—well, Dan had the batter's itch.
His fellow brokers often said—perhaps they did but joke—
They spent their all repairing baseball fences Danny broke.
But the longest hit Dan ever made, as I set out to say,
Was made against the Bankers just five years ago to-day.

A BANKER named O'Connor waited out in centre field
When Dan O'Shay came to the plate, his nerves all calm and steeled.
Dan hit the ball an awful soak, O'Connor clenched his teeth,
And after quite a fearsome sprint, the ball he got beneath.
Just as he caught the pellet two detectives hove in sight;
He put the ball inside his shirt and told the gang "GOOD-NIGHT!"

HE ran to far-off Labrador, the land of ice and snow,
And everywhere O'Connor went the ball was sure to go.
From there he went to Canada, from there he made Bengal,
Then journeyed he to Mandalay, accompanied by that ball.
And then he tried Australia, seeking diamonds in the dirt,
But all the time he kept that ball he'd hidden in his shirt.

HE didn't like Australia, so he trekked to many a land,
From Greenland's icy mountains clear to India's coral strand.
He sweltered in strange deserts, onward, onward, day by day,
But always kept that baseball hit so hard by Dan O'Shay.
If you ever go to Charlestown, which I hope you never will,
You'll find O'Connor in a cell with that same horsehide pill.

Yes, the longest hit on record was a hit by Dan O'Shay,

HIGHLANDERS WIN FROM BROWNS: SCORE 6 TO 2

ST. LOUIS, May 20.—The Highlanders annexed their third successive game from the Browns this afternoon before the customary half holiday crowd. Warhop and Sweeney participated in the battery department, while Pelty and Stephens represented the Browns. Pelty proved easy picking for Acting Manager Hemphill's cohorts, and was replaced by Hamilton.

The bombardment in the fourth, when the Yankees garnered four runs, was Pelty's undoing and while Hamilton pitched fairly well, he was annexed for two additional runs. The visitors seemed to case along without any particular fear as to the outcome, and Warhop and Sweeney proved invincible in the points. The score:

GIANTS AGAIN BEAT PIRATES, TWO TO ONE

Race for Second Place Gets Closer by Result of Yesterday's Victory.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Fred Merkles' steal of third base in the seventh inning this afternoon after making the first hit of the day off "Lefty" Leifield, and after Merkle had struck out with painful regularity previously, started the Giants on the road to victory. It gave McGraw's men a chance to tie the score and gave them a chance to come again in the ninth and win, 2 to 1, in the most exciting game of the season, before a record crowd.

Leifield held the Giants absolutely helpless for seven innings.

REDS BEAT SUPERBAS WITH KEEFE IN THE BOX

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 20.—Clark Griffiths' Reds aided and abetted by "Bobby" Keefe, finally stopped the mad spurt of the Dodgers at Washington Park this afternoon. Cincinnati won, 5 to 1. Dahlen's lads were lucky to get the one. Had Keefe been a little less careless in the sixth, the Superbas would have been shut out. Score:

LEADERS AGAIN BEATEN BY CUBS: SCORE 7 TO 4

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 20.—"King" Cole, of the Cubs was headed for an aviation meet when, in the sixth inning Chance brought forth three figured Brown. Score: Chicago 7, Philadelphia 4.

The peculiar part of the play was that all of the Phillies' scores were of the home run variety, Titus plugging one in the fifth and Fred Luderus and Manager Dooin lifting four-bag drives in the ninth.

Earl Moore acted the role of the "Come Back Kid" but he hardly ventured "near" for the Cubs carved his curves and he was given some almshouse support by his team mates, the usually steady Knabe again mussing matters. Score:

CARDINALS NEARLY SHUT OUT RUSTLERS

Tenney's Men Lose Their Batting Streak When It Would Help Them.

team had won four games in succession and was about to win another. The monologue and the downcast mien of the persons to whom it was addressed served as a diversion to the early comers.

Then Huggins Scored.

Huggins was handed a base on balls right at the start. Hauser's liner went to Sweeney. Then came Ellis' triple over Miller's head. Rube counted while Sweeney was throwing out Konetchy.

Tyler gave a nice exhibition of pinch pitching in the fourth. He got himself into a hole by walking Ellis, Koney and Mowrey, Evans flying out meanwhile. George then coaxed Oakes to hit into a double play, which retired the side without a tally. Bresnahan opened the fifth with a double to left and Steele sacrificed, but Higgins and Hauser, the midgets, popped flies to B. Sweeney.

Bresnahan's homer came in the seventh, with no one on base. One was gone in the eighth when Ellis doubled to right centre. Koney flied to Goode, but Evans shot a single over second and Rube came across on it.

The Rustlers got two or three false starts in the early rounds. Fast double plays stopped them on most occasions. The lone run occurred in the eighth, when Tyler, who had strolled, completed the circuit on Sweeney's double.

Mike Mowrey and Sweeney did some classy fielding. Bill had eleven chances, some of them tough ones. Mike used his left fin to great advantage in checking drives that were intended for hits by the unfortunate Rustlers. Score:

LAWRENCE WINNER OVER BROCKTON TEAM

New England League Leaders Are Unable to Hit Pearson.

LAWRENCE, May 20.—Lawrence defeated Brockton to-day 4 to 2 in a great game. Both pitchers were in good form.

Briggs scored in the second on a double, a sacrifice and a wild pitch. In the sixth after Kennedy had singled, Briggs slammed the ball over the centre field fence. The last run was made on two hits and a pass. Brockton's first run came on Smith's double and McLane's single. The other runs were Boardman's homer in the ninth.

McLane was put out of the game in the ninth while at bat for disputing with Umpire Fleming. The score:

WOLFGANG PITCHES WELL AND LOWELL WINS

LOWELL, May 20.—Pitcher Wolfgang had New Bedford under his thumb this afternoon and Lowell won, 4 to 1, with 3,000 fans enjoying the sport. Wolfgang did not give a pass, and in six of the nine innings, only eighteen men faced him. In the ninth his own error, which was excusable, followed by a hit by Merrill, and a throw into the bleachers brought Bauman across with the Whalers' lone run.

Bushelman was effective for New Bedford after the first session. Fluharty's catch of Bauman's fly in the sixth was a feature. The score:

LYNN WINS IN SIX INNINGS VIA FOG

LYNN, May 20.—A dense fog stopped the battle at Ocean Park this afternoon after Fall River had tied the score in the seventh inning, and the decision went to Lynn. After Umpire Walsh had called the game, Manager O'Brien of Fall River rushed on the field and the official was surrounded by players who caused no trouble, though the excitement was intense.

Harrington's batting won the decision for the Ocean Park team in the seventh when he poled a triple that scored two runs. Owing to the fog, which started in the second round, eight two-baggers were made, as the fielders were unable to see the ball. Callahan, the star short stop of Lynn, was injured in the sixth and was forced to retire. The score:

BURKETT'S TEAM WIN FROM HAVERHILL

HAVERHILL, May 20.—Haverhill's loose fielding and Worcester's batting gave the visitors a good start in today's game, and they won from the locals, 5 to 1. Friel was hit freely enough, while Haverhill didn't find Hale at all.

In the eighth Courtney hit for two bases and scored on Aubrey's and Ganley's outs, the only run of the game for the home team. The score:

Victory Perches Once Again On Standard Of Providence Team

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 20.—Providence won a game to-day after losing 14 straight. The Grays took the champions into camp, 10 to 6. Bedient was given a trial in the box by Collins. He is one of the Grays' latest importations from the Boston Americans. He made a favorable impression by his coolness in the box, but blew up in the fourth. Providence scored first on a single by Anderson, a sacrifice and Alperman's boot of Perry's grounder. Rochester came back with three hits and a base on balls in the fourth. Lavender replaced Bedient in the fifth, but was wild and Rochester scored two runs on three passes and two singles.

McLeod finished the game for Providence. One run had been scored off Holmes in the seventh. He had filled the bases with one out when McConnell was called in.

He retired the side, but was touched up for four hits in the next inning with a base on balls and an error, good for four runs. He was hit hard again in the ninth while McLeod held firm. Score

PRINCETON PUTS CRIMP IN HARVARD

Hands Them a 5 to 0 Defeat, Woodle Holding Crimson to Only Three Tiny Hits.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 20.—One of the largest crowds that ever attended a Harvard-Princeton baseball game was present to-day to see these old rivals play and also to see the triangular regatta between Cornell, Yale and Princeton. Adverse weather conditions during the morning kept many more thousands away, but at it was there were nearly fifteen thousand present.

This was "Straw Hat" day in Princeton and the freshmen, who were allowed to doff their small black caps to-day, were eager to smash their new head gear in celebration of a Tiger victory.

The game was scheduled for 2.30 and long before that time the stands began filling up. The Harvard team was supported by a delegation of about one hundred students, who were seated together in the grandstand. Cornell had a bunch of rooters in the stands to support their crew.

The teams took the field at 2.10 and began warming up, but the game did not begin until 2.45. The batteries were McLaughlin and Reeves for Harvard, and Woodle and Lackeye for Princeton.

The Tigers started in scoring early, putting three men across the plate in the first inning, and the Princeton stands were in an uproar. Princeton secured another in the third and put the game on ice by sending another man over the plate in the eighth.

White, the big Tiger captain, had a great day at the bat, getting four hits out of as many times at bat. The game was remarkable in that both teams played errorless ball, outside of the mistake made by McLaughlin. Woodle was in great form, holding Harvard to three hits.

YET IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE--By TOM POWERS

CONSELMAN FANS 21 MEN AND WINS

Single and Home Run Give Brown the Game In the Ninth.

PROVIDENCE, May 20.—In a game in which neither team scored until the ninth inning, Brown snatched victory from defeat this afternoon and by a single and a home run beat the Columbia team by the score of 2 to 1. The contest was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, with Conselman having a shade on Lee. Conselman not only held the visitors to four hits, but in addition fanned twenty-one men out of a possible twenty-seven.

Lee was touched up for five hits, and struck out six men. Columbia scored in the first of the ninth on a hit, a base on balls and five stolen bases when Snell lost his head.

In the same inning Brown got her two tallies on a base on balls, two stolen bases and two hits. Saunders, at short for Columbia, played a great game, making two stops of line drives that would have otherwise meant runs. The score:

ERRORS WERE COSTLY.

Even Ninth Inning Rally Was Not Sufficient.

CLINTON, May 20.—A ninth inning rally, in which three runs were made and two men on bases when the last man was out, did not suffice for Clinton High school in the first local Wachusett League game, and Fitchburg High school won 6 to 4. Both pitchers were hit hard and the errors were costly.

RINDGE WINS GAME.

Beats Dorchester High by 6 to 2 Score.

The Rindge Manual Training School team of Cambridge beat the Dorchester High nine for the second time this season on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon, 6 to 2. Rindge won the game in the first inning, after Scully, the first man up, went out on a ground ball. Kriger lined out a two-sacker, which upset the Dorchester team. Armstrong, the next man up, was safe on an error by Williams, Dorchester's first sacker. With both men on bases, Murphy landed on the sphere for a three-sacker, scoring Kriger and Armstrong, and scored himself on an error by Sullivan on a hard grounder by Fritz.

Fitzgerald pitched a good game for the Rindge team, striking out fourteen batters, fanning Sullivan and Roeler each time they were up. "Ginger" Fraser, as usual, was the star of the Dorchester team, making two hits. Brennan pitched a good game, but was unlucky, his team making six errors, which unnerved him. He struck out six of the Rindge star hitters and fielded his position in fine style.

YALE WINS EASILY FROM HOLY CROSS

Mount St. James Pitchers Are Wild and Eli Batsmen Have Eye.

WORCESTER, May 20.—Yale defeated Holy Cross this afternoon on Fitton Field by placing hits when they meant runs. Dunne started the game for Holy Cross, but he grew wild and was relieved in the sixth when six runs had come over. With the bases full, none out and the top of the batting list up, Lynch was sent in and retired the side, allowing only one more run.

Yale scored in the first on a base on balls and a single by Thompson. In the third, fourth and fifth one each came over, and in the sixth a base on balls, a passed ball and three hits gave three runs. Holy Cross got to Freeman in the sixth for three runs and Scott was sent in to relieve him.

But if you really knew anything at all you'd wise up to the fact that Scotty and I haven't begun to hit them as far as we're going to later, when the warm weather comes."

"You think you've seen our best hitting," continued Mr. Ingerton. "Well, you want to stay out here in July. I usually start slugging [illegible] that time. There [illegible]

"Down in the New York State League," said Mr. Miller, "the [illegible] specialists used to pay me a commission for every ball I [illegible] squarely. The only fans who escaped [illegible] were those who had [illegible] entrances [illegible] for [illegible] cents [illegible] afford to get enough for two, so they'd stuff one ear full and then turn that side of the head toward the plate when I came to bat."

Some Hit, That.

Mr. Ingerton—This talk about a "lively ball" makes me sick. It's the man with the bat that counts, not the ball. Why, they used to pitch medicine balls at Altoona. I had a friend over in Williamsport who needed exercise. He asked me to get him one of these balls. I couldn't afford to buy one and there was no chance of sticking it in my pocket and walking away with it. So [illegible] just hit one over there?"

Mr. Miller—When my turn at bat came in Chatham there wasn't any infield. The shortstop and the three basemen used to move out to the outfield and stand in line with the three guys who played out there. When there were men on bases, all the opposing players except the pitcher [illegible] at the time of the earthquake. The wires were all down and there wasn't any mail [illegible] one [illegible] I figured the folks back in Chatham would want to know whether I was alive or dead, and I wondered how I could reassure them. A [illegible] dawned on me all at once. That afternoon I learned the exact distance from Frisco to Chatham, which is near Detroit. Then I figured that I would have to hit a ball to [illegible] the required distance. [illegible] one of my wallops in the [illegible] and two weeks later [illegible] to come [illegible] from my brother [illegible] all right and we ate [illegible] All well and [illegible]

This seemed to shock Mr. Ingerton, for his breath came in short gasps for a moment.

Has to Keep His Average Down.

Reporter—How does it happen that sometimes you strike out and sometimes pop up flies or knock easy ground balls?

Mr. Ingerton—I lost the best job I ever had by batting 1.042 for an entire season. When the following Spring came none of the pitchers in that league would report unless some sort of limit was placed on my hitting. I wouldn't stand for it, so I was released. But I had to come down off my high horse. I was forced to sign a contract in another league which provided that I shouldn't hit safely more than twice in every game. It was discouraging at first, but I got used to it. My present contract forbids my batting more than .450 at any stage of the season.

HAPPY NEWSBOYS WIN FROM PAUL REVERES

Pass's Phenomenal Twirling Gives Newsies an 19 to 2 Victory.

Playing in true big league style the Happy Newsboys trounced the crack Paul Revere nine of Lexington by the score of 19 to 2 on the Common yesterday afternoon. This makes the fifth straight victory for this speedy bunch of amateur ball tossers, and, judging by the way they have been going of late, there is no stopping them in their mad race to set up a new amateur record for consecutive victories.

Pass, who was on the mound for the Newsboys, pitched phenomenal ball fanning eighteen batters, and allowing but three lone bingles in the nine act matinee. This youthful slab artist had everything that goes to win games—speed, control, curves and a cool head all being his.

The Paul Reveres used four pitchers, but they all looked alike to the newsboy champs. The score:

DAVIDSON'S PITCHING WINS FOR MEDFORD

Turns Table on Malden High by Not Allowing but One Hit in the Game.

MEDFORD, May 20.—Medford High turned the tables on Malden High in the second game of the Suburban League series this afternoon by winning, 2 to 1. Pitcher Davidson was in rare form and allowed but one hit. He struck out eighteen men, sending them down in one, two, three order in the last two innings.

Malden's loose fielding at critical moments was very costly, although the winners were not extra strong in the infield. Malden scored their only run in the seventh inning. Butler, after reaching third on his three-bagger, came home on an error by Third Baseman Condon, who let a ball from Pitcher Davidson go through him.

The victory over Malden and the defeat of Melrose by Somerville to-day places Medford in the lead in the Suburban League. Score:

CRIMSON SECOND WINS.

Beat Worcester Academy Team on Diamond Because of Errors

WORCESTER, May 20.—The Harvard second team defeated the Worcester Academy team on Gaskill Field, 3 to 1, today. Harvard freshmen scored their first run in the second and added another in the fifth and made their last in the seventh, while the Academy lads had no opportunity to cross any of their members across home until the eighth when Calman scored on Brittingham's two-bagger to centre with two out. The score:

COLUMBUS, O., May 20.—Manager Cantillon of Minneapolis signed Sam Leever, the Pittsburg veteran pitcher, recently released, for his club. Leever will come here from his Goshen, O., home Saturday to join the club.

SCHOOLBOYS CLASH IN A LIVELY MEET

But Worcester Academy Runs Away With Contests at the Stadium.

The third record broken in the meet was in the pole vault, Whitney of Worcester setting the new mark with a vault of 11 feet 1 and one quarter inches. This bettered the mark set by Gardner of Andover three years ago by half an inch.

Another good time was in the half-mile, Burke of Worcester Academy coming within two-fifths of a second of equalling the record, his time being 1:59 2-5. This was also another race which was nip and tuck from the start to the finish, the winner taking the lead from Stone of Brookline on the last turn and beating him to the tape by barely a yard. The time in this event was especially fast inasmuch as a bad wind caught the runners full in the face on the second turn, this being the only wind of the afternoon which bothered any of the runners.

Whitney's putting of the shot was another good feature of the meet. He won this event easily, outdistancing all his competitors by at least five feet, his put of 43 feet 1 inch coming within two and one-half inches of the record set by Eddie Hart of Exeter in 1907. After the competition had ended Whitney put the shot 44 feet 1 inch but the mark was not allowed to stand as a record as it is a rule in the Harvard Interscholastic meets that the mark reached shall be made in competition.

Drew's Running a Feature.

Worthington of Exeter in the broad jump was also good, coming within two and three-quarter inches of the record set in 1901. His leap of twenty-one feet ten and one-quarter inches was easily the best done in the Interscholastic meets in the Stadium for a number of years.

The running of Drew, the Springfield lad, in both of the dashes was also a feature. Cornell, the former Exeter star, was very evidently not in form for he failed to place in either of the events. Drew, the colored lad, won both of these events without half trying, taking his century by at least a ten-yard lead in the good time of 10 1-5 seconds while he fairly walked away with the furlong dash in the creditable time of 22 1-5 seconds.

It is a fact well worth notice that Worcester failed to score only in two events, both of these the hurdles, and that all of the points scored by this school were either in first or second places. Seldom does one see a team come to the Stadium so well balanced and after all it must be admitted that it is generally the team which is well balanced that can come out of a meet with the first honors.

Brookline High's strength was somewhat of a surprise, although the team only took one first place, that by Shedden in the high hurdles. This race was also won in slow time, but the Brookline boys trotted along pretty fast in the furlong dash and took second and third place. In scoring its thirteen points Brookline called upon the services of only four men, this fact adding somewhat in glory to its feat.

The summary of events:

120-yard hurdle (Trials)—First heat won by Shedden B. H. S., second, Goady Exeter. Time—16 3-5s. Second heat won by Warlington, Exeter; second, Snyder, Andover. Time—17 1-5s.

100-yard dash (Trials)—First heat won by Knowles, Worcester Acad., second, Cornell, Exeter. Time 10 3-5s. Second heat won by Drew, Springfield H. S., second, Cole, Worcester Acad. Time—10 1-5s. Third heat won by Teschner, Lawrence H. S., second, Foley, Needham H. S. Time—10 3-5s.

100-Yard Dash, (Final)—Won by Drew, Springfield, H. S.; second, Cole, Worcester Academy; third, Teschner, Lawrence H. S. Time—10 1-5 seconds.

One mile run—Won by Mackenzie, Exeter, second Bosworth, Worcester Acad., third, Benson, Dedham H. S. Time—4m. 26 4-5s., new world's schoolboy record.

120-Yard High Hurdles (Trials)—Won by Shedden, Brookline H. S., second, Goady, Exeter, third, Snyder, Andover. Time 17 1-5 seconds.

880-Yard Run—Won by Burke, Worcester Academy, second, Stone, Brookline H. S.; third, Riley, Lawrence H. S. Time—1 m. 59 2-5 seconds.

220-Yard dash (trials)—First heat won by Knowles, Worcester Academy, second, Dowley, Hyde Park H. S. Time—23 2-5s. Second heat won by Drew, Springfield H. S., second, Cole, Worcester Academy. Time—23s. Third heat won by Teschner, Lawrence H. S.; second, Cornell, Exeter. Time—23 1-5s.

220-yard dash (final)—Won by Drew, Springfield H. S.; second, Cole, Worcester Academy; third, Teschner, Lawrence H. S. Time 22 1-5s.

220-Yard hurdles (trials)—First heat won by Martin, Andover, second, Copper, Brookline H. S. Time 26 4-5s. Second heat won by Hyatt, Exeter, second, Shedden, Brookline H. S. Time—26 4-5s. Third heat—Won by Walker, Exeter, second, Hulbert, Andover. Time—26 3-5s. Fourth heat won by McClellan, Worcester Academy. Time—26 4-5s.

[illegible] semi-final heat 220-yard low hurdles—Won by Martin, Andover, second, Copper, Brookline H. S. Time 26 4-5s. Second semi-final—Won by Hulbert, Andover, second, Shedden, Brookline H. S. Time—26 2-5s.

220-Yard Low Hurdles, (Final)—Won by Martin, Andover, second, Shedden, Brookline H. S.; third, Copper, Brookline H. S. Time 26 1-5 seconds.

Shotput, 16 lbs.—Won by Whitney, Worcester Academy, second, Meanix, Boston English School; third, Thompson, Worcester Academy. Distance—[illegible].

Pole vault—Won by Whitney, Worcester Academy; second, Carter, Exeter; third, between Gordon of Andover and Camp of Exeter. Height—11 feet 1¼ inches, breaking former record by one inch, made in 1909 by Gardner of Andover.

Broad jump—Won by Worthington of Exeter; second, Johnstone, Worcester Academy; third, Drew of Springfield High School. Distance—21 feet 10¼ inches.

High jump—Won by Johnstone, Worcester Academy, second, MacDougal, Exeter; third, Rigas, Andover. Height—5 feet 11¼ inches, being a new record, the former mark by Marshall of Andover in 1904, with a jump of 5 feet 9¾ inches.

Hammer Throw—Won by Kirkpatrick, Exeter; second, Whitney, Worcester Academy, third, Gile, Andover. Distance 158 feet 3¾ inches.

120-Yard High Hurdles, (Final)—Won by Shedden, Brookline H. S., second, Goady, Exeter, third, Snyder, Andover. Time 17 1-5 seconds.

440-yard dash—Won by Brown, Exeter; second, Libby, Worcester Academy; third, Capper, Brookline H. S. Time, 51 seconds.

THREE COLLEGES LEAD IN BIG STADIUM MEET

Penn, Cornell and Michigan Favorites for the Great National Contest This Week—Spectacular Meet Is Certain—Records Are Likely to Be Smashed

By TED PARKE.

THE Intercollegiate meet—the big thing in college track and field—will be the attraction for sport lovers next Friday and Saturday afternoons at the Stadium on Soldiers' Field. It promises this year to be an extraordinary affair.

The times and distances made this year by the men who will represent the colleges show that every event will be most bitterly contested. Records are due to go in more than one event, and it will not surprise many if the meet surpasses in brilliancy of performances, the contest of 1907, when six of the intercollegiate records went by the boards.

Three colleges have demonstrated that they have unusually good performers in their ranks—Pennsylvania, Cornell and Michigan. For some reason or other the last named college has been ignored thus far this year by the dopesters, while other colleges have been mentioned as possible winners without good reason.

Michigan has a number of phenomenal performers on its roll. First there is Craig, undoubtedly the fastest man the country has ever produced in the furlong dash, he having broken the record in this event last year with a sprint of 21 1-5 seconds. He should win this event again this year, as there is no one in the intercollegiate world who has come anywhere near this record. That would give five points to the Wolverines.

Craig's running in the century during the past five years warrants giving him first in this event. This promises five points more for Michigan. Captain Horner of Michigan, the shot putter, can scarcely be beaten. He has put the shot over forty-eight feet in practice, and this is good at any time for a first. He is expected to break the record. Five points more for Michigan.

Michigan a Strong Bidder.

Haimbaugh, the two-miler, is another good man and may place, while there is also Lapman, the winner of third in the broad. It will easily be seen therefore that the Maize and the Blue are decidedly strong bidders for the honors. One point more should be mentioned and that is that Ross, the Michigan sprinter, has not been getting the credit he deserves. He has been running Craig almost off his feet in every race this year, and some claim it is a certainty that he will place in both sprints.

Despite these known facts about Michigan, everything seems to point at present to a hard struggle between Pennsylvania and Cornell for the victory. Cornell has recently uncovered such a galaxy of stars as has seldom been seen on one team in any one year.

The most startling time made by any member of this team this year was by Captain McArthur in the quarter mile last Saturday in the Princeton-Cornell dual meet when he went the distance in 49 2-5s. This seems to stamp him as a sure winner, for it is the best made since the wonderful Taylor of Pennsylvania broke the record in three-fifths of a second less time.

Then there is Jones, who has run the mile in 4m. 18 3-5s., defeating Paull of Pennsy, who holds the intercollegiate record a fraction of a second less. Berna, the two-miler, is another man who promises to make the dust fly. Against Penn he ran in 9m. 31 4-5s. Such time has not been equaled by anyone this year, and he should be first.

Putnam is another man who has been overlooked in the calculations. He is a half-miler and the consistent manner in which he has been running near the 1:56 mark stamps him as a hard man to beat.

Penn Has a Good Team.

Stibolt, the Cornell hurdler, is no mean performer over the flights. He was beaten out by inches by Haydock of Penn, when the latter ran the event in 15 3-5s., and he has taken the measure of Dwight of Princeton in both of the hurdles in fast time. He will win a place.

Ford, the sprinter, must be reckoned with in the furlong and with luck he may squeeze in a point for his alma mater.

Pennsylvania has not the number of first place men that Cornell has, but on the other hand the Quakers have many good performers, who seem likely to take a number of seconds and thirds, and these rapidly total into a winning score.

Burdick, the high jumper, seems to have a first assured. He is clearing the bar regularly at 6 feet 2 inches, and this is better than anyone else has done. In this same event is Farrier, who won a place in the high last year. Barring some accident he should take another point or so for his team here.

Captain Minds is certain of places in both sprints. He is too experienced a runner to be beaten out by any youngsters who may break in from the Yale or Princeton teams, and with anything like form sticking out on him he should take second in both of the sprints, despite the fact that Ford of Cornell has beaten him in the longer one.

Paull, the miler, was not in top notch form when he was beaten by Jones of Cornell. If he can run faster than he did at that time he may pull out a winner, but at all events it is a safe bet that to do this the mile record will have to be broken again. With good conditions this event—with Jones, Hanavan, Paull and Jacques, the Harvard runner—should prove one of the greatest races which will ever be run in the Stadium, and it would not be surprising were the amateur record of 4 minutes 14 seconds to go.

Yale Has a Hard Task.

Haydock of Pennsylvania has run the high hurdles in 15 3-5 seconds. It is said he is capable of repeating this performance at any time. If this be the case he is slated for a first or second in the big meet. He will, of course, be up against Chisholm of Yale and Garrells of Michigan, neither of whom he has met. Until the meet his fate cannot be determined, although it looks as though he might defeat the Yale champion. He has also run the low timbers in 25 seconds, a time which means that he must be reckoned with in this race.

Bodley, who ran close to Putnam in the half when the former made his remarkable time, and Boyle, the miler, who won points in the intercollegiates last year, will prove to be strong men, while Hough, the quarter miler, may also win points. Mercer, the wonderful all round man on the Penn team, has not been used much this year, being a bit out of trim. He will, however, be in trim for the big meet, and he is a man to be watched.

Wolle, the winner of third in the two miler last year, is running well this season and should give some one a hard race.

As for Yale, Chisholm, the intercollegiate hurdler, will have his hand more than full this year in holding his laurels if he succeeds in doing this at all. Any one of the hurdlers from Cornell or Penn may take them away from him. He seems, however, certain of a place in both of these events.

Yale sprinters seem to have been showing up pretty well this year, but they haven't really had a good tryout. There hardly seems to be a chance of their placing, or for that matter even qualifying for the finals.

Jacques Will Shine.

Jacques of Harvard is bound to shine in either the mile or the half. His time in both has been good this year, and Harvard looks to him to win points. His team mate, Withington, will also bear watching. He recently broke the Harvard record in the two-mile, and his time was almost as good as that made by Berna of Cornell. Many look to him for second at least, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that he will at least place. Lawless, another Harvard distance man, may fit in in either of the long runs, for his times this year have been consistently good.

Preble, Harvard's half-miler, has been credited with 1:57. This time, if he can repeat it, should win him a place, despite the fact that this event promises to be one of the fastest on the program because of the number of old-timers who will take part.

Kelley, the quarter-miler, is more or less of a dark horse. He has not been pushed in any of his races this year. Last Thursday, with a bad wind, he ran the distance, wading through a field of twenty men, in fifty seconds flat, without hardly pushing himself. There should be a battle royal between him and McArthur of Cornell, who has the best time this year to his credit.

The only other points Harvard can hope to get will be in the hammer throw. Cable has the best throw of the year to his credit and last week in practice made the phenomenal throw of 170 feet. If he can repeat this or in fact come anywhere near to this mark he will win.

YALE JUNIORS BEAT PRINCETON ON FIELD

At Dual Freshman Meet, Blues Score 67 2-3 to Tigers' 36 1-3; Records Broken.

YALE FIELD, NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 20. Yale won the dual freshmen track meet from Princeton 1914 to-day, 67 2-3 to 36 1-3. Two records were broken, Norris, of Yale, winning the half mile in 2 minutes 1 2-5 seconds, and Dowling, of Yale, the mile run in 4 minutes 36 2-5 seconds. McLanahan, of Princeton, was the individual star of the meet, capturing both hurdle races. Titcomb, of Yale, starred in the sprints, taking seven points. Summary:

100-Yard Dash—Won by Howard, Yale. Time 10 2-5 seconds; second, Titcomb, Yale; third, Azer, Princeton.

220-Yard Dash—Won by Titcomb, Yale. Time 23 1-5 seconds; second, Stewart, Yale; third, Azer, Princeton.

120-Yard Hurdles—Won by McLanahan, Princeton. Time 16 4-5 seconds; second, Davidson, Yale; third, Schmidt, Princeton.

220-Yard Hurdles—Won by McLanahan, Princeton. Time 26 4-5 seconds; second, Scoville, Yale; third, Hoffman, Yale.

440-Yard Dash—Won by Stewart, Yale. Time 50 4-5 seconds; second, Platt, Yale; third, Nesler, Princeton.

880-Yards Run—Won by Morris, Yale. Time 2 m. 1 2-5 seconds (new record); second, Hayes, Princeton; third, Baxter, Yale.

One Mile Run—Won by Dowling, Yale. Time 4m. 36 2-5 seconds (new record); second, Ingersoll, Princeton; third, Brady, Yale.

Two Mile Run—Won by Hendricks, Yale. Time 10m. 20 3-5 seconds; second, Bishoff, Princeton; third, Stottler, Yale.

Running Broad Jump—Won by Merritt, Yale. Distance 20 feet seven and one-quarter inches; second, McEldowney, Princeton, 20 ft. 4½ inches; third, Walcott, Yale, distance 18 ft. 5½ inches.

Putting the Shot—Won by Harbison, Yale, distance 38 ft. 3¼ inches; second, Walcott, Yale, distance 34 ft. 8 inches; third, Carpenter, Yale, distance 34 ft. 4 inches.

Throwing the Hammer—Won by Waller, Princeton, distance 125 ft. 0 inches; second, Speers, Princeton, distance 107 feet 1 inch; third, Cooney, Yale, distance 103 ft. 3 inches.

Running High Jump—Won by Walcott, Yale; distance 5 ft. 6 inches; second, Searns, Princeton; distance 5 ft. 4 inches; third, tie between Auer, Yale; Schmidt, Princeton, and Fox, Yale, distance 5 ft. 2 inches.

ALLSTON CUP PLAY.

Qualifying Round in the Spring Match.

The qualifying round for the Spring cup was played at the Allston Club yesterday, the first sixteen to qualify for the cup and the rest of the field for the consolation cup. T. P. Harrison led the field with a net score of 69. Brice S. Evans had the best gross score of 73.

The summary:

T. P. Harrison 69, B. S. Evans 70, F. I. Jaquith 70, S. R. Dunham 70, T. H. Baldwin 70, I. F. Marshall 71, C. A. Fisco 71, T. A. Ashley 72, F. L. Carter, Jr., 72, R. Manning 72, L. A. Wilkie 74, A. S. Clark 74, J. W. Graham 74, J. H. Goodspeed 74, F. N. Robbins 75, W. C. Hills.

HOWE WINS TWO HONORS.

A large field of players turned out at the Newton Golf Club yesterday afternoon in the handicap medal play event for members. H. H. Howe took away the net trophy with his score of 71. This was also the qualification for the Spring cup, and the first 16 net scores qualified and will play off at handicap match play during the coming month. Summary:

H. H. Howe, 71, E. F. Lockwood, 72, R. L. Pitman, 76, H. I. Cook, 77, C. W. Mellen, 77, C. P. Smith, 78, C. N. Fitts, 78, Miss M. E. Cobb, 78, C. B. Eddy, 79, P. M. Kenway, 79, E. P. Tuttle, 79, G. ### NEWTON TEAM WINS.

The Newton Centre Squash Tennis team defeated the Belmont team in the matches yesterday. The Newton team took all matches in the singles and doubles.

Summary: Singles—Dan, Newton, defeated Warland, Belmont, 4—6, 8—6, 6—3; Wilbar, Newton, defeated Wellington, Belmont, 6—0, 6—8, 6—3; Plympton, Newton, defeated Parker, Belmont, 6—2, 6—3. Doubles—Spaare and Wales, Newton, defeated Bay and Gardiner, Belmont, 7—5 and 6—2; Walworth and Porter, Newton, defeated Young and Sherman, Belmont, 6—3, 6—2.

OAKLEY WINS THREE.

The Oakley Tennis Club of Watertown visited the Winchester Country Club yesterday afternoon and won three out of the five matches.

The feature match of the afternoon was the doubles between Coues and R. E. Kent of Oakley and Bradlee and Jewett of Winchester, the former pair winning the last two sets in fast finishes after being beaten in the first of the matches.

Norwell of Winchester beat Beals of Oakley, 6-3, 6-3; Knight, Winchester, beat Goodrich, Oakley, 8-6, 6-3; Whiting, Oakley, beat Boyden, Winchester, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4. First doubles—Kent and Jackson, Oakley, beat Ives and Black, Winchester, and Jackson, Oakley, beat Ives and Black, Winchester, 6-2, 6-4. Second doubles—Coues and R. E. Kent, Oakley, beat Bradlee and Jewett, Winchester, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Golf Tie at Woodland.

Two classes played in the handicap medal play tourney of the Woodland Golf Club yesterday. A tie resulted for the net trophy between J. E. Kedian and S. E. Thayer, who were each 75. Kedian had the best gross card, also of 79.

Class A—J. E. Kedian 75, S. E. Thayer 75, L. A. Spinney 76, R. M. Purves 76, L. E. Chester 81, C. P. Wharf 85.

Billy Muldoon Shows How

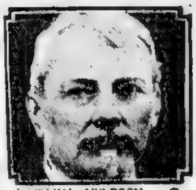
"You Must Enter Into the Thing with Sufficient Spirit and Energy," Declares the Greatest Trainer of the Century

Train the Mind to Think Quick and the Body to Act Instantly for the Mind and You Are Bound to Succeed; That's All



WILLIAM MULDOON

By WILLIAM MULDOON.

Written expressly for the Sunday AMERICAN by the world's most noted conditioner of men.

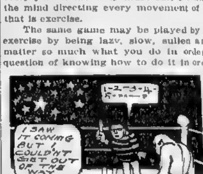
WE often hear people making the inquiry, "Is such and such or so and so good exercise?"—that is to say, walking, running, rowing, playing games of all sorts, boxing, wrestling, fencing, swimming—and usually the answer will be in favor of some particular game that the person who is answering likes best to indulge in.

As a matter of fact, exercise is effort and effort is exercise. It doesn't matter what you do, what game you play, you must enter into the thing with sufficient spirit and energy to make an honest effort. Every move of every part of the body must call for an effort, or rapid succession of efforts, the mind directing every movement of the body or any part of the body that is exercise.

The same game may be played by the same person without getting any exercise by being lazy, slow, sullen and indifferent. Therefore it does not matter so much what you do in order to get the exercise; it is simply a question of knowing how to do it in order to get the exercise out of it, and unless you are taught how and driven with a more powerful mind than your own to a point where you must make the effort, you are only making a farce of the thing and wasting your time. This is where Mr. Trainer again has to be the right man in the right place and able to perform his duties.

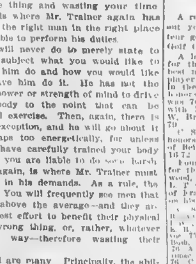


It will never do to merely state to your subject what you would like to have him do and how you would like to have him do it. He has not the will power or strength of mind to drive his body to the point that can be called exercise. Then, again, there is the exception, and he will go about it perhaps too energetically, for unless you have carefully trained your body to a point where it is equal to the demands, you are liable to do some harsh—perhaps some serious—damage. There, again, is where Mr. Trainer must be well up to his calling and very cautious in his demands. As a rule, the over-energetic subject is a very rare case. You will frequently see men that you credit with being intelligent—in fact, above the average—and they are wasting time in what they think is an honest effort to benefit their physical health by exercise. They are doing the wrong thing, or, rather, whatever they are doing, they are doing it the wrong way—therefore wasting their time.

The benefits of training to the mind are many. Principally, the ability to see, think and act all within almost an unnamable space of time; to hear, think and act quickly, for in many instances the person who sees, then thinks and then acts is too late to gain an advantage by his action, and the same is true of hearing, thinking and acting. It is not a question of moments nor seconds, but a fraction of time, or, rather, a fraction of a second that makes the action as quick as an electric shock.

Training the body to obey the mind promptly is a qualification of great value to any person. We can all realize at times how much could be accomplished, how many lives could be saved, how much property could be saved, and what wonderful things could be done, if we had only been quick enough to do so and not have hesitated for an instant. The be[illegible] taken was caused by waiting for a thought, or the mind's inability to make the body or the necessary part of the body obey instantly.

Physical movements that are made without the direction of the mind—that is, movements of the body, or parts of the body, that are merely mechanical, are usually awkward and clumsy and often cause mistakes.



A great majority of people have never given any thought to simple actions or control of the body. They do not know how to walk properly, to run, to jump, to sit or to get up from a sitting position, go up steps or stairs or come down steps or stairs. In fact, all physical movements are made without due attention from the mind. Simple things of that sort should be the beginning of physical training. The[illegible] gives exercise to the mind, gives the mind a better knowledge of the mechanism of the body in which it lives and upon which it must depend for its own good health strength and activity, for from the body must generate the nervous energy that causes the [illegible] to create new thoughts which are things, and to develop them and put them into action where they will do the most good.

To begin training one does not need to go to a [illegible], gymnasium, golf course or tennis court, or polo field. He is not fit to go there. He must first learn the A B C's of training. He must prepare for all of those more advanced forms of exercise, and his preparation must begin in his everyday life from the moment he wakes in the morning until he falls into sleep at night.

Train the body to obey the mind in dressing yourself, while eating your meals, while going about your daily duties, sitting at a desk, receiving orders or executing orders. No matter where you are or what you are doing, give a little thought to your self-training no matter whether you are a millionaire, workingman, an idler or a poor man, young or old, male or female. Take up the training of yourself and you will become interested and see in a short time how important a part of your life it is.

WOMEN GOLFERS OF HUB PLAY TOURNEY

Nearly 50 of Best Players on Links to Contest on Commonwealth Links.

Nearly fifty of the best women golfers in Massachusetts are entered for the annual championship of the Boston Women's Golf Association, which starts at the Oakley Country Club next Tuesday. Miss Fanny C. Osgood of the Country Club, the present titleholder, is naturally the favorite for first honors, for her play has been far and away the best of any woman player in the Boston district for the past two years. She is rated the same as Miss Dorothy Campbell, the woman champion of the United States, Canada and of the British women's event that she has just finished playing in. Entries:

GOLFERS WIN PRIZES.

Record Breaking Field Starts at Meadowbrook.

A record-breaking field of golfers turned out yesterday for the annual open amateur golf tournament of the Meadowbrook Golf Club of Reading.

A large number of prizes were offered for the best gross, best net and second best net, as well as special prizes to the player with the most 3s and the most 4s in the course of two rounds. Low gross honors went to F. H. Hoyt of Allston, who was 76, and A. G. Lakewood, the former with Meadowbrook's best played, Rodney W. Brown, for second gross honors with 79.

C. S. Howard of Woodland took low net honors with 94 24 70, while H. C. Morse of Bellevue had second best net with 88 16 72.

Four players tied with three 3s each for this special prize. They were Lockwood, Brown, T. A. Ashley, Allston, and L. T. Cushman, of Bellevue. J. P. Mason of Framingham had the most 4s with 11 on his card. The summary:

HORNE OF HAVERHILL WINS THE MARATHON

LYNN, May 20.—With a handicap of four minutes, Clifton Horne of the Haverhill Y. M. C. A. won the annual Marathon race under the direction of the Lynn Y. M. C. A. this afternoon. Thomas Oak, a Lynn Y. M. C. A. man, finished second, three minutes behind Horne. Five thousand persons turned out to see the race.

One of the surprises of the race was that of H. F. Maguire of the [illegible] A. A., who won the time prize. James Hennigan, a Malden boy, was slated to win that prize. Maguire finished in 53.15, while Hennigan was placed at 53.16. The latter's friends protested and stated he did not get a square deal. The Y. M. C. A. officials deny. Hennigan ran under the North Dorchester A. A. banner. Fifty-three racers were started by Ernest J. Collins. The first ten finished as follows:

DESPERATE DESMOND — He Has Claude in His Clutches at Last

Copyright, 1911, by National News Association.

Brave Claude Eclaire has Desmond and his savage pals at his mercy. He's going to compel them to swim to shore and give themselves up to the authorities, while he and Rosamond sail along behind in their aeroplane. The scoundrels have no chance to get back at our hero because their ammunition is too damp to use.

Here comes a waterspout, but it can't hurt Claude and Rosamond. Their machine takes them safely up above the danger zone, where they can still keep an eye on the malefactors. That's one advantage of traveling in an aeroplane. Another one is that you can easily evade the Custom House officers if you want to

Unfortunately there is an octopus mixed up with this waterspout. He has been snatched from his home in the briny deep and forced against his will to take a trip on the merry-go-round. The whirling of the waterspout makes him dizzy, and he grabs at the first thing he sees, which happens to be Claudes aeroplane.

Our hero has met octopuses before, and he has no desire to repeat the experience. He prefers to take a high dive into the ocean, and, of course, Rosamond goes with him. He too had to abandon a perfectly good aeroplane like that, but you'd do the same thing yourself if you were in Claude's place, wouldnt you!

The minutes Claude and Rosamond struck the water Desmond and his crew grabbed them. Now they are taking our hero and heroine to shore, where they will hold a council of war and decide upon the best method of wreaking vengeance on their devoted heads. Take it from us, they'll think up something real classy this time.

This is something like the stunt Claude tried on Desperate Desmond the other day, only Claude used aeroplanes to tear his victim limb from limb, or, rather, he tried to. Be that as it may, when those wild men let go the ropes, as they probably will in to-morrow's pictures, our hero's sensations will be more painful than pleasant.

HARVARD EIGHT HAS FIRST REAL TEST IN CORNELL RACE

Crew Will Meet the Ithacans on Lake Cayuga Next Saturday.

THE Harvard varsity crew, which this year bids fair to outstrip any of its predecessors of the past four years, will have its first real test next Saturday afternoon when it tries its prowess against the Cornell eight on Lake Cayuga in the annual two-mile race between the Crimson and the Red and White.

Of the five races which have been rowed between these two colleges Harvard has won but one, in the Spring of 1908 when it defeated Cornell over the course in the Charles River Basin by eight lengths. The other races have all been closely contested.

If Harvard ever has a chance to defeat Cornell in this two-mile race it should be this year. The Crimson has a crew capable of maintaining a high stroke to the best advantage for a distance of this kind, and at the same time to space the boat well. This means much towards making a great amount of speed over a short course, for this distance must be considered short when it is considered that the Harvard crew is trained during the entire season only for the four-mile race with Yale on the Thames in the latter part of June.

This has troubled Harvard the past few years. The race with Yale is, of course, the objective point in the Crimson's rowing season. The two races come so close together, according to the way Coach Wray looks at it, that there would not be time to permit a period of training for a two-mile race up to the time when Cornell is faced and then shift over to a course of training for the four-mile struggle, and obtain results which would be at all satisfactory.

Tries Most to Beat Yale.

Therefore, as Yale is the aggregation which the Crimson desires most to defeat, it has been found necessary to sacrifice all thoughts of the Cornell race and pursue a training which will beat Yale, and which it is always hoped may put the Ithacans to rout, but only as an incident. It is said that this is the reason Harvard has had such poor success against Cornell each year.

This year the Harvard crew is being tuned up more thoroughly for the Cornell race, and during the past week it has been put through some very strenuous work. It would not be at all surprising to see the Crimson take the measure of Cornell this year.

In the races during the first part of the Easter recess the eight showed an ability to maintain a high stroke and to space out well under it. When rowing was recommended after the vacation, the crew fell into a slump; the slide work was poor, the men did not turn well on the catch and were not effective while the oars were in the water.

A little over a week ago Coach Wray began sending the crew on long easy rows for the purpose of getting the men together as well as conditioning them for the harder work. The good results were shown recently when the eight rowed over the two-mile course in a very high wind and rough water and finished strongly and evenly in a high sea.

The past week the work has been stiffened up materially.

The crew has been sent out daily on eight and nine-mile rows with but one or two rests throughout. This, again, has had good results, for now the men are rowing wonderfully together, on even keel, and show but little fatigue at the end of the long pulls. Practice has been given in maintaining a high stroke over short stretches, and by emphasizing the turning on the catch and getting the oars into the water quickly and smoothly Coach Wray now has the crew into a condition where it can row forty-four strokes to the minute and still space out well.

The Eight is Settled.

The order of the eight is now definitely settled for the two big races which follow closely on one another, barring, of course, the possibility of accidents to some of the oarsmen.

Goodale, the stroke, is extremely lively and loose in his swing and with his remarkably long and powerful arms can put a terrific power into his stroke and take it up with ease and absolute regularity of beat.

Captain Cutler, at seven, has proved his worth, and his work at this position is even better than that which he did at stroke, where he was regarded as unusual. Right behind him at six is Strong. He is a good man for taking the count off stroke, and his rowing is especially good when one stops to consider his great height. Withington, at five, is rowing a much smoother stroke than he did last year, and he is easily one of the most powerful men in the boat.

Newton is a good man at four, while Metcalf at three has a tendency to cut his stroke short, but this is gradually being corrected. Stratton and Balch, at two and bow respectively, are holding down their positions in great style and nothing more could be desired of them.

Without a doubt the boat this year is the most powerful the Crimson has had for many a moon. The varsity and freshmen crew squads with their "subs," managers, rubbers, coaches, etc., will leave Cambridge next Wednesday for Ithaca, where they arrive Thursday. Late that afternoon a practice spin will be ordered for both crews on Lake Cayuga, and Friday there will also be some work of the lightest order in preparation for the big event of Saturday.

EDMUND BURKE was one grand speaker; when he got to going right
He could make you cheer and clamor, make you think that black was white
But with all his silver-tongue work and with all his presence grand,

Sailor Burke, to change the subject, couldn't make a speech at all,
But when Sailor meets a rival he can pack the biggest hall

SAMUEL JOHNSON was a wonder every little schoolboy knows least—
Just to sit around and hear him was the rarest kind of feast
Samuel wrote some wondrous volumes, ground out many a polished tale,
But with all his depth and learning, Samuel never earned much kale
Our Jack Johnson, late of Reno, low of skull and flat of nose,
Gets his fifteen hundred dollars every week in burlesque shows.

ADMIRAL NELSON was a hero from his wig down to his toes,
What he did around Trafalgar every little schoolboy knows,
Though he lost an arm in battle, to say nothing of an eye,
Nelson couldn't win a fortune while the seasons hurried by Battling Nelson owns an auto, sixteen mines and fifty farms;
Though two ears that look like earmuffs sort o' rob him of his charms.

B. C. BOYS BEAT ST. JOHN PREP TEAM

DANVERS, May 20.—Boston College High defeated St. Johns Prep. by a score of 9 to 7 in a closely-played game. Lynch and Gallager did well at the bat, each getting two hits. The fielding of Long and John Lynch was very good. Sheehan's three-bagger was a beaut, the longest hit made on the grounds. F. Lynch also got a three-bagger. St. Johns threw away many chances which would have been runs.

PACIFICS BEATEN.

Columbias Trim Lynn Team, 4 to 3, in Fast Game.

The Columbias of Cambridge defeated the Pacifics of Lynn in a fast and exciting game before the largest crowd of the season by 4 to 3.

Laffy, the star pitcher of the Columbias, didn't allow a hit after the first inning and fanned thirteen men. Sensational fielding by both teams and a one-handed catch of a long drive in deep centre field by Philips robbing McCarthy of a home run were features of the game.

Braman-Dow Again.

The strong Braman Dow & Co. team won the third straight victory by defeating the Everson Mfg. Co. team 18 to 2 at Franklin Field. The features of the game were pitching of Simonton, who fanned fifteen, and the catching of Gove.

WESLEYAN WINS FROM RUTGERS

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., May 20.—Rutgers defeated Wesleyan in this city this afternoon in an exciting game, 5 to 4. Wesleyan opened the game by scoring three runs, but weakened in the second inning, allowing the visitors to score two tallies. Rutgers' winning run was made in the eighth as the result of a wild throw by Davidson. The score:

RECORDS SMASHED IN COLLEGE MEET

New England Athletes' Spring Surprise in Annual Contest at Springfield.

the lead. Newton and Harris of Wesleyan were running neck and neck. Newton was still leading when the final lap was started. On the back stretch R. E. Keith of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, came to the fore, passed Newton and won by 13 yards. He was a "dark horse." The association record of 4 mins. 24 3-5 secs. was broken by one-fifth of a second.

J. D. Lester of Williams broke the second record of the day by beating the 440-yard dash mark of 50 1-5 seconds, made by Shattuck of Amherst in 1891. Lester did the distance in 49 3-5 seconds.

Eight star quarter milers toed the mark in this event. At the start there was a great deal of elbowing, and McLoughlian emerged from the bunch in first place. Lester, the Williams flyer, however, came with a rush and broke the tape several yards in the lead of Wood of Wesleyan. McLoughlian was forced to fall back into third place.

A third record was broken when A. H. Tilley, Dartmouth, hurled the 16-pound hammer 146 feet, 6¼ inches, which shattered the mark made by A. C. Denning of Bowdoin, 144 feet ½ inch.

N. E. Smith, the tow-headed Maine hurdler, won out by several yards over Bates in the final heat of the high hurdles. The time of the final heat, 16 1-5 seconds, was the fastest made over the hurdles to-day.

Everybody was on his feet when the half mile was started as it was expected that Holden, the Bates star, would clip several seconds off the record. Holden took the lead shortly after the start and kept it. He finished 10 yards ahead of Bylund, the Tech star. Holden's time for the distance was 1 minutes, 57 3-5 seconds, which broke the old record of 1 minutes, 59 seconds, made by Baker of Tech in 1902.

In the final heat of the 100-yard dash, Young, the Amherst star, won handily by several feet. Nardini of Colby beat out Lyman and Snow, both Williams sprinters, who fitted in third and fourth places.

A. H. Tilley, the Dartmouth hammer thrower, managed to break the third record of the day, when he hurled the hammer 16 feet, 6¼ inches, breaking the former mark by 8 inches.

In the discus throw Chamberlain of M. I. T. surprised all when he threw the sphere two feet further than Lovejoy, the Dartmouth weight man.

Gutterson, the Vermont captain, with a leap of 23 ft., 1¾ in., in the broad jump, carried off the honors. Bartlett of Williams rested in second place with a jump of 22 ft. ½ in.

Gives Williams the Victory.

A fine array of sprinters came together in the 220-yard dash. Young of Amherst opened a slight lead at 50 yards and retained it to the end. With Williams getting second and fourth places in the 220-yard dash, the college could not be beaten. The Williams stands went wild when the men from Williamstown learned that no matter what points Dartmouth secured in the pole vault and 220 yards low hurdles, Williams could not be beaten. Hats were thrown high in the air. Other colleges gave their yells and cheered Williams for the victory.

16-pound shot put—Won by A. E. Bartlett, Brown, distance 43 ft. 2⅛ in., second, C. C. Clough, W. P. I., 42 ft. 2½ in., third, L. S. Lovejoy, Dartmouth, 41 ft. 8¾ in., fourth, T. D. Shepard, Maine, 39 ft. 5¾ in.

YACHTS AND POWER BOATS

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

Memorial Day at City Point will see the opening of the season of the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts. The South Boston Yacht Club will have charge of the first open race. The addition of a number of new boats in various classes and the change in ownership of others will make the racing fast.

The opening race will find the Amoret, Timandra and Wianno—21 raters—at the starting line to meet the new comer in this class, George Lee's Italia. This race counts for the Lipton Cup, and as both the Timandra and Amoret have a leg in the trophy by wins in 1909 and 1910, the competition will be all the more keen.

Down Narragansett Bay way is a little power boat, eighteen feet long, that will make the power craft "go some." The boat is the "Tri," owned by A. N. Lavalle of Providence. It is eighteen feet over all, seventeen feet waterline, and has a four-foot beam. This boat was once the galvanized iron lifeboat of a tug. The Tri is equipped with a six-horsepower Cooley engine. The launch is between thirty and forty years old, and in the past two years has won fourteen races, every one it entered, has captured eight silver cups and ten or a dozen pennants, including the championship of the N. B. Y. R. A.

The Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead has announced the following schedule of racing: Saturday, June 10, club race; June 24, Cape Cod race; July 4, open race; July 8, club race; July 15, club race; July 22, club race; July 29, club race; August 9, 10, 11, midsummer series, open; August 12, open race; August 17, 18, 19, New York vs. Massachusetts interstate series, Class P; September 4, grand handicap.

Work has been commenced on the foundation for the new club house of the Pleasant Park Yacht Club at Winthrop.

Good Sunday racing is in sight at Marblehead. The Beachcombers Yacht Club will open the season June 4 with a seven dory race. The officers elected are: Commodore, William H. Chamberlain; vice commodore, Frank Curtis; treasurer, E. W. Murphy; regatta committee, Everett Riley, W. H. Harris, Winthrop Stacey, Howard Stone and Earl Humphrey.

Captain E. H. Pentecost of Topsfield, Mass., has sold, through the agency of John G. Alden, the twenty-eight-foot waterline yawl Mahdeena. The Mahdeena has been purchased by Fred B. Thurber of Providence, R. I., and was built at Wiscasset, Me., in 1908. It is thirty-eight feet over all, eleven feet beam and six feet draught, and will be used in Narragansett Bay.

That the interest is very keen in the motor boat races to be held in Boston Harbor on July 4, under the auspices of the New England Engine and Boat Association, is shown by the large number of entries so far received by the racing committee. Norman L. Skene, the chairman, reports that up to date more have been received than the final total of previous years.

The trophies are much more valuable than ever before, and as an added incentive that should create keen rivalry the committee has voted a cash prize of $100 that will go to the boat making the fastest time in the day.

The entry list does not close until June 2, but it is hoped that as far as possible those contemplating entering will not wait until the last day, as it will facilitate the work of the committee by entering early.

Vice-Commodore Samuel Cochrane of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club of New York has under construction a power boat that will be entered in the New York to Marblehead race. The boat is of the raised deck type, and will be equipped with Craig engines.

Arthur P. Homer will build a one-step hydroplane for B. P. P. Moseley of Newburyport, and Mr. Moseley will go after all records next season.

The Hingham Yacht Club will give races at Crow Point and in Hingham Harbor, Saturdays, during June, July and August. Special races will be sailed during September, and the open Y. R. A. of M. race will be sailed off Crow Point August 20. Commodore William Lambert Barnard has offered a special trophy for the boat finishing the most races.

FELLSWAY BEATS BY TWELVE POINTS

First Inter-Club Matinee Results in Sweeping Victory for Former.

The first inter-club matinee of the season between the Dorchester and the Fellsway Driving Clubs was held at Combination Park yesterday afternoon and resulted in a sweeping victory for the Fellsway boys, who scored 37 points to 25 for Dorchester. The Fellsway Club won five firsts, three seconds and three thirds. The Dorchester horses won two firsts, four seconds and three thirds.

The feature race was that won by the Dorchester trotter Bonnie Boy. It was a scrappy three-heat battle with the finishes drawn very close. Bonnie Boy was well driven by his owner, Mr. Buchner, who was as cool in the tight places as a professional.

Old Ella Hal had her pacing shoes on and reeled off her race in straight heats, but the Dorchester mare, Stella D., driven by Knap Forshner, was right at her necktie in the final heat, which was the fastest of the day.

GLIDDEN TOURISTS WILL SPEND SUNDAY IN CITY OF BOSTON

Dead Horse Hill in Worcester Will Be the Scene of the Hill Climbing Contest on Saturday, June 24.

By J. O. KERRISON.

Boston and Worcester are to play prominent parts in the forthcoming Glidden Reciprocity tour under the auspices of the A. A. A.

Boston will have the honor of entertaining for the day of rest the men who are on the trip from Washington to Ottawa, while the day previous Worcester will witness the hill climbing contest of the competitors.

In order to make this possible the date of the tour has been changed to June 21 to 29, which will bring the hill climb in Worcester on June 24 and the tourists in Boston that night, they remaining here until Monday morning.

This is an unexpected concession on the part of the contest board, as it gives to Boston and Worcester positions in the tour that rightfully belong to them on account of the great interest that these cities have always displayed in the Glidden tour—Boston, it being remembered, being the home of the donor of the trophy and always active in touring meets. Worcester has always been a strong A. A. A. city and has contributed its share of work to the cause.

Dead Horse Hill, which has been selected for the hill climb, is unquestionably one of the most difficult hills in the East. It is a mile in length and has a grade varying from 8 to 10 per cent, and in some cases even greater than that.

The fastest a gas car has ever negotiated this hill is 58 seconds, while a steamer has made the climb in 54 seconds. Of course, it cannot be expected that the stock cars entered in the Glidden tour, carrying passengers and freight and not being specially geared, will do anything like that time up the grade. But some excellent work will surely be done.

The night before the hill-climb the tour will stop in Springfield, the home of the Stevens-Duryea, which laid out the route with such success. On Saturday, the 24th, the tourists will leave Springfield, stopping at Worcester sufficiently long as to permit the climb, and thence come along to Boston, where the Bay State Automobile Association will act the part of hosts.

In previous years when the tourists have been to Boston, the Bay State Automobile Association has always rendered an excellent account of itself and proven its right to be considered as the most royal host. Presidents Gilmore, unquestionably, will see to it that his entertainment committee issues due notice of the coming of the Gildendites and govern itself accordingly.

It is possible that on Sunday the tourists will be given another one of those famous harbor trips, or may be taken somewhere into the country for a clam bake and outing. The general belief, however, is that when all the trips are in, there are not enough automobile riding without resorting to the same on what might be considered their day off. Consequently, the most favorite scheme is a harbor trip.

The itinerary of the tour is as follows: June 21, Washington to Philadelphia, 136 miles; June 22, Philadelphia to New York, 183 miles; June 23, New York to Springfield, 146 miles; June 24, Springfield to Worcester, 50 miles; hill climb at Worcester; Worcester to Boston, 40 miles; June 25 (Sunday in Boston); June 26, Boston to Springfield, Vt., 142 miles; June 27, Springfield to Burlington, 138 miles; June 28, Burlington to Montreal, 110 miles; June 29, Montreal to Ottawa, 121 miles; total, 1,040 miles.

It has been the object of the A. A. A. Contest Board to make the tour this year of greater interest to automobile users generally than ever before, by making it of more value as an object lesson. This is to be done not by making the contest more difficult, but by having the rules more exacting. The performances of the cars will be set forth with fuller detail because of the improved rules, and motorists everywhere will get a better line on the possibilities of touring on schedule between the big cities of the East.

There will be fractional points of penalization, particularly in the hill-climb, which will be timed with the automobile electric timing apparatus, and it is certain that this way a winner for each of the three trophies will be evolved. These trophies, the Glidden the Washington and Ottawa, will go to individual contestants.

David Beecroft of Chicago, a former member of the A. A. A. technical committee, who is known throughout the country for his efficiency in officiating at public tests, will be the referee of the tour. F. E. Edwards, chairman of the A. A. A. technical committee, will conduct the technical end of the contest.

TAD'S VERY LATEST CONCEIT

SPRING OUTING OF THE BAY STATE ASSO.

Great Interest Being Displayed in Forthcoming Outing of Auto Association.

A sufficient number of members have already signified their intention of participating in the Spring outing of the Bay State Automobile Association at Falmouth on June 12th and 13th to guarantee an absolute success.

There seems to be a general desire on the part of the members to make this event better even in its previous years, as the organization as it is make it a social and family affair more anything that has been tried for the last two years.

With reasonable weather there is good bathing at this point in June. There is a good ball ground directly in the rear of the hotel and a good game is being arranged by the athletic committee. There is a good tennis court and also opportunities for pool and billiards. The committee has planned a clambake for Saturday afternoon with entertainment in the evening.

KNOX PLANT HAS SIX-STORY ADDITION

Springfield Plant Is Being Enlarged in Keeping with Great Demand for Motors.

The Knox Automobile Company of Springfield, Mass., have just completed a six-story addition of 40,000 square feet to their already large and ever-crowded factory to take care of the insistent demand for more Knox cars.

The call for motor cars of the standard high-grade quality is steadily increasing in spite of constant reports to the contrary. The companies who have been in business since the early years of the industry and who have built up a reputation for honest values in high-grade products need no difficulty in marketing all the cars their factories are capable of producing.

INTERNATIONAL MOTOR RULES ARE EFFECTIVE

The regulations prescribed by the International Convention of October 11, 1910, and ratified by the Swiss Council in December, 1910, became effective throughout Switzerland on May 1, 1911. All owners of automobiles and motor cycles residing in Switzerland, whether native or foreign, must now be provided with the "international route certificates" as provided by the convention. These automobiles, motor cycles, etc., in addition to the numbered plate in the rear, must have a distinctive plate bearing the letters "C. H." (Confederatio Helvetica).

The following countries have so far given their adhesion to the convention: Switzerland, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Bulgaria, Spain, France, United Kingdom, Italy, Luxemburg, Monaco, Holland, Russia and Sweden. In Switzerland the required certificates are to be issued by the proper cantonal authorities, showing the full name and residence of the owner; kind of vehicle (whether car, motor cycle, etc.); name of constructor, series number of the particular type or manufacturer's number of vehicle; number of cylinders and power (in horse power); form and color of car, number of gears, and weight of vehicle in kilos. The number of registry should also appear on the plates of identity. The certificates must also contain information relative to chauffeur or driver—his full name, place and date of birth, and residence. The photograph of each chauffeur or driver (no more than two are to be allowed to each vehicle) will be attached to the certificate.

To obtain an international certificate, those interested should apply to the cantonal authorities, giving them the necessary information. The travel permit of the vehicle, as well as the permit of the chauffeurs or drivers, should be presented. The accompanying photographs are to be 4½ by 6 centimeters (1¾ by 2⅜ inches) in size.

The possession of this certificate, however, does not dispense with the usual customs formalities, as it is simply intended as evidence that both vehicle and conductor have fulfilled the conditions prescribed by their government before being permitted to use the public roads. The usual papers required by the Swiss customs authorities—or of the authorities of the country to which they are going—must be obtained as in the past.

No official stamp or punch was prescribed by the convention, those interested being free to provide their own plates, but they must conform to the following rules: The distinctive mark of the country of origin is to be shown on an oval plate, 20 by 17 centimeters (11 4-5 by 6 7-7 inches), bearing black letters, in capital Latin characters, on white ground, these letters must be at least 10 centimeters in length and 1.5 centimeters thick.

The distinctive letters for each country are prescribed as follows: Germany, D; Belgium, B; United States, U; Austria, A; Hungary, H; Spain, E; France, F; Great Britain, G; Italy, I; Monaco, M; Portugal, P; Roumania, R; Sweden, S. For motor cycles the distinctive mark of nationality should measure 13 centimeters horizontally and 12 vertically, the letters being 8 centimeters in length and 10 in width.

The Largest Single Order ever given for Automobile Tires and Rims has just been placed with the # United States Tire Company

by the Studebaker Corporation—Manufacturers of the popular E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" Cars

The order calls for practically 135,000 tires and an equal number of Continental Demountable Rims—Gilbert type (Standard Universal Rim No. 3).

This single order FOR TIRES ONLY will amount to over FOUR MILLION DOLLARS.

Never before has an automobile concern making cars in immense quantities contracted for a strictly high-grade tire for its entire output of cars.

The transaction is distinctly to the credit of both the Studebaker Corporation and the United States Tire Company—

To the former, because of its unwillingness to supply any but tires of proven quality on its cars, regardless of additional cost involved;

To the United States Tire Company because the selection of its tires in preference to all others was made after three years' experience with one of its four brands—Morgan & Wright.

It is of interest to note that three years ago the then E-M-F Company decided that the magneto was an essential part of every automobile and ought, therefore, to be included in the price of the car. This policy undoubtedly cost the company thousands of dollars in possible profits, but it has resulted in having magnetos furnished without extra cost on practically all American cars.

By its present decision to use only Continental Demountable Rims as standard equipment, it is adopting another policy that is well-nigh revolutionary in the automobile business, as heretofore rims of this character have been confined to the highest-priced cars.

Three years ago the E-M-F Co. selected Morgan & Wright tires as standard equipment WITHOUT OPTION ON OTHER BRANDS. These tires were selected, not because they could be had at a less price (which was not the case), but because the E-M-F Co. had demonstrated to their entire satisfaction that these tires were the most desirable tires to put on their cars.

The placing of the immense order referred to above is a flattering testimonial to the manner in which these tires have stood up on the E-M-F cars during these three years.

The Studebaker Corporation has selected United States Tires and Continental Rims because of their expressed belief that this equipment on their entire product gives both the dealer and the man who buys the car the BEST equipment the American tire market affords.

United States Tires are sold under four brand names: Continental, G and J, Hartford and Morgan & Wright, and are manufactured in five of the largest and best-equipped tire plants in the world. Under the present system of manufacturing, there is a UNIFORM SUPERIORITY in all these brands—a fact of immense importance to the motorist. In other words, United States Tires HAVE THE STRENGTH OF FOUR, yet they sell at precisely the same price asked for other kinds. They are undeniably

The car which Burman will drive has 420 cubic inches piston displacement while that to be piloted by Billy Knipper has but 444 cubic inches. Both of the Benton cars are fast and the team is played as one of the favorites before the event. Neither expects to have a relief driver, but believes he will be able to pull through the seven hour drive without a rest.

Burman comes fresh from his recent world's record making adventures in Florida, while Knipper has been on the farm getting in shape. The two veterans have often driven against each other, but this is the first time they have ever been team mates, though they are great friends.

Most of the forty-six cars named for the long race are at the two-and-a-half-mile brick oval now putting up their best performance for their masters. Faster and faster they are growing, and when the eligibility trials are started on May 26 all of them will be at their best. It is well they should, for every car must show a speed of at least seventy-five miles per hour.

All of the details for the long event have been planned and carried to completion. The race will start at 10 o'clock, and the gates will be thrown open to the public at 6:30 o'clock. The start of the race is to be the most spectacular in the history of racing. The half-hundred cars will be brought up to the tape in about four lines. Carl G. # UNCLE SAM IS A BUILDER OF ROADS

New System of Highways Being Constructed by This Country in the Philippines.

Over on the other side of the world in his tropical possessions, the Philippine Islands, Uncle Sam is building good roads at a rate that would surprise many local motorists. J. A. Braden of the Diamond tire forces attributes this in part to the widespread use of the automobile. There is a healthy demand in the islands for American made tires.

One of the good Philippine highways is the Benguet road, extending from Manila to Government Camp No. 1, a distance of 150 miles. It is rock macadam, as are all the other government roads. Albay, in southern Luzon, already has sixty-two miles of splendid macadamized roads and many more in course of construction. In Zamboanga, the principal city of the Moro province, headquarters of the United States troops, there are thirty-five miles of macadamized road. Many more are being built.

At Cebu, rated second to Manila commercially, contractors are using heavy motor trucks for carrying supplies to the railroad now being constructed.

Manila firemen go to a blaze in an automobile and the law offender is taken to court in an auto. "The machines of both departments are equipped with Diamond tires," says Mr. Braden.

RULES GOVERNING MOTOR TRUCK TESTS

Are Not at All Satisfactory to Those Who Would Promote Valuable Tests.

In drawing up the rules for motor truck demonstrations and endurance contests, the gentlemen in charge of the same evidently had some rather peculiar ideas as to what does and does not constitute real competition or demonstrations. These provide that in case an organization desires to make a two or three days run to any objective point and return, it must have the sanction and approval of the governing body.

This hardly seems necessary, as such a demonstration might really be termed a club run and club runs do not come under the term competition. In such demonstrations as these, it is nothing more or less than a demonstration—a proof that cars with a load can cover a certain distance with practical workings and results.

It does not seem to the man on the outside as though it were necessary to ask the people in New York, or elsewhere for that matter, may we do this, or may we do that? Of course, if it was competition, then things would be different.

Some idea of the deep thought and consideration that was given to this matter is probably shown in the fact that in the five-ton trucks class the speed limit of those cars is held down to four miles an hour.

This hardly seems reasonable in view of the fact that manufacturers of five-ton trucks guarantee even faster speed than that, and in the Boston AMERICAN endurance run of last October, the drivers of the five-ton trucks took it upon themselves to show even fourteen and sixteen miles an hour. This speed is as unreasonable to expect from a truck loaded with five tons as it is to limit them to four miles an hour.

Unless some change is made in these rules, there is reason to believe that the number of commercial vehicle demonstrations and contests will be greatly reduced.

There are three classes of events allowed under the A. A. A. rules, and none of them, in the opinion of Boston dealers in trucks, fills the bill for a thorough test of the vehicles. The rules appear modelled upon the pleasure car reliability run rules and little thought has been given to the power needs of the commercial vehicle. [illegible] with no runs that it considers [illegible] the prospect of paying $10 [illegible] to the A. A. A., the committee of the Boston Commercial Motor Vehicle Association is not as enthusiastic as it was a short time ago.

What is under consideration is not a contest but a demonstration of commercial vehicles. The committee wants to arrange an event in which the [illegible] will be required to run on a schedule for three days, with no penalties except for failure to keep up to the schedule. There would be classes for vehicles of different capacities, and those finishing the run on time would be awarded certificates. The proposed route is from Boston to Brockton and return the first day, sixty miles; Boston to [illegible] and return the second day, seventy miles, and Boston to Lowell and Lawrence and return the third day, eighty miles. All plans, however, are held up pending the decision whether it will be advisable to attempt an event under the A. A. A. rules.

BREAKS TRUCK RECORD.

A Record Trip of 142 Miles With Heavy Load.

A telegram has been received by J. M. Linscott announcing that Captain H. D. Ryus with the Reo motor truck broke all commercial vehicle records from Los Angeles to San Diego. The load consisted of a gross tonnage of 3,700 pounds, of which there were 1,500 pounds of cement. The distance for the record trip was one hundred and forty-two miles, which was covered in eleven hours fifty-five minutes. Among the towns passed through were Santa Ana, Capistrano, Oceanside and San Diego, where the business men gave Captain Ryus a cordial welcome and showed great enthusiasm over the power, speed, economy, reliability and efficiency of his truck. Many steep hills and rough stretches of road were encountered. Knowing these road conditions so thoroughly the natives everywhere showed the deepest interest in Captain Ryus and his Reo truck. In one town over a dozen cards were handed him by business men, prominent farmers and ranchers, who said they were interested in just such a truck and expressed surprise that its price was only $750. The [illegible] trip was made without making [illegible] allotment or repair. Only [illegible] gallons of gasoline were used while [illegible] of water was taken on [illegible]. No stop was made except for meals. Captain Ryus had never handled a truck prior to this run, which argues strongly for the simplicity of operation and wonderful economy and efficiency of this giant of light delivery, moderate priced motor trucks.

THE LAST CHANCE.

Bankrupt Stock Sale of Percy Ford's Comes to a Close.

This will positively be the last week of the sale of the stock of the Percy Ford Company in bankruptcy, now being conducted by the Standard Tire & Rubber Company at 224-228 Columbus avenue. While the sale [illegible] up to date [illegible] of the best of its kind that [illegible] ever been held in Boston and the [illegible] there still remains on hand some particularly choice bargains, as the stock was the most extensive and complete to be found in New England.

The sale closes this week as the building has been leased to parties who take possession of the same next week, which means that the Standard Company must sacrifice, in every sense of the word.

47 More Postal Banks.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Postmaster General Hitchcock announced the designation of forty-seven additional postal savings depositories, making a total of 176 postal banks since January 3. The offices designated today will be ready to receive deposits on June 12. The new offices are nearly all in small towns in the South and West.

NO TROUBLE TO MAKE SALES

Decatur Trucks Marketed From Local Branch On Arrival Here.

Additional evidence that the market for trucks is widening and that business men are seeking motor vehicles is shown by the week's report of the Taylor Motor Sales Company. This company is handling the Decatur truck, and since taking it on a few months ago has placed trucks in many New England cities.

Of the five trucks received last week four were sold and an option has been taken on another. It is expected that this will be sold during the next few days. Some idea showing the demand is not centered in any one section is given by the sales to the Johnson Elevator Tool Company, Boston; N. E. Cotton Yarn Company, New Bedford; Jewett City Express, Jewett City, Conn., and A. Cartier, Lawrence; and J. S. M[illegible], Canal street.

The work at the factory enlarging the plant has been finished now so that after June 1 it will be possible to increase the deliveries and the branch here will receive ten trucks every week. The local branch is now working out a plan with one of the nearby towns to furnish it with a chemical wagon for protection against fire, particularly forest fires. The vehicle will have a speed of 35 miles an hour and with the equipment will be able to give greater protection to the residents than ever before.

Judd to Drive.

John M. Judd, distributor of the Jackson car for Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, leaves Boston on Friday next for Indianapolis where he goes to act as a relief driver of one of the Jackson cars in the 500-mile sweepstake race. Mr. Judd is known as a most capable driver and one who if called upon will give a good account of himself if and when [illegible] Jackson car.

ROAD FREIGHTING From CHICAGO to NEW YORK

With the DURABLE DAYTON 3-TON TRUCK

CHICAGO TO NEW YORK RELIABILITY RUN

SWIFT & CO., Chicago, has consigned six thousand pounds (3 tons) of Swift's Pride Cleanser to James Butler, Inc., N. Y., to be transported and delivered by

The Durable Dayton Auto Truck

This stock model motor truck left Chicago for New York at 7 A. M., Monday, May 15th, starting from the Palmer House, State and Monroe streets.

The run from Chicago to New York will embrace the following important cities: South Bend, Toledo, Sandusky, Cleveland, Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, and Albany.

Scheduled to reach New York May 30th

THE DAYTON is built for heavy duty, hard service, long life for real work.

No pleasure car parts enter into its construction.

It must be obvious that the makers of a motor truck would not undertake such a strenuous performance as a journey so far distant as Chicago and New York unless its engineering was beyond criticism. The route, this season of the year, furnishes no fair weather test, but a thorough demonstration of reliability under conditions so severe as to be only approximated during the most arduous winter service. Soft roads, inconstant weather, and the necessity for making control points along the route on schedule time combine to make it evident the utmost dependence may be placed in the service performance of the machine which sets out to encounter such difficulties.

To be frank about the matter, there are few, if any, concerns making motor trucks which would care to expose their commercial reputation to the risks of such a hazardous journey. It is not a pleasure trip. There are bad stretches of roadway to be covered—some deep in mud. Poor traction conditions must be overcome by the machine. The only way this can be accomplished is by the use of a model designed and constructed for the stiffest service which can be expected of a motor truck. The trip, therefore, is a test of the Durable Dayton's endurance, its reliability under adverse conditions, its engineering, and its ability to perform such difficult work continuously.

Continuity of service is a vital factor in the cost accounting of motor truck transportation. No merchant wishes to speculate upon interruption to service. The simple fact that the Durable Dayton sets out to accomplish a long distance journey on schedule time is ample proof that its builders are sure of its staying qualities and every feature of its design.

RETURN FROM TRIP THROUGH EUROPE

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Lewis Toured Exactly 23,670 Miles In Continental Europe.

William T. Lewis, chairman of the Board of Directors of the $10,000,000 Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company of Racine, Wis., accompanied by Mrs. Lewis, has just returned from a tour of nearly a whole year in the British Isles and through the country from a Mitchell car that undoubtedly sets a record for septuagenarian travel. Both Mr. Lewis and his wife sought this means of taking a vacation and their mileage reached the total of 23,670 miles. Mr Lewis is seventy-one years of age and enjoyment to the sum of the Italian roads, rates of the Scottish and Irish highways and winds of Sweden and Norway have given him the appearance of ruggedness that tempts him to at once re-enter the maelstrom of active business life which for more than half a century brought manufacturing fame and fortune to the pioneer Badger State maker of wagons and buggies' relatives.

"During all of the tour of the British Islands, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Spain, Scandinavia and Russia," said Mr. Lewis "our car was piloted by a Mr. Alexander Zirbes, who will be recalled as the successful driver of the "Mitchell Bullet" car in the first transcontinental war message run from New York to San Francisco and Glidden tour scout over the mountainous country trail through fifteen States in the mud and rain of the Spring of 1910. We had many interesting touring experiences as varied as the climatic conditions of the continent of England, all making for a deeper love for the out-door life and touring."

Mr Lewis fortunately was in the Russian capital at the time that the Czar signified to the makers of the Mitchell car the imperial sister model as a proof of the government war department's selection of the car as the ideal type of medium priced automobile embodying maximum features of reliability and durability for strenuous work. The product of the Mitchell-Lewis plant earned this distinction in competition with several European made automobiles.

Representatives of the Russian government feletitated the veteran executive from Racine and the Lewis party was accorded the most courteous treatment in the Czar's dominions

Warning to Motorists.

The Board of Selectmen of the town of Winchester has come out with the announcement inviting motorists to use care and caution while traversing through the town, and this invitation the board is particular to state, is extended to pedestrians as well as non-residents of Winchester.

Unless the invitations is accepted in the spirit in which it is given, there is reason to believe that the Police Department will be requested to see that what is now an invitation shall shortly become an order.

AN AMAZINGLY BIG TIRE DEAL

Greatest Single Order for Pneumatic Tires Ever Recorded in History of Motor Industry.

An amazingly big tire deal was consummated in Detroit Thursday night when, what is beyond question the largest single order for pneumatic tires ever recorded in the world's history of the automobile industry, was placed with the United States Tire Company by the E-M-F Company of Detroit.

This remarkable order calls for 135,000 pneumatic tires and a like number of Continental, Gilbert type, quick detachable demountable rims, which now are manufactured by the United Rim Company of Akron O. The tires will be supplied from the Continental, G. & J., Hartford and Morgan & Wright's rubber plants, and to meet the demand within the required time the working forces of these big factories have already been materially increased and night shifts installed.

A few weeks ago when the United States Motor Company placed an order for 30,000 tires with the United States Tire Company it was thought a record had been established that would stand for a long time to come. However, the immense sale to the E-M-F Company, outnumbering the above order almost three to one, shows that the above record was destined to be short lived.

In future every E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" car leaving the Detroit factory will be equipped with United States tires and Continental, detachable demountable rims.

In being able to guarantee the execution of such a big order within a given time the advantage of having the resources of the immense factories to draw upon is shown.

WARREN IN BIG RACE.

"30" Will Compete in Drivers' Automobile Meet.

Disappointed on account of being barred out of the 500 mile sweepstakes race at Indianapolis on Decoration Day, the Warren Motor Car Company has entered one of its stock cars in the big 300 mile race to be held in Denver May 30. The drivers are H. Mustang and H. Bertsch.

The Warren people feel that it was unjust to bar them out of the race at the Indianapolis on account of their light weight, since to make a car light is the secret of successful automobile making.

The big race at Denver is creating great interest throughout the West and thousands of motorists from the Rocky Mountain region and even from the Pacific Coast are planning to be there on that day for the big event.

Delighted With Boston.

The new manager of the Thomas Branch in Boston, Mr. N. H. Halliday, and Mr. Wells as assistant manager, state that they are more than delighted with the conditions that they found at the branch, the amount of business that is in sight and the general good condition of each department of the branch.

The Thomas model "M" machine that has been making tours throughout the territory accompanied by a mechanic returned from the fifth trial run covering Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill 73 miles each trip. Mr. Halliday states that it has proven very successful. This machine will start out on another trip to cover Manchester, Concord, Dover, Portsmouth and Keene, N. H. This trip as it is planned will take approximately five days. The machine returning to Boston until the first of June.

ROUTE OF THE GLIDDEN

DEDICATE MASONIC HOME ON THURSDAY

CHARLTON, May 20—The Masonic Home here will be dedicated on May 25. It is expected that at least 5,000 Masons will attend the ceremonies and that most of them will be accompanied by their families. They will arrive on excursion trains from all parts of Massachusetts. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, with Grand Master Dana J. Flanders of Malden presiding, will have charge of the dedication.

There are about 50,000 members of the Masonic order in Massachusetts and a thousand in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Though the Commonwealth has always been a stronghold of the order it has never before had a Masonic Home. About twenty other States have established homes within their borders.

The Masonic Home in Charlton is located on what is locally known as "river rock," an estate of about 400 acres of land on which there is a finely equipped and commodious hotel. This and other buildings have been entirely renovated, the wives, sisters and daughters of Masons furnishing most of the linen, carpets and other household equipment. At a recent meeting of the Women's Auxiliary it was announced that $7,500 has been raised for furnishings. Mrs. Everett C. Benton presided over this meeting.

The "riverlock" property has a beautiful and beautiful location and was originally developed as a part of the summer home of the Worcester and Point Judith Electric Railway Company. The Masonic Home will be supported by voluntary subscription.

Many gifts have already been received including 2,000 valuable books donated by the library Mrs. Edwin S. Crandon designed a book plate for the library and did quite a more besides to put it in readiness for the opening.

CLAM INDUSTRY HAS HOPES OF A BOOST

NEW BEDFORD, May 20. A big revival of the quahog industry is expected by the Buzzards Bay fishermen, to follow the signing by Governor Foss of a bill creating a shellfish commission to protect this kind of clams along the Acushnet river.

The harvesting of quahogs there was put under the ban a year ago, New Bedford and Fairhaven health boards acting jointly. Pollutions in this vicinity made $100,000 a year oil dealings until the Acushnet crop was barred.

The commission, consisting of Major Ashley of this city, Dr. Francis M. Kennedy, chairman of the health board, Chairman Charles D. Mitchell of the Fairhaven Board and Joseph L. Dias, another member of it, will have deputies to supervise the shipping, where pollution is found guns can buy quahogs and plant and boil them in waters where are uncontaminated. The quahogs will be kept where they can never themselves of typhoid and other germs.

The health boards put the industry under the ban when they learned that fish peddlers used to take quahogs for bait and get rid of rejects from a scow bought for the purpose. Quahogs are known here in New York and other cities.

Cameron Truck.

One of the most unique little cars built to do big service on the roads is known as the Cameron truck.

It might be said to be a combination car, in other words one fitting for transporting a family of moderate size and at the same time can be utilized as a traveling auto truck. It is built in the Cameron factories in Boston and is put on the market by the Cameron Car Co. of this city. The car is constructed along the lines of a touring car, with pick-up body, and is claimed to be a very satisfactory car for the purpose for which it is designed. It is claimed that the car will be a great money saver to those who have use for a light delivery car. The car which the house of private owners has done exceptionally well and proved the efficiency of the Cameron system.

DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT IS IMPORTANT

It Does Not, However, Remove the Speed Limitations for Motor Vehicles, and Police Continue Activity.

Too much should not be taken for granted by the automobilist as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court as regards the speed law. The decision in a way gives one an idea that by this decision the speed limit for automobiles is abolished.

It is, however, pointed out by authorities that the decision does not in any way change the present statute. Neither does it attempt to indicate that there shall be no speed limit. It is the impression that the decision, although being considered a most favorable one from the motorists standpoint, is somewhat in the light of a boomerang.

Of course, the defendant's attorney, in the case of speed violation in the future, will contend that, under the decision of the Supreme Court the law is inactive. Should the lower court decide in the same line as the supreme court has done, the prosecuting officers will cease to arrest for violation of the speed law and bring charges for reckless driving, which is a much more serious offense than speeding.

If, therefore, behoves the motorist, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court, to drive with as much, if not more, circumspection than in the past—to consider not as much the speed at which they may be driving as the conditions of the moment and the crowds of streets.

A man may drive down Washington street in the city of Boston at eight miles an hour and be in driving that manner might consider recklessly. He may reduce his speed to four miles an hour and in certain portions of Washington street still be driving recklessly.

And speed is, it is understood, will be maintained in more places than one, as the police authorities are inclined to consider that this decision spells a way for a more strict enforcement of the law and more arrests for violations of statutes.

This is surely meant to the man on the outside that while the police officials as a rule are prone to consider that motorists shall drive at reasonable rate of speed they consider the speed limit, they will enforce their belief by taking advantage of another section of the law, namely that which makes it a matter of the operator's what is considered reckless driving.

To be convicted of reckless driving is not only to involve as a rule a more severe punishment in the way of fines, but it means the loss of the offender's operating license, which to many is a great deal more of a penalty than the payment of a mere fine.

There also must the highways-to-day should bear in mind the fact that there are a few days' respite remaining before the road, otherwise they may secure a little consideration of the judge in the summons to court.

The next few days will certainly show what attitude the law courts will take on this decision by the Supreme Court.

DAYTON TRUCK RUN TO BE STRENUOUS

Three Ton Power Wagon is Now On Its Way from Chicago to New York City.

Mr A. R. Henley, manager of the truck department for The Whitten-Gillmore Company, has just been advised of a strenuous undertaking by the Dayton truck, which they are agents for in New England.

This three-ton truck called the Duraide Dayton, has left Chicago loaded with tons of Swift's Pride Cleanser, consigned to Joseph Butler Company, New York City This is probably one of the most wonderful demonstrations ever attempted by a power wagon, and to make the run of 1,141 miles from Chicago to New York means that the day of the practical commercial car has arrived

The route will lie through South Bend, Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester and Albany, a distance of 841 miles, which it will probably take ten days to cover. As soon as the load which it takes from Chicago is delivered in New York the truck will be loaded with three tons of merchandise at the New York house of Gimbel Bros., and will carry it to the Philadelphia branch of that firm. The latter city it will take part in the motor truck parade under the auspices of the Philadelphia Inquirer, June 8, and will then return to Dayton by way of Pittsburg. Several weeks will be required to make the full trip as no strict schedule will be followed after the car has left New York.

"Our firm was one of two that agreed to enter three motor trucks in a Chicago-New York run when such an event was being considered by the Chicago Motor Club at a meeting during the Chicago automobile show," Mr. Henley said. "Mr. Hoyles, "Most of the manufacturers, however seemed to be afraid that the trip would be too great for trucks as a class, fearing that bad roads and weak bridges would result in the failure of the run.

"The truck which will make the trip is a G. I. four cylinder machine that is capable of 15 miles an hour with its capacity load. One of its distinguishing features is the driving sprocket next the frame with the truck on the outside a reverse of the usual position of these parts. It is claimed that placing the sprocket near the point where the power is applied gives additional power.

Adopted by the Navy.

It is generally conceded that the United States Navy never adopts anything that actual practice and long-drawn-out experiments have not emphatically proven to be a success. Mr. Hawley, particularly pleasing to Ernest Plentie to know that the Plentie on the drivewheels of the Dayton shock absorbers on all its battleships.

Mr. Plentie has for years been making a hydraulic shock absorber that he contends is the best in the world. He has issued a challenge to all the other shock absorber manufacturers of $5,000 a side, if they can disprove his contention that his preventer is not what he claims.

Five Companies Merged Into One

Detroit Industrial Plants Go Into $700,000 Corporation—Hupp Motor Car Company Not Included.

Five Hupp corporations of Detroit, four of which are operating large industrial plants, have been consolidated as the Hupp Corporation, capitalized at $700,000 of which $400,000 is paid in cash. The companies entering this merger are the Hupp-Yates Electric Car Company, the Hupp Turner Machine Company, the Hupp James-Geyman Foundry Company, the Hupp-Johnson Forge Company and the R C. H. Sales Company.

The plants of the four first named occupy a goodly part of 60 acres of land overlooking Lake St. Clair and form a tariff one continuous plant. Each one of the interior of Mexico will be tied up. of the insurrectos achieves anything like permanent success along the border as her have considerable trade and attack other cities they will link together a series of revolutionary strongholds which will already extend nearly across Mexico. ### An Exceptional Town.

"There is only one town in the world on record where every motor car owned is of one make," said Martin H. Lore of the Velie Boston Branch yesterday. "That town is Lecompton, Kansas.

"There are 175 residents in the town and every one a motor cars. Every car owned in the town is a Velie. The cars were all sold on the recommendation as a result of the Velie policy of absolute service, proper maintenance and perfect satisfaction to the car owners. # PERCIVALS TELLS OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS

Meets a Number of Americans in the Ranks of the Insurrectos Across the Border.

Dr. Charles G. Percival, who is touring the world in the celebrated Abbott-Detroit "Bull Dog" two-One mile durability automobile and who is now in Mexico with a mileage of 27,000 miles already travelled, writes from Chihuahua, Mexico, interestingly of the present revolution. He says. The revolution is growing and if the warfare continues a few months longer all of the interior of Mexico will be tied up. If the insurrectos achieve anything like permanent success along the border as they have considerable trade and attack other cities they will link together a series of revolutionary strongholds which already extend nearly across Mexico. Already many railroads and freighting lines are in complete control of the revolutionists and be telegraph lines in many sections are now being used exclusively for the business of the revolutionary government. # OUTING FOR THE BLIND CHILDREN

Numerous Cars Being Donated for the Use of Unfortunate Children.

In two short weeks the outing for the blind, crippled and orphaned children of Boston to Sharon will take place, and while many owners have placed their cars at the disposal of the secretary, Charles L. Campbell, for that day, quite there are yet many more needed to accommodate all the unfortunate children who are anticipating the great event. Up to the present time nearly 2500 automobiles have been obtained but at least 450 to 500 are necessary. Below the list published last Sunday, the following have been received:

Some may have the fear that in some way the children may damage the cars, but it is really remarkable how careful they are. All seem to realize the great favor done them and it would be impossible to gather together a more orderly crowd. While a number of the children is sent with each party who control the children. If it could only be forcibly brought to the attention of auto owners what a magnificent charity this is, how it really eliminates the little miles both in health and spirits, the only trouble would be to find children to fill the cars that now be obtained.

Among those who have contributed cash donations to the additional cars are H. Boston, Arthur Whitney, Mrs. Appleton, Miss Marion Stetson, Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Elizabeth B. Gill, Augustus B. Ely, Henry S. Howe, M. R. P., Fannie M. Fuller, Herbert S. Johnson, E. M. Hills T. D. L., Agnes W. Van Brunt, Martin S. Jones, Walter D. Cox, Edward S. Fenno, P. Jaques, Mary B. Hebrend, John N. ### A NOVEL TEST.

Unusual Method of Determining Stability of Tires.

As a result of a wager that a set of pneumatic tires would not support the weight of a half grown elephant in addition to the weight of an ordinary touring car, the residents of Toronto, Ont., for a few days ago treated to the unusual sight of a baby elephant riding around in a "baby carriage."

The fun had its inception in a conversation between Col. Van Beaver Cronyn, president of the Goodyear Rubber Company of Canada and a friend of his who is known manager of a traveling circus. The discussion turned toward the marvelous pneumatic resisting power of the walls of a pneumatic tire.

"Yes, sir," one of our regular no-rim-cut tires is strong enough to support the weight of Trixie" if she would consent to climb into a hansom and take a ride like other ladies," said the man. And the proposal official, referring to Trixie, the 2,700 pound young elephant is one of the chief attractions of the show.

The showman accepted and Mr Van Beaver did not know how much a baby young elephant weighed and so the question a nominal wager was put up and a Mitchell touring car with a twin cylinder was secured. The car was equipped with Goodyear no-rim-cut tires, which had already traveled several hundred miles, but these were not changed.

After some coaxing Patsy was induced to enter the car, while Mr trainer stood on the rear seat to keep her from taking fright and bolting. Much to the chagrin of the circus crowd, the tires refused to flatten, and the juvenile pachyderm was run several blocks through the city, to the delight of the crowd. After the few rods Patsy seemed to enter into the spirit of the thing and gave evidence of enjoying her novel joy ride.—Boston Globe.

THE SPEEDWAY VERY BUSY PLACE

Clans All Gathering at Indianapolis Speedway, Preparing to Establish New Records.

By E. L. VAIL.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 20.—The Speedway is a very busy place and the speed kings are collecting like flies around a molasses barrel.

Ralph Dupret, Aitken, Mers and Law Zengle with their National blue streaks, have been practicing on the Speedway daily for the past ten days.

Our native son, Harry Grant with his faithful Alco, arrived yesterday and has been trying No. 18 out in a conservative way.

Bruce Brown, who ran away from home when a mere boy to become one of the former most noted racing drivers, arrived yesterday with his Flat, and his car appears to be in nice shape.

Louis Disbrow and Neil Whalen attracted considerable attention yesterday when a brass band escorted them into the city after they had completed their trip from New York, driving through without any signs of trouble in their Four Interbred.

Lewis Strang, who is so well known he requires no introduction in your city, is putting in some fast laps with his Case car.

Charlie Basle and Arthur Chevrolet, with their Marquette Buicks, have been doing some fine running on the Speedway. Chevrolet being given credit with doing the fastest lap up to date.

Chevrolet had an accident to-day, which nearly caused fatal results to himself and mechanic, as well as to Harry Grant. Chevrolet was coming down the back stretch better than a hundred miles per hour, and was preparing to pass Grant when a rear tire rolled off.

His front wheels left the bricks and struck the soft dirt, but he got his front wheels back on the track, when his rear wheels went off, throwing his car a complete somersault. Chevrolet maintained his reputation of a charmed life by being thrown together with his mechanic free from the car, receiving only a shaking up.

Had Chevrolet had this accident after passing Grant it would have no doubt resulted fatally for all four parties.

However, the crowd of enthusiastic spectators who turn out every day to watch the practice was thunderstruck when they saw Chevrolet and his machine swerve on the track, but when he gracefully righted the car the crowd was ready to give a mighty cheer at his success, when the monster machine pitched into the air, turning completely over.

The car was only slightly damaged, and will be on the track again in a few days.

Almost all of the drivers are doing some very fast driving in practice, endeavoring to determine which tires to use, as they are apparently thoroughly satisfied on every point but tires.

YALE IS TO HAVE A GREAT HILL CLIMB

Many of the Leading Drivers in the Country Will Contend for Honors in New Haven.

More than one hundred entries, amateur and professional, are practically assured for the Yale hill climb on Shingle Hill, West Haven, Ct., Saturday, June 10. Last year a list of fourteen almost equaled this number, while in 1909 there were no less than 85 entries. The fact that the Yale Automobile Club has joined hands with the New Haven Automobile Club in an effort to make this season's event the largest hill-climbing contest in history assures a great program. With such stars as Ralph De Palma, David Bruce-Brown, Caleb Bragg and a host of other cracks tentatively entered, the competition will be hot. Bragg and Bruce-Brown being Yale graduates naturally are loyal to their Alma Mater, and made dire efforts to be present.

Numerous accessories are being held back pending the outcome of the 500-mile race at Indianapolis. Louis Disbrow when from that city that he will enter the Pope "Hummer" at the Yale event, provided he can get it shipped East and tuned up in time. This car has not yet been seen in slope-cutting contests, but judging from the way it broke so many world's records at Jacksonville, the car no doubt can show class on the hills. Dawson, by the way, is considered one of the best hill-climb drivers living, having won numerous competitions of this character with cars of other makes.

Large cash prizes are offered for the drivers in addition to handsome cups for the amateur pilots and automobiles. In the free-for all events $100 will go to the winner and $50 to second best. In the class "C" events $35 is offered for each Motorcycle competitions are also carded.

Shingle Hill is nine-tenths of a mile in length and is no easy course. Bruce-Brown holds its record, 51 seconds flat when a Fiat was used. Chevrolet in 1908 with the Contest Committee, No. 113 Church street, New Haven, Ct.

CADILLAC WINS CLIMB.

At the annual hill climb recently held by the automobile owners of Greenville, S. C., a Cadillac car easily took first prize in its class.

This is the second time a Cadillac has come off winner in this event. On the previous occasion the driver of the car was a kid of fourteen years the son of Eugene F. Bates, and he had pitted against him drivers of mature years and experience in the event just held the winning car was driven by John A. Bailey. It was a demonstrator of 1911 model.

EXCELLENT RECORD.

Manager Rockwell Tells What Has Been Done.

Expert salesmen skilled in handling high grade motor cars in New England territory are talking about the unusual record of sales of cars above medium price just made by the Boston branch of the Thomas J. Jeffery Company.

C. P. Rockwell, manager for the Rambler people in New England, claims this record for his organization:

For the ninety-five calendar days, from January 26 to April 30 inclusive, this branch sold ninety-six cars, each one a definite order—no stock orders among them. In the ninety-five calendar days above mentioned there were fourteen Sundays and two legal holidays, leaving seventy-nine working days in which to sell ninety-six cars.

The average price of the Rambler is in the neighborhood of $3,000. In spite of satisfactory Rambler sales in other sections, Boston holds the record.

BROCKTON BREAKING BUSINESS RECORDS

Is the Greatest Shoe Manufacturing Centre on the Globe.

UNIQUE FOR ACHIEVEMENT

In Last Five Years Products Have Increased Over Eight Millions in Value.

BROCKTON, May 20.—Brockton has more diversified features than any other city in the United States, and is one of the fastest growing communities to-day. Alfred W. Donovan, president of the New England Boot and Shoe Club, in an address before the Board of Trade recently, literally slapped Brockton square in the face when he said that Brockton must wake up, that the board session resembled a knitting party, that Brockton business men must come to, and that the city was a graveyard.

Mr. Donovan struck a responsive chord at just the crucial moment. At this time every business man in the city is working overtime to boom Brockton, and do not agree with Mr. Donovan. They believe that Brockton is about the greatest city in the country, and they are going to put their shoulders to the wheel and boost.

With such a progressive man as Mayor Harry C. Howard at the helm, the city is bound to go ahead. He is the youngest Mayor in the State and is a level headed business man with sound ideas and [illegible] business acumen. [illegible] the Merchants' Association, the Board of Trade, the Economic Club and the Industrial Commission to assist.

Leads World in Men's Shoes.

Brockton is acknowledged to be the world's greatest shoe centre in the world. There are not as many shoe factories in operation here as in other cities, but the output is greater. The George E. Keith Company plant is the largest shoe manufactory in the world and the firm sells shoes in every civilized country in the world—forty four in all. The largest pair of shoes ever made were turned out of a Brockton factory, the size being No. 22. The most expensive shoes were made in Brockton also, and the tiniest footwear was also made here. The most expensive shoes were made for the baby daughter of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. Shoe factories which are located in Rockland, Bridgewater, Randolph and Stoughton and other surrounding towns market their product as Brocton made and are practically parts of Greater Brockton. The value of the Brockton shoe product in 1909 was $42,000,000. Seventeen million pairs of shoes produced in Brocton factories in 1910. The phrase often used, "Brockton shoes lead the world," is therefore well and truly applied.

The most expert and best paid shoemakers in the world gravitate to Brockton, so that plenty of superior help is at all times available in the factories. The 20,000 employes in the local factories produced a product valued at $45,978,000 last year, or 11 per cent. of all the shoes produced in the world. The men and women employed in the shoe factories are healthier, better paid and better dressed than any other class of wage workers in the country. This fact is freely admitted by experts who have investigated. Not only the shoe workers, but the wage-earners generally are paid on a higher scale than in any other place. This is evidenced by the fact that city laborers are paid $2.50 a day for eight hours' work, which is more than two laborers in any other city are paid.

In the last five years Brockton's products have increased $8,181,000.

Labor Difficulties Rare.

Industrial harmony prevails in Brockton, labor difficulties being rare, owing to the prevalence of arbitration agreements for settlement of any difficulties arising. Ex-Gov. William L. Douglas of the world's famous W. L. Douglas Shoe Company is the "father" of the arbitration method of settling industrial disputes, having instituted the State Board of Arbitration. Brockton's freedom from strikes and lockouts for the past fourteen years is conclusive evidence of the value of the arbitration method.

Brockton has forty-five shoe factories with a total floor area of over 1,750,000 square feet in which 20,000 skilled operatives are employed; one factory alone having a capacity of 19,242 pairs daily. In addition to the shoe factories there are over 200 establishments which manufacture accessories allied to the shoe industry, such as lasts, dies, patterns, goring, tacks, shoe tools, machinery, rands, counters, paper and wooden boxes, blacking, shoe strings and numerous others.

Brockton, a bustling city of nearly 60,000 inhabitants, advancing with leaps and bounds toward the 100,000 mark, is cosmopolitan and metropolitan in many ways, yet lacks a hotel. There isn't a place in Brockton where a traveler can eat and sleep and settle his bill with the same cashier. There are many apartment hotels here, however, and many restaurants, but the thirsty drummer hies himself back to the Hub after finishing his business here.

While Brockton has its great white way there are no gilded cafes or lobster palaces where the child of pleasure or man of the world can tarry away a weary hour. It is the only city of its size in the country that has mounted the water wagon and held its seat for twenty five consecutive years, with one exception—that, thirteen years back—when it jumped off to pick up the whip. That's going some when one considers that Brockton has tolerated the saloons just once in its history as a city.

Hoyt Plays Produced.

The City Theatre was the first theatre in the country that was entirely dependent on electricity for illuminating purposes. Charles K. Hoyt, the famous playwright, tried out all his plays here, among them being, "A Texas Steer," "A Black Sheep," "A Midnight Belle," "A Temperance Town" and "A Stranger in New York." All these plays were successes. Brockton has also turned out some theatrical managers, who afterward made good, among them Barney Reilly, Thomas Reilly, Thomas Buckley, Frank Buckley and Dennis Sullivan. Miss Annabelle Davidson, present manager of the theatre, was the first woman manager of the country. She has been in active service for a period of sixteen years.

Among other features the Brockton district has the largest body of fresh water in Massachusetts, that of Lake Assawampsett, at Lakeville. The lake comprises 2,164 acres, and a nearby pond covers 2,000 acres. On the shore of this lake is the Plymouth Cordage Company's great plant, the largest rope manufactory in the world.

In Holbrook, a suburb of Brockton, there's a man named Luke Reynolds, aged ninety-six, who is believed to be the only man in the country who has never taken a drop of medicine. He has cured his ills by drinking large quantities of water.

Brockton is the only city in the United States where a merchant hired a man to clean the streets, because the city department didn't properly care for the streets. The James Edgar Company did this and the man was known as the "White Winged Angel."

Brockton is the commercial centre of 200,000 people, this number of people living within a radius of ten miles of the city proper. The following towns form a circle around Brockton, and all are considered a part of Greater Brockton: Avon, Randolph, Holbrook, Brookville, Stoughton, Eastondale, Easton, South Easton, North Easton, Raynham, Bridgewater, Cochesset, Beaver, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, Whitman, Pembroke Hanson, Hanover, Rockland, Abington, North Abington and Bryantville and North Stoughton.

Brookline's Splendid Gymnasium Is to Be Enlarged

"Richest Town's" Model Institution Is Most Popular

INSTRUCTOR, MARY McGRATH — DRYING THE HAIR

Men and Women Find Recreation in Town's Model Institutions.

EVERYBODY knows that Brookline is the richest town in the United States, but few people realize what a fine thing it is to live in a rich town.

There are cities as big as Brookline which cannot build a picket fence around a town park without economizing for months afterwards, or raising the taxes, but Brookline can spend hundreds of thousands of dollars and still keep its rate below that of any of the surrounding cities and towns.

That is why Brookline is able to build and support the finest public bath and gymnasium in the United States, why the town can afford to pay for the public's recreation, and why after spending $150,000 for its physical culture plant it is now preparing to extend and enlarge it.

All Attend the Gym.

In Brookline everybody goes to the gymnasium and the bath. The rich people and the middle class people do not turn up their noses at it because it is a town institution, because, town institution or not, it is better, keep better equipped and better managed than any private institution could be.

The women's classes in the gymnasium include many rich and aristocratic women who could afford to pay for the privilege if it were necessary, besides many poorer women who go because it does not cost anything.

They go for all sorts of purposes, but principally for recreation, because they have a good time.

There are classes for tiny girls from five to ten years, which the instructors call the nickel and dime age; there are classes for young girls in high school, and classes for women of all ages.

There are also numerous classes for boys and men. The swimming pool is one of the greatest attractions of the gymnasium and for many years was the only town swimming pool in the country. It is still one of the largest and best.

Are Two Buildings.

The Brookline Gymnasium is located in Tappan street. It is beside the Manual High School, and opposite the Brookline High School and in front of the Brookline Common, which is used as a ball ground for the school teams.

There are two buildings, the original building which contains the swimming tank, more than a dozen years old, and the new gymnasium building which was erected only three or four years ago.

The gymnasium building cost $120,000 and it is worth it. It contains one splendid gymnasium, superbly equipped, where the various classes take place, a track of twenty laps to the mile, and half a dozen smaller gymnasiums for special work. Thus there is a basket ball room, a boxing and wrestling ring, equipped like a regulation ring with padded corners, a baseball cage and a sprinting track. There are also large locker rooms.

Every part of the building is shining with cleanliness, although it is constantly used by all classes of people.

Outside on the grounds has been placed considerable apparatus, and during the Summer the boys and girls are urged to work in the open air as much as possible.

Director in Charge.

The director is J. Leonard Mason, and during the three years that he has been in charge of the institution he has endeavored to make the gymnasium a place of recreation and entertainment for the people of Brookline. He believes that if people enjoy themselves there they will keep coming and thus get into good physical condition.

A part of this plan is the Brookline Gymnasium Athletic Association, which goes in for competitive sports.

The association is formed of persons who attend the gymnasium, as the town could not very well select teams and hold meets as well as meet other institutions. Its purpose is to do all of those things. It has formed baseball teams which have competed with many schools and colleges and won many victories.

The existence of the association keeps alive rivalry and competition and makes everybody work harder than they might otherwise do.

Every conceivable form of physical culture is taught at the Brookline Gymnasium and many splendid all around athletics have graduated from the institution.

The women and girls are not encouraged to do hard work but they take light exercise to music and are taught folk dances. The dancing classes are taught by Miss Mary V. McGrath.

Women's Class Popular.

The women's class includes young matrons and gray haired ladies and all ages between. They enter into the exercises with the zest of children and seldom give up once they have joined a class.

"Lots of women come here to reduce weight," said Director Mason, "and they do provided they do not go home and eat too much, because the exercise gives them an appetite, but most of them just come for recreation."

There is a beautifully banked running track in the balcony of the gymnasium and some of the women insist on using it although the instructors do not encourage the women to run. One middle aged woman has become a mile runner during the Winter and makes very good time.

The little girls' classes are large, and have resulted in making strong, healthy children out of anemic ones. The girls hold competitive games and the present champions of the gymnasium are Isabelle McDonald, Ethel Driscoll, Marion Johnson, Madelyn Lynch, Florence Eisenhardt and Dorothy Chester, all of whom are about twelve years old.

The girls in the Brookline Gym play baseball and some of them are excellent batters and fielders. They are also excellent basket ball players. There is even a strong girl among the seniors who puts up a seventy-five pound dumbbell.

Some Champion Swimmers.

The big swimming tank gives the Brookline Gymnasium Association a chance to develop wonderful swimming teams which have won championships in the past. Lester Rich represented the Brookline Association at the Olympic games in London a few years ago and made a splendid showing.

The present leading swimmers are E. Duffy, Walter Newcomb, Philip Nason, J. P. Putnam and Ralph McKinnon. These young chaps are all comers according to Instructors Mann and C. T. Cameron. There are two twelve-year-old boys known as the Richardson twins who look just alike and who do wonderful stunts in the tank.

The boxing ring has developed many champions. Johnny Fallon, who won the national championship in the 105-pound class, was trained here and so was Jack Mansfield, who holds the 158-pound New England championship.

Walter Falls and John Bogan are well known wrestlers who have reached the finals of several national amateur contests. Oscar Hedlund is at present the champion all round champion.

Two unusual features in the bath house is a small private tank, in which little children are taught to swim, and the hair drying room. Drying the hair is the worst feature of a woman's bath. The Brookline institution provides a bright sunny room in which are a number of pipes like steamship ventilators. The girls sit with their heads against the openings in these pipes and currents of hot air quickly dry their hair and enable them to leave the building without fear of catching cold.

Many Visit Natatorium.

Brookline has less than 30,000 inhabitants and the popularity of the bath is shown by the fact that more than 60,000 bathed in the natatorium during the year, an average of 250 a day, while more than 30,000 people attended the gymnasium during a period of twenty-five weeks.

The Gymnasium is entirely free, but for the natatorium a small fee is charged at certain hours, while at others it is free. Non-residents are charged a quarter for a bath when they make application.

The Boy Scouts of Brookline are nearly all members of the gymnasium and they drill there and go through their maneuvres.

Director Mason hopes to acquire a lot of land which adjoins the gymnasium grounds, so that the out-of-door gymnasium can be made more important.

BARON SEES PEACE PLEA IN BASEBALL

De Constant, Distinguished French Visitor, Impressed by Umpire's Power.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant of France, speaking on "International Peace," before the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon, said that the "moral and intellectual development of mankind is the solution of the problem to put an end to all wars." He said that if the leaders of public opinion would only talk on the question of arbitration when war is threatened between one country and another public opinion would assert itself in that direction.

As he was leaving the hall after his address all rose and several grasped his hand. This continued until he had shaken hands with every one in the hall, more than 200 men and women.

"We all want peace," he added, "and you Americans know how to get it in a number of ways. Take, for instance, your great game of baseball. I attended a game and received the surprise of my life. I saw a man throw a ball at a man with a stick. The ball bounded off the stick and the man ran to what you Americans call a 'base.' Another man said something and the 'mob' yelled 'kill the umpire.' Then the umpire put up his finger, the 'mob' quieted down and the game went on. That's the kind of arbitration that counts. If it's good for baseball and other games it surely is good to have such personages acting as umpires to arbitrate questions that will eliminate all wars. In a short time we shall see the end of frightful wars."

Percival Sharp and J. E. Pickles, members of the National Education Association of England and Wales, also spoke.

"We are much struck by the way in which you are drifting away from the classical scheme of education," said Mr. Sharp, "and of the manner in which your high schools are introducing utilitarian matters in the curriculum. The function of the school is to develop character and to send out into the world brave and alert boys. I hope that the trades' union spirit will not creep into your schools. There is a great danger of dwelling too much on this dangerous utilitarian aspect."

Mr. Pickles said that they have rejected the name "military" to the drills they have in the English schools, and call it "physical exercise."

"In England we're eliminating histories that speak of bloody warfare," he added. "We don't believe in having the child taught such matters as bloody battles. We in England are thorough lovers of peace; we've proved in our history that peace is best."

City Hall Notes

The competitors for city contracting work are wearing out their pencils in an effort to get in the lowest bid. On a $23,000 paving contract for Geneva avenue, Dorchester, there was only $6 difference between the second lowest and the lowest bidder. Senator Jim Timilty's company got the contract.

Commissioner Rourke was the announcer for the sight-seeing tour of Boston provided for Mayor Napoleon Drouin and City Engineer W. D. Vallairge of Quebec yesterday. They are inspecting Boston's pavements, and expressed themselves as of opinion that Boston need not yield to any city in the world in well kept streets.

On next Wednesday the City Council gives a public hearing on Councillor Walter Ballantyne's ordinance to establish a "curfew" in Boston. The proposed ordinance concerning the height and weight of firemen will also be threshed out at the same time.

"KISS WALTZ" SUNG AND WINS EVERYONE

Excellent Cast Brings Newest Viennese Musical Success to the Shubert.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE waltz trade is still brisk in Vienna, as you learned at the Shubert Theatre last evening, where they mixed kissing and waltzing in the most bewildering but, nevertheless, agreeable fashion.

This time it was "The Kiss Waltz," right out of the Viennese waltz factory, which must be running night and day to keep pace with the hunger of American managers for operettas that move in the familiar and popular three-quarter time. And "The Kiss Waltz" has come to stay—if not in Boston, elsewhere—for it has all of the engaging qualities that make a musical entertainment worth while; that is, if your taste in musical plays has not deteriorated to the level of the frothy, slap-stick product that has been passed around almost exclusively this season.

Music Has Real Charm.

Music that has real charm and a production that puts the Shuberts in the class with courageous spenders, made "The Kiss Waltz" one of the real delights of the season. Whether it will succeed as a Broadway Summer show is another matter, for it had neither vulgar vaudeville nor rickety rag-time, without which in these days of theatrical uplift [illegible] followers of the drama are difficult to satisfy. But it has other qualities far more important and substantial—not overlooking the kiss waltz itself, which might be described as more of a clinch than a kiss, but overwhelmingly inviting.

After two years of European success it is fair to presume that "The Kiss Waltz," rich with melody and [illegible] dainty [illegible] thing of recent importation, will find a happy existence for many months in the land where the native production has not lately reached a much higher scale than works like "The Follies."

Like its predecessors from Vienna the theme of "The Kiss Waltz" runs to violent romance, with everybody concerned in a more or less high state of infatuation over some fluffy maid, with the [illegible] themselves doing very well [illegible] along kindred lines. You had only to hear Van Rensselaer Wheeler and Maud [illegible]bert raise their voices in the particular melody that combined kissing and waltzing, to know that the evening has started briskly and was likely to hold the pace.

Other Entertaining Numbers.

Edith Bradford, too, who performed similar service in "The Chocolate Soldier," kept actively at it until she reached a climax in the "Hoop" song, one of the most gratifying numbers of the performance. Elsa Ryan ingenued herself into "The Kiss Waltz" with a great deal of girlish emphasis, and Charles Bigelow and Eva Davenport were gorgeously amusing in rough comedy. Edgar Atchison Ely made the most of a stuttering role and Charles Angelo raved beautifully over Miss Bradford's flirtations. He also used his voice on a song or two.

Of the big musical numbers "Ta Ta, Little Girl," by Mr. Ely and a group of girls, was perhaps the most effective, although the first act finale was hardly less agreeable to the ear.

Musically "The Kiss Waltz" will hold its own with any of the season's productions, and the book, while not of the same excellent character, proved distinctly superior to many that have invited public attention. Not even a mid-ocean audience could have been stirred to more enthusiasm than was unloosened last evening. And it was not misdirected or unmerited.

AGAINST MIXED MARRIAGES

Anglican Prelates of Canada Formally Oppose Them.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 20.—In all the churches of the Anglican Communion there will be read to-morrow a pastoral letter signed by the Right Rev. Samuel P. Matheson, D. D., archbishop and metropolitan of the Province of Rupert's Land, and Rev. Charles Hamilton, D. D., archbishop and metropolitan of the Province of Canada, discouraging mixed marriages. This pastoral has also been caused by the decisions by Judges of Quebec, who hold that marriages of Roman Catholics by the clergy of other denominations are null and void.

Accused of Handbag Theft.

Miss Marian B. Reardon of No. 41 Sheridan street, Jamaica Plain, missed her handbag, with contents valued at $15, while she was shopping in a Washington street department store yesterday afternoon. Shortly after Inspector Knox of police headquarters arrested Mrs. Annie Atherton, thirty-four years old, of Smith street, Roxbury and accused her of the theft of the handbag.

DAYLIGHT HOLD-UP IN COPLEY SQUARE

Girl's Purse With $100 Is Snatched, but Plucky Hotel Porter Captures Robber.

Miss M[illegible] Stewart [illegible] the headmaster [illegible] grammar school [illegible] robbed of her purse [illegible] crowded Copley Square [illegible] noon by a bold thief [illegible] a brisk chase and a [illegible] [illegible] and the thief attracted [illegible] [illegible] against [illegible] [illegible] police came.

[illegible] gave the name of W[illegible] [illegible]. The police said that he was recently released from State Prison after serving three years from a similar offence.

Money on Sidewalk.

Miss Stewart's purse was found on the sidewalk with the money intact. Miss Stewart lives at No. 178 West Canton street. Three years ago she was held up near her home and brutally beaten by a man who escaped.

The robbery yesterday was particularly audacious, [illegible] of being in daylight in a big square where hundreds of Back Bay residents, art students, Tech boys and others were passing.

Miss Stewart was on her way to see an [illegible] at the Hotel Westminster. The thief snatched her purse on the Clarendon street side [illegible] square, within the very shadow of Trinity church and near [illegible] Phillips Brooks [illegible]

Porter Catches Thief.

In the midst [illegible] surroundings the thief [illegible] Miss Stewart's purse and ran along Clarendon street. Harney, the hotel porter, heard the cries of "Stop, thief!" and took up the chase. What followed Harney tells thus:

"I caught up with the man and grabbed him by the body. He turned and aimed a vicious blow at my face. I felled him to the walk. He struggled to his feet and we roughed it for a while. He was no match for me. I dragged him to the hotel steps. Thousands of people collected and some yelled 'kill him!' To protect the man I had to take him into the hotel until the police came."

Harney might have added that the people who shouted to "kill him" after the man was caught stood and looked on without lifting a finger while Harney and the fugitive were fighting on the sidewalk. After the man was mastered the crowd became demonstrative.

LASELL GLEE CLUB'S CONCERT A SUCCESS

The annual concert of the Lasell Glee Club was held last evening in Auburndale and was attended by several hundred friends and parents of the young women as well as by a number of students from Harvard, Technology and Boston University. The concert was held in the school gymnasium which was decorated by the various class and school colors.

A program of vocal and instrumental music was given by the young women. The choral singing was unusually good and there were several duets by the Misses Miriam Flynn and Agnes Adelsdorf which were well received. Miss Ida Hammond and Miss Eleanor Hammond sang three duets which won much applause. Miss Marion Ordway was the accompanist and the leader was Miss Miriam Flynn.

The members of the Glee Club are: President, Marion Shlan; vice-president, Mary Goodwillie; director, Miss Goodrich; treasurer, Doris H. Powers; business manager, Edith F. Waller; first sopranos, Helen J. Scott, Ruth Grabe, Vivian Cooke, Edith Waller; first altos, Doris Powers, Virginia Lee, Florence Poston, Mary Goodwillie, Florence Myers; second sopranos, Marion Shlan, Eleanor Hammond, Ida Hammond, Agnes Adelsdorf, Genevieve Bettcher, Bernice Lincoln; second altos, Edessa Warner, Alma Bunch, Lois Hammond, Vera Bradley, Gertrude Tingley, Genevieve Evans.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL SHOW.

Exhibit of Work by Hebrew Pupils on Wednesday.

The annual exhibition of the Hebrew Industrial school will be held at the school house, No. 154 Charles street, Wednesday, from 3 o'clock until 5 in the afternoon, or in case of stormy weather the day following at the same time. The work exhibited [illegible] millinery, drafting, designing and sewing by hand [illegible] machine. The public is cordially invited.

SUES FOR $10,000.

Stoughton Man Claims Alienation of Wife's Affection.

A $10,000 suit brought by Christie E. Montgomery of Stoughton against George N. Davis of the same town for the alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, Elsie, was assigned for trial [illegible] week in the Superior Court at Dedham.

Montgomery in his complaint alleges that the defendant unlawfully and unjustly deprived him of the society and assistance of his wife in February and December, 1909, and in 1910, January 11, February 18, March 16, April 4.

More Rate Suspensions.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Interstate Commission to-day further suspended until November 1, all through rates on tap line connections which roads operating in Southern Freight Association territory that had been previously suspended until June 1. The commission also suspended proposed increases in rates on transportation of cattle from points in Southwest Western freight territory to Oklahoma City until September 21.

Ask Foss to Name Jackson.

Governor Foss will be asked to-morrow to appoint Charles A. Jackson police commissioner for Boston in a petition presented by the latter's friends. They say the petition is signed by many manufacturers, business men and clergymen and that the list of signers is evidence that the Jackson candidacy has "remarkable strength."

Lynn Man Starts 100th Year.

Edward I. Goldsmith of No. 12 Mason street, Lynn, to-day starts off on the hundredth year of his life. He celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday yesterday. He is well preserved, and told his family he intends to become the oldest man in the United States before he is through. He claims the distinction of being the oldest Civil War veteran in Massachusetts. A year ago one of his birthday gifts was the appointment by Commander-in-chief William H. VanSant of the Grand Army as aide-de-camp with the rank of colonel.

DO YOU KNOW YOU ARE GOING TO DIE

Well, you are. And do you want your name to go down into [illegible] as the man who got rich by selling [illegible] Soap or [illegible]?

Of course you don't. Well here's a chance to get in right with posterity.

GIVE HARVARD A LIBRARY

Think of a beautiful marble building situated among the green trees in Harvard yard, bearing over the door:

GIVEN BY JAMES WHIFFLETREE SNOOFER

Think of the millions of young men who will bless your name!

Get your application in early!

Alas and alack, this method is for the [illegible]. Harvard has no press agent, and these means are out of the question for a hundred years or so. In the meantime, seriously, the University needs a library building.

America's oldest university has one of the world's finest libraries, owning 1,425,[illegible] volumes. And to house this great collection of priceless books it has a library building—Gore Hall—which would be a disgrace to Podunkville-on-the-Ka[illegible]. There is not a town of 30,000 people in the United States which has not a better library building than Harvard University. The building is seventy-three years old.

Only a few of the books can be kept [illegible] the old, ugly, [illegible] library [illegible] and journals are kept [illegible] in various [illegible] there is what Professor [illegible] college pays of the situation.

"Above all looms the necessity of a new library building. This has been pointed out so often that there is little for me to say on the subject except the obvious truism that every year makes the situation worse. With what is in many ways the finest collection of books in the country, we have the one in every way the worst housed, considering its value. As is well known, the building is far from safe, yet any loss from fire would be irreparable. It is crammed with books from top to bottom, and we have had to store some forty-five thousand of the volumes least called for in the cellars of Perkins, Walter Hastings and Robinson Halls and in the Divinity School, whence [illegible] still has to be reached somehow or other for they continue to be in demand. Every year this vexatious and costly operation of sending thousands of our books outside must be continued with increasing discomfort until we get a new building."

Forty-five thousand books stored in cellars! Please note.

Charles [illegible], '21, treasurer of the university, joins in this Macedonian cry for a new library, saying:

"Harvard needs a new library. The building we have is outgrown. We look forward to the time when we shall have a bigger one. [illegible] and may not [illegible] are in sight. I don't know [illegible] a new library would cost. We [illegible] that would enable us to [illegible] present library, in sections [illegible] to our means. A library gift would [illegible] be very acceptable to Harvard at this time."

Now, won't Mr. Carnegie crown his library giving life with the finest library gift of a [illegible] dollar library building to Harvard?

HELD AS KEY WORKERS.

Boys Believed to Have Made Cambridge and Somerville Breaks.

Arthur R. Brown, nineteen, of Somerville avenue, Somerville, was held in $500 for the Superior Court by Judge Wentworth yesterday on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny. Brown pleaded guilty to both charges. The police believe that in Brown and another young man, Lester E. Osborne, fifteen, whom they are seeking, they have the two false key workers responsible for many breaks in Cambridge and Somerville. Osborne and another young man were seen by the Cambridge police at an early hour to-day standing on Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge. Osborne was arrested, but his companion got away. Information he gave the police led to Brown's arrest. When searched by the police thirty skeleton keys were found in Osborne's possession and Brown was found to have an unloaded revolver in his pocket.

WILL DINE HAMMOND.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hearst to Entertain Envoy and Wife.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hearst are to give a dinner Tuesday evening at their home in honor of John Hays Hammond, special envoy to the coronation in London and Mrs. Hammond. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond will be accompanied abroad next week by their sons and Miss Hammond, the sister of Mr. Hammond. In London they will occupy the house of the late Baroness Burdett-Coutts, in Piccadilly, for the period they will be in London. After returning from the coronation Mr. and Mrs. Hammond plan to spend the Summer at their home near Gloucester, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Hearst will probably go abroad next week, to be gone most of the Summer.

Confer on Boy Leper.

Governor Foss is to confer Monday with a representative of Governor Pothier of Rhode Island regarding the Sheridan boy leper. The Rhode Island health authorities have not abandoned efforts to persuade Massachusetts to take the boy at Penikese.

Saved After Six Days.

NEW YORK, May 20.—After having been lost at sea for six days, with her crew of five men supposedly without food, Bermuda pilot boat No. 2 was picked up five miles southwest of Scotland light by New York pilot boat No. 5.

DON'T READ THIS If You Don't Want to Laugh

GORDON—Let me congratulate you; they tell me your wife presented you with a baby.

MANN—Yes, that certainly is true, and I am as happy as a bird.

GORDON—I suppose you are doing nothing but showering the baby with presents.

MANN—I should say not. I think I'll wait until Christmas and give him his name.

GORDON—Have a cigar?

MANN—What's the matter with it?

GORDON—Tell me, do you believe in love at first sight?

MANN—Well, I'll tell you, sixty days is more like business.

GORDON—You know my girl is not very handsome, but she has a great figure.

MANN—Is that so?

GORDON—Yes, about fifty thousand. What do you pay for insurance on your new home?

MANN—I am not carrying any insurance.

GORDON—Well, suppose the place burns up?

MANN—Well, how can it burn up if I am not carrying any insurance.

GORDON—Where did you make most of your money, Sam?

GORDON—What doing, making book?

MANN—I should say not. I had that beaten a mile.

GORDON—Oh, I suppose you had a system of your own and played the horses.

Sam Mann, Who Is Playing in "The New Leader" and Cliff Gordon "The German Senator" Have a Funny Conversation

MANN—No, I started a pawnshop outside of the race track for the people that wanted to get home after the races were over.

GORDON—I understand that girl of yours comes from Yonkers.

MANN—Yes; that's right.

GORDON—Well, they tell me she kissed every man in the town.

MANN—Well, Yonkers is not such a large place.

GORDON—What do you think of the cigar I gave you? It was smuggled.

MANN—I was just wondering how it got past the health authorities.

GORDON—Were you ever on the jury, Sam?

MANN—No, but I came very near it one time.

GORDON—How's that?

MANN—The man next door was drawn.

GORDON—Say, Sam, I heard that they can't play "Quo Vadis" next season.

MANN—Why is that?

GORDON—The Beef Trust has taken the bull away from them.

MANN—Did your sister marry a rich husband?

GORDON—No. He's a rich man, but a poor husband.

MANN—Do you know that my little dog is dead?

GORDON—I suppose he swallowed a tape line and died by inches, or else went up the alley and died by the yard.

MANN—O, no, he crawled under the bed and died by the foot.

GORDON—I think it very foolish of you to give the coat-room boy the last two dollars in your clothes for a tip.

MANN—I know, but you did not see the coat he gave me?

GORDON—By the way, did you recover the umbrella you lost last week?

MANN—No, I recovered a better one.

GORDON—What do you take for the grip?

MANN—Oh, I get it without taking anything.

GORDON—I saw your sister on the street yesterday.

MANN—How was she looking?

GORDON—I don't know—I didn't see her face.

MANN—How did you know it was my sister?

GORDON—Oh, I'm quick at figures.

MANN—Say, Cliff, are you married?

GORDON—No. I was though, and to a very rich

MANN—Well, what was the trouble?

GORDON—Poor soul, she died.

MANN—Did she have you much?

GORDON—Yes every night. You know, Sam, I once had a swell girl. I went to see her every night and used to call her "pig-eye-pig-eye" and she used to call me "hog-eye-hog-eye." Her father came in the parlor one night while we were holding hands and said, "Root, young feller, root." Of course, I got very indignant. So the girl and I stole out through the orchard, and she looked into my big brown eyes, and said, "Oh, Cliff, don't that big apple tree sigh and moan something terrible?" Then I looked down into her big blue eyes and said, "Yes, if you were as full of green apples as that tree is you would moan and groan something terrible."

MANN—Have you any brothers?

GORDON—Yes, I have a brother with one leg.

MANN—I suppose he lost his leg playing pinochle.

GORDON—No, he lost it playing checkers on a railroad. He forgot to jump.

MANN—Tell me, Cliff, were you ever in love? Did you ever feel that burning sensation around the heart?

GORDON—Yes, I did once.

MANN—Well, what did you do for it?

GORDON—I stopped smoking.

MANN—I tell you, Cliff, the only place for a poor man to live is at the North Pole.

GORDON—Well, why is that?

MANN—Well the chief reason is that they have six months day up there and six months night, so that when the landlord comes around for his rent all you have to do is tell him to call the following day.

O Beauty, What Crimes Are Done in Thy Name!

A Humorous Scene From Miss Elizabeth Jordan's New Comedy, "The Lady From Oklahoma," to Be Presented, For the First Time, To-morrow Night at Atlantic City, with Effie Shannon and Herbert Kelsey. Printed by Permission of Miss Jordan.

MRS. JOEL DIXON, wife of an Oklahoma multi-millionaire, suddenly realizes that she has failed to keep pace with her husband. Both are uneducated, but he has developed, and she has not. He has apparently ceased to love her; he is almost ashamed of her; he is getting interested in another woman. She is confronted by a crisis, proving that she must either lose him entirely or make herself over in seven months. She comes to New York to do the latter and engages a corps of educators, etiquette authorities and beauty specialists, to help her.

The second act of the play is laid in a beauty parlor, where Mrs. Dixon is put through the most complete, exhaustive and exhausting processes known to modern beauty specialists. She has her nails manicured, her fingers massaged and "tapered" and her complexion treated by Miss Clarice Mulholland, the manicure, while Miss "Birdie" Smith, a typical hairdresser, is constructing an elaborate coiffure on her head.

Mrs. Dixon is covered from head to foot with a white linen garment, fastened with strings at the back of her neck. Her face is covered with "skin food." Her hair is hanging over her shoulders. She is unrecognizable until she speaks. Beside her sits Miss Virginia Jefferson, a charming girl, whose task it is to instruct the lady in the elemental rules of English grammar, and the "placing" of the speaking voice. In the booth next to her sits a temperamental lady in an electric bath, whose discomfort helps to furnish the humor.

MISS MULHOLLAND (encouragingly):
You got nice nails, natu'ally. If you have 'em done every day for a few weeks, an' wear the gloves every night, your hands'll look fine. But you must keep the gloves on. You mustn't take 'em off at two in the mornin' an' throw 'em at the wall, like most ladies does.

MRS. DIXON
They're ruinin' all the linen sheets and pillow cases on my bed.

MISS MULHOLLAND
What d'you care? You live in a hotel, don't you? They ain't your sheets! Let the manager get peevish!

(Looks up and sees the hair-dresser tentatively trying the effect of a new wave on one side of Mrs. Dixon's head.)

My, Birdie, that's goin' to be swell!

MISS SMITH:
All she'll have on is a cornet, an' a transformation, an' three puffs an' a couple of curls.

(Miss Herrick enters.)

MISS MULHOLLAND:
How do, Miss Herrick? Ain't she goin' to look fine? If she'd leave us make her a real blonde, you'd never know her.

MISS SMITH
How do, Miss Herrick? Yes, Clarice, if you fixed her up, she'd bow to herself in the lookin' glass, thinkin' she was meetin' a stranger.

(Miss Smith resumes the waving of Mrs. Dixon's hair. Smoke arises from each wave, with a strong hint of burning hair. Miss Herrick shakes hands with Mrs. Dixon, and nods smilingly to the others.)

MISS HERRICK (cordially):
I'm sure it will be artistic, Miss Smith (Sits.)

MISS SMITH.
That's what I try to be, Miss Herrick. I stand off an' look at my subject, like she was a picture. I say to myself, "Now here's this lady. She's got a little head without much shape to it. She ain't got no height, nor dignity, nor looks to speak of, nor style. But she's got to be made artistic, I say. Then I do it.

There ain't nothin' I know of more interestin' than to work here, an' make people look the way they never thought they could. Believe me, I'd ruther do it than paint pictures.

MISS MULHOLLAND.
Take it from me, it don't do 'em no good. Mr. Freddy Belden says to me only the other mornin', "Miss Smith's an artist," he says. "Countess ought to give her a medal," he says, "for pilin' so much on the tops of women's heads that they dassent work the inside of them none," he says, "an' thus they become man's unresistin' prey." (Gloomily.) That sounded awful, Birdie—just like you was startin' women on the downward path.

MISS SMITH:
Many a woman's been kept off the toboggan by a healthy interest in a new coy-fur. Only tue other day a lady came in here. "I want to die," she says; "I ain't got nothin to live for." "Oh, yes you have," I says. "You ain't tried the new Bandanna Swirl." I wish you could a' seen her face light up.

MISS HERRICK (laughing):
Did she try it?

MISS SMITH:
Did she! I guess. When I got it all fixed she looked me. "Is it death now?" I says. "No," she says, even her air was glad an' gay. "I'm goin' to wear this to the theatre to-night," she says, "an' sit exactly in front of my hated rival. Then perhaps she'll die instead. You have given me a new interest in life, Miss Smith," she says, "an' I thank you."

(Miss Mulholland sniffs. Mrs. Dixon, who has been regarding herself at different angles in a hand-mirror, breaks resolutely into the conversation.)

MRS. DIXON.
I s'pose that's a joke. It 'most always is a joke when it sounds so terrible true.

MISS JEFFERSON:
Pardon. Terribly true.

MRS. DIXON
Yes, 'tis.

(Mrs. Dixon sighs heavily. Miss Mulholland finishes the nails, fills a bowl with boiling water and dips a cloth into it after wiping the skin food from Mrs. Dixon's face with the cloth and massaging it carefully the while. She then proceeds to "steam" her complexion by wringing out the hot cloth and laying it over her face. Mrs. Dixon gasps.

MISS HERRICK (to Miss Smith):
You must have some interesting experiences here.

MISS SMITH AND MISS MULHOLLAND
Interestin' experiences!

(They drop their work, open their lips to speak, lean forward impressively, then remember something and stop.)

MISS SMITH (pursing her lips):
The manager don't permit us to discuss 'em.

MISS MULHOLLAND (thoughtfully, standing back to study her "patient"):
Do you think we ought to "skin" her, Miss Herrick?

MISS HERRICK (hastily):
Good heavens, no! I don't think her complexion needs such heroic treatment.

MISS MULHOLLAND (reluctantly):
Well, mebbe it don't. Mebbe them little brown spots is on'y liver. We'll try the steam first, anyhow.

MISS SMITH (irritably):
Say, Clarice, do me a favor. Remember, I'm doin' somethin' to this patient, too. Leave her head straight, please. You'll have me buildin' this coy-fur on her left ear!

MISS MULHOLLAND (soothingly):
All right, Birdie. Control yourself.

(To Miss Jefferson, aside):
My, how sensitive we are when we got the artistic temper'ment.

(She removes the cloth, showing Mrs. Dixon's face, parboiled in appearance. Mrs. Dixon groans. Miss Mulholland continues the steaming, doing it six or eight times, stepping aside at intervals to give place to Miss Smith, who is still waving Mrs. Dixon's hair with her hot irons.)

MISS SMITH (dreamily)
Waves does take time. I know the man that invented the permanent mitural wave in women's hair. He puts something sticky on it. He charges fifty dollars for doin' it.

MISS JEFFERSON·
Doesn't it spoil the hair?

MISS SMITH (thoughtfully):
Well, sometimes, of course, when it burns up. But he don't charge nothin' when that happens.

MISS MULHOLLAND·
I know a man that blows up the skin in women's faces, and then flis the hollows with par-a-feen. He done it to a friend of mine. Her own mother didn't know her that night when she went home.

MRS. DIXON (eagerly)
Was she improved?

MISS MULHOLLAND
Her young man give her one look and then he went out and got drunk with "Rest in Peace" [illegible]

MISS HERRICK (laughing)

MISS MULHOLLAND
peace from him. He never come [illegible] An' her face looked so terrible [illegible] didn't go out for weeks. So I [illegible] had to rest. Now we'll massage [illegible] with cold cream. Then you'll [illegible]

MRS. DIXON (gloomily)
I s'pose I'll feel worse. Oh, ain't this awful!

MISS JEFFERSON
Isn't this awful

MRS. DIXON (with conviction)
Yes, it is.

(To Miss Mulholland).
I s'pose I've swallowed some of that cream.

MISS MULHOLLAND (coldly):
Well, don't. That jar's most gone.

MRS. DIXON:
I wish you'd tell me somethin', Miss Herrick. I went to Sherry's the other day for afternoon tea. Mrs. Dean took me, and I seen——

MISS JEFFERSON (correcting):
Pardon. Saw? Speak a little more softly, Mrs. Dixon, please.

MRS. DIXON·
I saw lots of women put their elbows on the tables. Why were they doin' that? Mrs. Dean won't let me do it, and I ain't——

MISS JEFFERSON:
Haven't.

MRS. DIXON:
Haven't had 'em on since I come. But if it was wrong, like she says——

MISS JEFFERSON:
As she said.

MRS. DIXON (a trifle emphatically):
As she said.

(To Miss Herrick, aside):
She has to correct me like this, 'cause we ain't got any time to lose. Now if it was wrong, why was they——

MISS JEFFERSON·
Were, were.

MRS DIXON:
Were, were they doin' it?

MISS HERRICK:
Possibly they didn't know any better.

MRS. DIXON:
Oh, yes, they did! They was society women.

MISS JEFFERSON (firmly):
Were society women. Lower your voice a trifle, please, Mrs. Dixon.

MISS MULHOLLAND:
(Darkly surveying the cloth with which she has wiped the cream off Mrs. Dixon's face.)
I admits that thinks they got clean faces ought to look at the cloth after rubbing off this cream. What soap d'ye use?

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH (shrilly):
Miss Mulholland! I think I've caught fire!

MISS MULHOLLAND (going to her):
Oh, no, you ain't. If it happened that easy lots more women would be dead.

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH
I feel so nervous. You know I'm here largely for my nerves.

MISS MULHOLLAND:
Well, you won't have no nerves after you get through.

(She turns a screw or two and comes back to Mrs. Dixon.)
Next we'll put on the ice-pack. That's real exhilaratin' and it closes all the pores.

(She takes a bowl of cracked ice, makes a poultice of the ice on a cloth, and applies it to Mrs. Dixon's face.)

MRS. DIXON (chattering teeth):
Ow-w-w! That's freezin' me!

MISS HERRICK·
What is Mrs. Dean doing with you now? What is your daily routine?

MRS. DIXON:
She had me read a leadin' New York newspaper every morning, to keep up with what's goin' on.. I do that in bed after my bath, an' while I'm havin' breakfast. Then she comes, an' we talk over the news an' happenin's. I come here every day to get these things done. I make 'em do everything at once, 'cause time is so precious. After they're through it's dinner time—I mean luncheon. (To Miss Smith.): You got your hull weight on one hair in my head!

MISS SMITH:
Excuse me. I'm most finished.

MRS. DIXON (wearily):
So am I.

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH (earnestly):
Miss Mul-hol-land! I know one foot's paralyzed. I can't feel a thing.

MISS MULHOLLAND (going to her):
Well, what you complainin' of, then? Some ladies feels awful in there. Control yourself. D'you know any potry? Sometimes that helps, if you say it to yourself.

MISS HERRICK:
What do you do after luncheon?

MRS. DIXON:
I take a nap to gain flesh. Mrs. Harwood says I got to gain ten pounds to make my figger right. Then we go for a drive in the park an' look at the other women. Of course, Miss Jefferson is with me the hull time, an' whenever I open my mouth she just about jumps into it, correctin' my mistakes, an' raisin' and lowerin' my voice like it was an elevator. (She pauses and sighs heavily.)

MISS HERRICK (sympathetically):
That's very important, you know.

MRS. DIXON:
I guess I know it. You don't think I'd stand it a minute if 't wa'n't important. But I do stand it! I got to have culture.

MISS HERRICK:
You're lucky not to have to reduce your weight. I lived on buttermilk for six weeks last Winter, trying to lose ten pounds. (As the words everybody stops work and shows intense interest.)

MISS SMITH (excitedly):
I tried that, too, but it didn't do any good. I gained eight pounds. Now I'm livin' on six biscuits a day.

MISS MULHOLLAND
That's the way to do it. There's only one good rule. Don't take any food with your meals. I ain't had enough to eat since last August. Now I'm takin' the lemon cure. One lemon the first day, two lemons the second day, three lemons the third day——

MISS SMITH:
And ten lemons the tenth day! I tried it. It don't work. The best plan is, don't let yourself be comfortable for one minute. If you're sleepy, wake up. If you're sittin' down, get up. If you're dead tired, go and walk five miles. I know a girl that lost twenty pounds that way. She's in a sanitarium now. She thinks she's Theodore Roosevelt.

MRS. DIXON:
Mrs. Dean says the only way to get thin is to roll on the floor fifty times every mornin' and fifty times every night. But, gracious! Don't let's talk about it! When women get started on that subject——

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH (firmly):
"A soldier of the Legion lay dying in Algiers"——

MRS. DIXON:
What's she doin'? Is her mind goin'?

MISS MULHOLLAND:
Never mind her. She's takin' her first. Now I'm goin' to use a nice, mild astringent on your face.

MRS. DIXON:
Mercy, whats' that? Don't you take the skin off!

MISS MULHOLLAND:
It's for the pores. The ice closes the pores, an' the astringent keeps 'em closed. My, I can just see the pores shut up!

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH (gazing into space):
"There was luck of woman's nursing, there was death of woman's tears."

MRS. DIXON:
That woman makes me nervous. You don't think she is afire, do you?

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH:
"I'll stand this till I count twenty. One, two, three, four, five, six——"

MISS HERRICK:
She's all right. What do you do when you get back from the Park?

MRS. DIXON:
I read till five o'clock with Mrs. Dean. She gives me my lesson then on the Elements.

MISS HERRICK (knitting her brows):
The Elements?

MRS. DIXON:
Yes—the Elements of Knowledge, Mrs. Dean calls 'em. Who are our best authors, an' what have they written, an' bridge, an' our favrite composers, an' Wagner, an' the modern drama, an' does it mean anything. We talk about them all through supper—dinner, I mean—when she ain't tellin' me which fork to use, an' how to keep my shoulders up, an' not to forget my napkin, an' to eat slow like I wasn't hungry. Ouch! That hot iron's lyin' right on my scalp.

MISS SMITH:
Excuse me. I got one patient that don't never feel burns—but the doctors thinks there's somethin' the matter with her.

THE LADY IN THE ELECTRIC BATH:
Nineteen, twenty. Now, I'll stand it till I've repeated a poem. "The boy stood on the burning deck, whence all but him had fled." Oh, Miss Mul-holland! It's like pins and needles now!

MISS MULHOLLAND (going to her):
All right. If you can't stand it any longer, I'll take you out. (She opens the bath, releases the victim.) Mebbe you'll feel queer for a week or two, but don't mind that.' As soon as you get over it, come again.

MISS SMITH—Leave her head straight, please. You'll have me buildin' this coy-fur on her left ear!

Nature Studies--The Vine

By Dorothy Dix.

CONSIDER the Vine, my daughter, learn of it and grow wise.

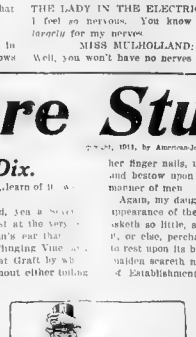
For, lo, a prophetess of old, even a Sweet Daughter of a Seventh Daughter didst at the very beginning of things whisper into a man's ear that was a sturdy oak, and woman the Clinging Vine, and thereby didst she inaugurate the Great Graft by which a multitude of thy sex hast lived without either toiling or spinning ever since.

Many daughters have done well, but she that understandeth the clinging Vine and worketh it for all it is worth excelleth them all.

Therefore, O child, turn thine eyes toward the tender Vine that creepeth upon the ground towards the tree upon which it meaneth to fasten. Observe that it goeth silently and maketh no Fuss, but that it ever draweth nearer. Take note also of how little and frail and harmless it looketh, so that the tree feareth it not, but welcometh it the rather.

Let this teach thee that the silent method is ever the best in approaching the man whom thou hast destined for Thy Support, for from the woman who pursueth a man with the clashing of cymbals and with the loud proclaiming of her intentions, he may flee even unto the uttermost parts of the earth, but the gentle maiden who appeareth not to be girded for the chase, but who happeneth, apparently, to just be upon the scene, catcheth him ere he is aware that he hath fallen into the Snare that was set for his feet.

Learn also from the innocuous look of the Vine, my daughter, to look weak, and helpless, for great is the reward of the wise virgin who doeth the Baby Act. The woman who knoweth how to earn her own bread and butter will have to do it by the hard labor of her hands and no man will help her, but she who knoweth not how to do anything but curl her locks and manicure her finger nails, men will feed upon chocolate creams and bestow upon her Glad Raiment. For such is the manner of men.



Again, my daughter, I bid thee observe the innocent appearance of the Vine. It looketh to the tree as if it asketh so little, and it would take so little to support it, or else, perchance, the tree would never permit it to rest upon its breast. Even so my daughter the wise maiden seareth not off the eligible young man by talk of Establishments, and robes from Paris, and six-cylinder Chariots that run by fire, and Feasts, the price whereof turneth a man's extremities unto Ice.

Rather she discourseth sweetly upon the simple life, and a cot midst the lowly commuter, until she convinceth the man that two can live as cheaply as one, and he feeleth that it taketh so little to buy a little wife a few little things that he Poppeth the question.

So doth the discreet damael ensnare her husband to stand for her Board Bill and shopping ticket even as the Vine getteth its tendril into the oak.

Consider likewise, my daughter, that the strength of the Vine is in its clinging powers. The oak may writhe and hurl its great arms, but do what it will it canst never free itself of the Vine that hast once fastened upon it. Learn from this, my daughter, that the woman who knoweth how to be shaken, can't be shaken, no matter how [illegible] to do it.

[illegible] young, and am now old, but never have I [illegible] maiden who simply hung onto a man like unto a Porous Plaster fail to get him in the end, for it flattereth a man for a woman to weep for him, and it [illegible] him of her good taste and sound judgment, for her to wreath her affections about him in spite of his protests, so that the time cometh when he looketh with favor upon her.

[illegible] looketh the Nerve to drop her. Therefore, my daughter, if thou wilt only hold on as doth the patient Vine thou canst get any man upon whom thou hast set thy heart.

Consider, my daughter, how the Vine flaunteth itself merrily upon the tree, and danceth in every breeze while the tree toileth to support it. Not for nothing is the Vine gay and green, and fresh and verdant, while the tree is gray and hoary.

Let this teach thee to grab the Good Matrimonial Thing that is handiest and hang upon it for a support, for verily this shalt be profitable to thee, and thou shalt be enabled to keep young and beautiful whilst thy husband groweth Hump Shouldered, and acquireth furrows on his brow wrestling with thy Bills.

Thus, also, shalt thou be enabled to bedeck thyself with fine raiment and devote thy time to the pursuit of the bargain counter and the game of bridge whose excitement palls not, for it is the business of thy husband to nourish thee, even as it is of the oak to provide for the Vine.

Peradventure it may seem to thee that the Vine is a poor, weak, back-boneless thing, little worthy of admiration, but even so, consider the Dividends that it draweth down.

Observe also that the women who have character and force, and who toil day and night doing their duty in the world, and by their families are celebrated for their good deeds among the neighbors, but no man marrieth them when they are young, nor loveth them when they are old. Behold the good wives who are left to stand alone at home on their own two feet, whilst their husbands fare abroad and festoon about their necks and their pocketbooks the limp ladies who are built after the Similitude of the Vine.

For lo, it maketh a man feel about seven feet high and that his strength is as the strength of the White Man's Hope to have some woman cling unto him for protection, and for the sake of that will he gladly endure the burden.

Perchance, thou shalt say that oft times the Vine sucks the life blood of the tree and smothereth it to death, so that it perishes. That is the tree's business, and not the Vine's, and forget not, my daughter, that there are always Other trees in the forest.

Thus, my daughter, shalt thou observe that from the simplest things in nature we may learn Wisdom, if we open our hearts to understand it.

A Pair of New Gibson Beauties

THE girl nodded amiably. "May I sit here with you until she arrives? I am Stephanie Swift."

Valerie said: "It is very amiable of you. I am Valerie West."

Stephanie remained perfectly still for a moment; then, conscious that she was staring, calmly averted her gaze, while the slow fire died out in her cheeks. And in a moment she had decided. "I have heard so pleasantly about you through Mrs. Collis," she said with perfect composure. "You remember her, I think."

Valerie, startled, lifted her brown eyes. Then, very quietly: "Mrs. Collis is very kind. I remember her distinctly."—From "The Common Law" in the June issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Copyrighted by the International Magazine Co.

Our Correspondence School—How to Be a Humorist

FOREWORD.

ONE of the saddest sights in our fair land is that of a poor humorist.

But, alas, some one has got to be funny, just as some one has got to be an undertaker, or an executioner, or an ashes collector.

If it were not for humorists there could be no newspapers or periodicals, inasmuch as there would be no insipid little paragraphs with which to fill out bottoms of columns or corners of papers, or plug in around advertising contracted to be next to pure reading matter.

Therefore, if you are determined to become a great humorist, you can do no better than follow our instructions carefully, sorrowfully and tearfully.

HUMOR.

HUMOR is mostly gall, therefore it is divided into three part.

First, the "joke"; second, the "anecdote," and third, all such things as are not included in the first and second.

'OKES.

THESE are insidious little things that will, in time, work their way into the system and embitter your whole life. The more you write the more you will want to write, until, like cocaine, they will shatter your cerebral vacuum and end your days in melancholy.

The first joke was perpetrated by Eve when she said she wouldn't leave the garden because she had nothing to wear.

It is said that Adam saw this joke at once and was doomed to toil for the remainder of his years.

The mother-in-law joke did not develop until the third generation after Eve, inasmuch—oh, well, we are a bit hazy on the exact relationship during the second generation.

Now, as for writing a joke. Take the word "He" and the word "She." Make "him" say something, and make "her" reply. Put in the quotations, and there you are. Nothing is simpler (or sadder).

Here is an example:

"He—What is the greatest curiosity?

"She—I do not know. What is the greatest curiosity?

"He—A woman who is not curious

You get the idea, do you not? With this simple framework, merely write in the conversation. If you sigh, it is fairly good. If you weep, it is very good. If you go into hysterics, followed by days of melancholia, it is excellent. You need not always take "He" and "She." Have some originality about you; take "Jinks" and "Blinks," or "Mr. Blank" and "Mrs. Blank," or "Moneybags," or "Tom" and "Jerry." With these for guides, go ahead and write your jokes.

ANECDOTES.

ANECDOTES form a very subtle sort of humor. An anecdote is a little falsehood once printed in an almanac which a man tells as happening to himself. Tell anything, so long as it is not very long and entirely devoid of a point. For example, here is a very fine anecdote:

"My little girl was saying her prayers the other night and after she had ended the 'Now I lay me,' she ended up with 'I'm afraid to go home in the dark.'"

I got a lot of satisfaction telling that around the office. One of the men was unkind enough to say:

"Yes, I laughed like anything when I read that in Rausemitter's Bitters Almanac," but I made him feel crestfallen enough when I retorted,

"Yes, I know. Rausemitter paid me $5 for that joke."

Take any of these anecdotes, rewrite them, and there you are.

NATIONALITY OF HUMOR

IN Germany the funniest things are written about rich uncles and impecunious nephews, together with pictures of some one stealing a blind man's stein of beer.

In France they joke about honor, which is natural—French honor being quite a joke

England, fortunately, has no humor On the other hand, it has Punch.

American humor consists for the most part of depicting a man falling ten stories or getting his legs amputated under an automobile, or undergoing some sort of physical torture.

WHAT TO AVOID.

IT isn't what is printed that makes a publication successful, but what the editors have sense enough to leave out. Just so with humor. Be very careful about this. There are many things one cannot joke about. Here are a few, together with a diagram explaining why.

"Strap-Hangers" Avoid, as the proprietor of the publication either has a pass on, or stock in, the road.

"Standard Oil"—Avoid, because the boss is a hard-shell Baptist.

"Pockets Picked in Moving Picture Shows"—Avoid, because they are beginning to advertise considerably.

"Mother-in-Law"—Avoid, because your own reads your stuff.

"Tax Dodging"—Avoid, because the Big Chief prefers to vote in a distant hamlet where the assessors always tip their hat to him.

FINAL HINTS.

ONE of the saddest things in "Life"—but never mind that, I am not allowed to get personal in this correspondence course.

To become a humorist, then, in a nutshell (or nut factory), write something funny.

It is absolutely the easiest thing in the world to write something funny.

But to get an editor to believe it is funny—well, this is not a miracle department, merely a few lessons in WRITING humor, not selling it.

Grin's Modern Fairy Tales--

"Lettuce"

ONCE upon a time there dwelt in a fashionable bungalow in a summer colony a scheming Step mother and her late husband's daughter, "Lettuce."

Now, the Stepmother was only a few years older than Lettuce, and there were several reasons why she did not like the girl, although Lettuce was as handsome and charming and good a girl as one could find in a Best Seller.

In the first place, Lettuce was much handsomer than the Stepmother. In the second place, the Stepmother was a widow, and Lettuce sort of hindered her opportunities for Number Two. Again, she thought it made her seem older to have such a large and handsome stepdaughter.

And so the wicked Stepmother plotted and planned. She lived in too modern an age to attempt any witchcraft or poison or such things, but she was out to "do" Lettuce and she intended to succeed.

If Lettuce were out of the way, she would get her fortune, as Lettuce's father only left the Stepmother her third of the property. So the Stepmother consulted a near-lawyer and together they figured it out that the only way to do this would be to get her to "sign them papers."

Five times the lawyer and the Stepmother had talked to Lettuce in the bungalow library and urged her to sign a few papers just to straighten out their finances, but Luttuce declared she had writer's cramp and could not write a word.

The way of it was, Lettuce had a lover who was a young lawyer, and the first time her Stepmother sprung the "sign them papers" game on her she refused until she could consult her sweetheart, because he was the greatest lawyer in the world. She knew this, because he had told her so himself.

When she told him, he warned her not to sign anything, but to let him into the house and he would suddenly appear and demand to see "them papers."

It was a fine plan, but the Stepmother wouldn't allow Lettuce to have any young men, much less let her bring one into the house. That was why they tried five times to get her to sign the papers, while she stood them off, being unable to smuggle the young man into the house.

"Lawyer Hook is coming over this afternoon and you must really sign a few papers for us, dear," said her Stepmother one morning.

Poor Lettuce. She knew she couldn't refuse forever, so she took a little walk and hunted up the young man. He told her he would come at noon and sneak into the house. She went to her room, which was in a miniature tower at one corner of the bungalow, and while her Stepmother was on the front veranda she opened her window and tried to help her young lawyer friend in.

But, alas, the window casing was too high, and there was nothing to stand on. Suddenly as Lettuce leaned out of the window, greatly disturbed, her magnificent head of hair shimmering in the sunlight, her sweetheart had a brilliant idea.

"Remember that story, Lettuce," he asked, "with the verse in it.

"Lettuce, Lettuce, let down your hair,
That I may climb without a stair?"

"Oh, good!" exclaimed Lettuce, and she undid her glorious coils of hair and let them hang down over the window sill.

The young lawyer grasped her magnificent hair and in an instant had drawn himself up where he could grasp the sill and draw himself into the room. There he was hidden until Lawyer Hook came. Lettuce was to signal him by drumming carelessly on the piano when Lawyer Hook had the papers spread out.

"Oh, dear! I suppose I must sign them," said Lettuce, carelessly, as Lawyer Hook and her Stepmother spread the papers out so that just the blanks for signatures showed. Then Lettuce walked past the piano and drummed carelessly on the keys.

As she approached the table and took up the pen, her sweetheart, the husky young lawyer, came bounding into the room and grabbed the papers.

Lawyer Hook threatened and blustered, but the young lawyer explained that Lettuce was of age and had retained him as her lawyer. Then he left the house with the papers, while the Stepmother raved and Lawyer Hook wrung his hands in despair, for he knew he would be disbarred for attempting to put such a game over. Lettuce laughingly told her Stepmother how the young man got in, which made the Stepmother think more and more.

The latter Stepmother wrote to the young lawyer to bring the papers and come into her room in the same manner, and she signed "Lettuce" to the note. Then she bought a long switch that matched Lettuce's hair, and when the young lawyer approached she hung it outside the window.

Lawyer Hook was waiting in hiding outside, and when the young lawyer was inside he intended to rush in and "do" him.

Up climbed the young lawyer on the false hair, but just as he reached the top Lettuce suddenly came into the room, which so frightened her Stepmother that she pitched headlong out of the window and fell kerplunk on Lawyer Hook, who was standing beneath.

She had fastened the false hair inside and the young lawyer hung on. Lettuce helped him into the room, then they went downstairs to see what had happened to the Stepmother and Lawyer Hook, but both of them had fled in fear and dismay and were never afterward seen.

Lettuce and the young lawyer were married and went to live in the nice bungalow.

* * * * * *

Even to this day there are times when the young lawyer comes home from the club, stands under the window and sings.

"Lettuce, Lettuce, let down your hair,
That I may climb without a stair."

But Lettuce merely sticks her head out of the window and laughs and says:

"You've got too much of a load, my dear, for me to risk my hair; grab the stairs the next time they whirl around your way."

A WOMAN who was considered by her friends to be grossly afflicted with embonpoint, but who was called "fat" by her enemies, always had the habit of buying two seats when she went to the theatre in order that she could have plenty of room.

The other afternoon she went to a show and, as usual, bought two seats at the box office, and passing inside handed the two stubs to the usher.

"Where is the party who is going to use the other stub?" asked the usher.

"I'm going to occupy both seats myself," explained the woman.

"I'd like to see you do it," said the usher, looking closely at the stubs. "The seats are on opposite sides of the aisle."

"GOOD morning, Abraham. I received your business card this morning. Tell me why you have five F's on it."

"Why, that means I have had three fires and two failures."

* * *

A BUTCHER went to market and bought a crate of chickens. He put them in the cellar, and that night the water pipes burst and overflowed the cellar and all the chickens were drowned. He went to the landlord to tell his troubles. The landlord said:

"Why didn't you buy ducks. They could swim."

A YOUNG mistress being short two cents in paying a bill called down stairs through the speaking tube to the hired girl:

"Maggie, have you got a couple of coppers down stairs?"

"Yes, ma'm," replied Maggie; "they are cousins of mine."

AN Irishman went into a butcher shop and bought a pound of soup meat. He then asked the butcher to write out a receipt, explaining how to cook it, and the butcher did so. As the Irishman was leaving the butcher shop with the meat in his hand a big black dog strolled up behind him and stole it. The Irishman shouted at the dog:

"That's the time I fooled ye. Ye haven't got the receipt to cook it!"

GOLDSTEIN had a sweatshop on the second floor of a three-story building. Business being very bad he went to Mr. Levy to tell his troubles. Mr. Levy advised him to put a match to the place so he could collect the insurance. "How can I do that with a swimming school over me and a fire house under me?" asked Goldstein.

PAT WAS digging a deep hole in the ground on a very hot day. A minister came along and, spying Pat at the bottom of the hole, said:

"My dear man, are you not afraid the heat will affect your brain?"

"If I had any brains I wouldn't be down here," said Pat.

A MAN went into a saloon and asked for a "Mary Ann." The bartender, not knowing or ever having heard of such a drink, didn't want the man to have the laugh on him, so he made the drink as follows: Brandy, port, sherry, gin, whiskey, Rhine wine, Jamaica rum, bitters, lemon, sugar and ice. Then he shook it up well, just as he would in making a cocktail. When the man had drunk it he smacked his lips and said:

"By golly, that's a fine drink."

"Well, it ought to be," said the bartender, "you had everything in it but the license."

* * *

A FARMER leading a cow along a country road was met by a fresh young city chap, who said:

"Where are you going with that cow?"

"I am going to market."

"How much can you get for that cow in the market?" asked the chap.

"About $40," answered the farmer.

"Why, if you had that cow in New York City you would get $100 for it."

"I reckon that if I had the East River in hades I'd get ten cents a glass for it," observed the farmer.

DINNY hired a room in a noisy boarding house. Being very tired, he went to bed, leaving word with the landlady to call him at 7 a. m. A lot of tough young fellows who were sleeping at the house thought they would have some fun with Dinny, and while he was sleeping soundly they blackened his face. In the morning Dinny was called, and being late, he ran as fast as he could to the place where he was employed. When he got there his friends began to laugh at him. Dinny took a look in the glass, ran back to the boarding house and told the landlady that she had called the wrong man.

WHEN Dinny got up the next morning he looked at the clock and saw that it was ten minutes after seven. Late again! So he ran at breakneck speed to his employer's office, and when he reached there he looked at the clock and saw that it was only ten minutes of seven.

"Be golly, I am so fast that I beat the clock," said Dinny.

AN Irishman and a German were tramping it on the road. They were both very hungry, and luckily a farmer along the way gave them a large piece of broiled beefsteak. They did not know how to divide it, so the Irishman proposed that each of them should take one end of the meat between their teeth with a firm grip. The Irishman was to say, "Are you ready?" and the two were to pull. Whatever portion of the meat each one got was to be his meal. They both agreed to this and gripped the meat with their teeth.

"Are you ready?" muttered the Irishman.

The German said "Yah."

I WAS standing at a Southern hotel bar one day when a bell-boy came in with an order for a gin fizz for a man upstairs. The darkey drink mixer immediately got busy and threw together a most elaborate concoction. It really was a marvel. As the drink neared completion the bellboy's eyes grew larger and larger, and as the artist dropped a cherry into the foaming glass his mouth actually watered. The finished product was placed on the tray, and the bell-boy started off with it. The darkey bartender noticed the gleam in the bell-boy's eyes, and called to him:

"Hah, you black kid, Min' yo tck' dat right up to de gemmen's room an' whistle while yo' go."

A WOMAN boarded a car on Broadway going south.

"Does this car stop at the Battery?" she asked the conductor.

"If it don't, you'll have the swim of your life."

Alias Alibi, James Greenback, a banker;
Daisy Greenback,
Convicts, guards, yeggmen, eggmen, gay cats and singed cats, dips, farmers, etc.

PROPERTIES.

Jail, bank, safe, food, repentance, quart of tears, bushel of hayseed, exploding revolver, plate of soup, disappearing policeman.

ACT I.—THE JAIL IN CINCINNAGO.

The pale light of dawn is stealing through the barred windows to bring to the wretched prisoners another day of suffering. Alias Alibi, York Fatty and several other stripe-suited persons are playing poker with three of the guards.

FIRST GUARD—That busts me. I guess I'll hit the hay.

SECOND GUARD—Me, too. Dead broke and lose a night's sleep. [Both guards fall asleep on chairs.]

ALIAS [counting over bills]—Well, I've got all the coin there is in this joint. These ginks won't have another cent until next month's payday, and they can't get any credit from me.

YORK FATTY—Life in jail is so monotonous without plenty of poker.

ALIAS—Quite so, Fatty, quite so. Therefore I am about to depart, to go away from here. Gimme the ace of spades out of that deck; I marked it so often with my thumbnail that it will do for a file. [Begins to saw bars with the card. Automatic alarm goes off and makes loud buzzsawings.

FIRST GUARD [stirring uneasily in his sleep]—Don' care wha' time 'tis—gi' up an' cook yer own breakfas'.

ALIAS—The poor boob thinks he's in bed at home instead of in a nice, peaceful jail. . . . . There, that's done. [Pulls out bars and slips through window.] Come on, Fatty, if you're coming.

FATTY [getting half-way through window]—I'm stuck. [Squeals like pig and waves feet in air, producing great glee as curtain falls.]

ACT II.—EXTERIOR OF BANK, HAYEURG.

Alias Alibi is standing by the door of the bank, extracting their rolls from farmers entering the bank to deposit money or leaving it after withdrawing their rent money. He is dressed in a natty suit, which he removed from a dummy in the Bon Ton Gents' Furnishing Store.

ALIAS—A pleasant and salubrious little burg, this. A few more farmers and I shall hike for the White Lights once more. Here comes one out of the bank now. [Enter James Greenback.]

GREENBACK—Looks like rain, if it didn't look more like a spell of warm, dry weather.

ALIAS—Excuse me, mister, there's a caterpillar on your coat. [Brushes Greenback's coat and extracts roll—a two and a one dollar bill—from his pocket.]

GREENBACK—Young man, you seem to be of a different stripe from those around Hayburg.

ALIAS [looking nervously at his clothes]—Stripe? Oh, er, yes, of course. "Of a different stripe"; oh, yes. But, Algernon, never startle me like that again.

GREENBACK—Young man, you have an honest face. Will you accept a position as teller in the Hayburg Bank?

ALIAS—Old top, I can tell a few, but not right here in Hayburg.

GREENBACK—Think it over, young man. [Exit Greenback, as Daisy comes out of the Elite Soda Fountain.]

DAISY—Have you saw my father, Mr. Greenback?

ALIAS—He just offered me a job in the bank.

DAISY—And you accepted?

ALIAS—No, but I shall.

DAISY—Oh, I'm so glad.

ALIAS [aside]—I cannot deceive this angel. My conscience hurts muh! [To Daisy, in strained, and consequently clear, voice.]—I—

DAISY [in emotional tones]—You

ALIAS—I have a——

DAISY—You have a——

ALIAS—Confession to make—to you

DAISY—Confession—to—make—to—muh"

ALIAS—Yes, a confession to make to you. I have been——

DAISY—You—have—been——

ALIAS—I have been in——

DAISY [her voice fairly vibrant with emotion]—You—have—been—in——

ALIAS—Yes, I have been in—— [Aside.] No, no, I can't say it. I can't say it. [Hits himself on thigh with hand, thus indicating despair. Note—This gesture must be made slowly. If done rapidly, it gives the effect of one laughing heartily.] No, no; I won't say it.

DAISY—You—have—been—in——

ALIAS—I have been in Brooklyn.

DAISY—Never mind, Alias. Get this job and we will forget the past. Oh, here is papa now. [Enter Greenback.]

ALIAS—I'll take up your offer, boss, and if it is possible to tell these ganzinks anything, I'll be the busiest little teller you ever had.

ACT III.—INTERIOR OF THE BANK.

Greenback and Alias are counting money in a bored way, as if they were getting too much of it.

GREENBACK—How do you like Hayburg, Al?

ALIAS—Best place on—— [Suddenly stops and waves his hand wildly to York Fatty, who is just entering.]

GREENBACK [who has his back to the door]—What are you waving at?

ALIAS—Nothing. Nobody. It was a fly or the heat, FATTY—Fly or heat nothink. It was yer old pal, York Fatty, as you left to stick in the jail window. Boss, this guy is Alias Alibi, the safe-blower. [Assistant teller rushes in.]

ASSISTANT TELLER—Safe-blower? Just what we need. The safe door swung shut on the lady that called in your office——

GREENBACK—Me dorter; oh, me dorter!

ASSISTANT TELLER—And the lock won't work

ACT IV.—GREENBACK'S OFFICE.

Alias is working madly at gigantic safe with a hairpin. Others are watching him with feverish interest.

GREENBACK—Me dorter; oh, me dorter!

ASSISTANT TELLER—There was no one in the office when the lady came in. We heard her scream just before the door slammed on her.

GREENBACK—Hurry, hurry, or me dorter'll be suffocated!

GREENBACK [in heartfelt tones of thankfulness]—I'll never forget what you've done for me to-day. [Enter Daisy from front office.]

ALL—Daisy!!!

GREENBACK [as door of safe opens]—You low-down crook, you've saved my wife!

The Adventures of Harold Hangover

By William F. Kirk.

In Which Harold Saves the Giants from Almost Certain Defeat by the Lowly Boston Team

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

HAROLD HANGOVER, whose phenomenal ball playing on the Oshkosh team in the bush league a few years ago thrilled the heart of every fan in the country, has emerged from his retirement, and has come to New York and signed with the Giants. He has brought with him his celebrated delivery, the sneeze ball, and any number of unheard-of strategic curves, which he is guarding jealously. In the game with the humble but ambitious Boston team (sometimes known as the Walpole Streets) the other day, Harold brought one of these plays into action, as set forth in the following instalment.

CHAPTER VII

"SO this is Boston!" said Harold Hangover, musingly, as he stood outside the Copley Square Hotel and watched the busy residents of the Massachusetts metropolis. "So this is Boston!"

It was Harold's first visit to the seat of culture, and he was keenly appreciative. When a mere child he had read of the Boston Tea Party, the Boston Massacre, the Battle of Bunker Hill, and the midnight ride of Mr. Paul Revere. In those days he had never dreamed that he would be privileged to see where our early history was made. Oshkosh, Wis., had been good enough for his father—too good, according to some of the old gentleman's neighbors—and Harold had expected to live and die a resident of the same city. And now he was in the Hub city, close to the cradle of American liberty!

He missed the roar and rut of busy Manhattan Island, but at the same time he sensed the spirit of quiet elegance and deep learning that hovered everywhere. He commented on it when Manager McGraw joined him in the hotel lobby.

"This is indeed a community which draws one to higher and better things, Mr. McGraw," he ventured.

"It's a corking good baseball town," said the Little Corporal.

"I do not refer to sports," said the good O. Hash pitcher. "I mean that an air of culture permeates the atmosphere, as though the minds of Oliver Wendell Holmes and James Russell Lowell were even now permeating the atmosphere pervaded by the air of culture to which I have just alluded."

The manager of the Giants regarded our hero curiously.

"What time did you land in the hay last night?" he asked.

"I retired at 10 o'clock," replied Harold Hangover. "As Sancho Panza said, bless the man who first invented sleep. Sleep, blessed sleep, that knits up the raveled sleeve of care, as Shakespeare so fittingly observed. I am now going to see the Bunker Hill monument, Mr. McGraw. Would you care to make the trip with me?"

"Thank you, no," said McGraw, who had seen the Bunker Hill monument so often that he sometimes dreamed of it. "Be at the park not later than 2 o'clock I want you to work to-day."

CHAPTER VIII

IT WAS well along toward the middle of the game that afternoon when Harold Hangover reached the baseball park.

McGraw was furious. The Tenney team had been bombarding Marquard and Wiltse and were leading by a 4-0 margin.

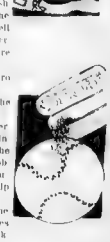
"Whereintownyoubeen?" he snarled. "Didn't I tell you to report at 2 o'clock sharp?"

"Now that you mention it," said Harold Hangover, "I believe that was the hour set. But this is truly a wonderful city, Mr. McGraw. Just think, I was actually up in the old church tower from which the lantern signal was flashed to Paul Revere on that never to be forgotten night so many years ago! I was up in that tower, Mr. McGraw. As I leaned out"

"You didn't lean out far enough to suit me," snapped McGraw. "Now, you brainless wart, listen to me. I'll give you just ten minutes to get into your uniform and relieve Wiltse. If you are not here at one second past that, back to Oshkosh!"

Harold Hangover winced at the sharp words of his chief. Always a dreamy youth, he was unused to biting invective, and it all stung him to the quick.

"You have wounded me deeply," he said in a broken voice. "I go now to change, but I shall [illegible] to save the day."



CHAPTER IX.

THE Giants rallied in the seventh inning, thanks to the appearance of Harold Hangover and his wonderful "sneeze ball." The Boston players could do nothing with the snuff hidden offerings of the Oshkosh phenomenon and were rapidly sneezing themselves into a state bordering on apoplexy. Harold's terrific hitting power was also in evidence, a three bagger with the bases full batting out his team back in the running.

Keep at 'em, kid!" said McGraw. "You have got everything to-day."

"I got a swell call down from you," said Harold, ungraciously. "I ain't used to being talked to the way you talked to me to-day, McGraw."

"A man can get used to almost everything in this world," was the sage reply of the little manager. "I know a lot more that I can call, yet before you get through playing ball for me."

In the first half of the ninth inning the Giants were still two runs behind. They had tightened up wonderfully on their defense from the moment that Harold Hangover had taken up the pitching burden, but the Boston pitcher had kept all of them save Harold as harmless as in the early stages of the game.

"McGraw," said our hero, addressing the Giant leader as the latter sat gloomily on the [illegible] players' bench, "as I understand it you are a great believer in doing the unexpected. Well, so am I. That is why when you exercised me here at 2 o'clock I showed up two hours later. That, however, he added lightly, "is neither here nor there. What I want to do I you is this—there are two of us on [illegible] now, and as you see, we have second and third base occupied. It's my turn to bat and I know the Boston pitcher will walk me and take a chance on Devore. Here is where I pull my new play called 'The Crab Glide.' Just watch it."

Sure enough Harold Hangover was walked purposely, and the bases were full. Then came the surprise of the day. Instead of trotting calmly to first base Harold Hangover began running backward for that station. The Boston pitcher, temporarily turned around by this apparently insane bit of base running, saw our hero's face pointed for the plate and shot the ball toward the catcher like a streak to head off what he supposed for the instant was an attempt to steal home. The Boston catcher, totally unprepared for the throw, was not there to receive it, and it rolled to the stand, the two Giants ahead of Harold Hangover scoring easily.

The Boston fans were furious and showered maledictions and other dictions on the heads of their favorites, particularly their pitcher. That worthy was so rattled that he hit Devore, and then Mr. Lawrence Doyle cleaned up with a single that scored Harold and eventually won the game.

CHAPTER X

"YES, Mr. McGraw," observed Harold Hangover, as the players were riding back to the hotel that night, "this is a remarkable city. There is an atmosphere of brains and culture here. I absorbed a lot of it this day while visiting the points of interest on every hand. By the way, what do you think of the 'Crab Glide?'"

"It worked great here," replied the now mollified manager, "but don't try it in Philadelphia."

"Why not?" asked our hero.

"Because," replied McGraw, "if you started running backward over there nobody would notice the difference."

(This will be continued next Sunday.)

WRANGLE OVER CONTROL OF ACTORS' FUND DISGRACES NOBLEST OF CHARITIES

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE theatrical war which for two years has made the typewriter and mimeograph weapons of deadly calibre ceased to yield ludicrous situations the moment the scenes of carnage shifted from legitimate theatrical problems of the day to the Actors' Fund of America. The recent struggle for the control of the Actors' Fund has a bitter parallel in the bloodthirsty men of war who spare neither women or children, and it is indeed a pity that so beautiful a charity as that promoted by the Actors' Fund should be used as a battle ground by those who have business and personal grievances to exploit.

Nothing more disgraceful has been seen in the history of the American stage than the dragging of the Actors' Fund affairs into the contest for theatrical supremacy, and the behavior of certain men of standing in the drama at the recent annual meeting of the Fund will not add much to the prestige of the great charity that has always been held as a model institution by every theatregoer in the land.

Just what the administration of the Actors' Fund has to do with the conflict for the control of the country's theatres is hard to understand, but inasmuch as one of the factions in the big theatrical war hold most of the offices in the Fund, it doubtless seemed a fair target for attack by those who do not control the administration of the Fund's business. A charity that has done so much for the aged and indigent actor deserves a better fate than that into which it was recently plunged, when a violent effort was made to dislodge the present control and an equally violent effort was made by those in control to hold on for another year. The first skirmish gave the old board of officers a noisy victory, but the insurgents assure us that their enemy's advantage is but temporary and that astonishing revelations of mismanagement will be revealed. All of which is not sweet to the ears of those who have believed that the Actors' Fund is one of the best conducted and most worthy charities in existence.

Just where the poor actor comes in while his benefactors are tearing at each other's throats is not at all clear.

LINDSAY MORISON AND HIS SMILE.

For six days the widest smile in town has been worn by Lindsay Morison, who declares that he has found more than hope to encourage him during the early performances of "The Girl of the Golden West." Mr. Morison's first week at the Majestic gives him unruffled assurance that somebody has been waiting for him to break into the stock game in Boston once more and the signs he has seen have been uplifting to his spirits. That Wilson Melrose and Eleanor Gordon have a pronounced following among the theatregoers of the community was made plain at every performance at the Majestic last week, and Mr. Morison feels that with the plays he intends to produce in the next two months his expected prosperity will prove a happy reality.

Mr. Morison is inclined to feel a little pride at the record he made in Lynn, whither he moved when the American Music Hall (now the Orpheum) turned its back upon his company last September. "Lynn was not looked upon as a particularly fertile field for a stock company," explained Mr. Morison, "and if you could have heard all that was said to me when I moved my company there last Fall you would think that I was sitting on the brink of complete ruin. But my advisors were wrong—as advisors frequently are—and I remained nine months. I was always doing things that seemed impossible in a city like Lynn, but I soon discovered that even theatregoers will not turn away from good values. That is why I succeeded. Why, I gave the people of Lynn five plays that have never been seen in stock in Boston. Of course, with the tremendous royalties I was compelled to pay for some of my pieces the situation settled down to a gamble in some respects, but the element of gambling in my undertaking ended as soon as the town woke up to the fact that I was playing a square game. In Lynn I presented 'The Gentleman From Mississippi,' 'The Man of the Hour,' 'Arizona,' 'Old Jed Prouty' and 'Texas,' and before my lease expires at the Majestic I hope to give these same plays to my patrons in Boston."

Mr. Morison is still wearing the same smile.

When George Tyler opens the New Theater in New York in the fall, all that will remain of that carefully planned but poorly executed institution will be the stone and plaster contained in the structure. When he changes the name of the house to the Century Theatre, all that will remain of the New Theatre will be a memory—a delicious memory to those who selfishly prayed for its collapse, and a bitter memory to the high-minded men who dropped a million or so in a brave attempt to uplift the American drama, but which heeded not the invitation. The first of Mr. Tyler's attractions at the Century will be Robert Hichen's "The Garden of Allah," for which Mr. Tyler, Mr. Hichens and Hugh Ford are now in Biskra collecting material and atmosphere for the play. The desert of Sahara will be brought to the Century in as faithful and convincing a form as these experts can make it. Mr. Tyler announces that only attractions of sufficient magnitude to warrant the use of the great stage will be put on at the Century.

Martin Beck, the big chief of the great Orpheum vaudeville circuit, has had his eye on New York so long that he has grown tired of being just a spectator—which is about the sum total of his adventures in search of a foothold in the American metropolis. So Mr. Beck shouts that he is through with vaudeville, which may or may not be true. But Mr. Beck will get his chance when the approaching amalgamation of the Orpheum circuit offices and the United Booking offices becomes a fact. Mr. Beck will then be even a smaller factor in Eastern vaudeville than even the role of a plain spectator could possibly yield.

John Craig is setting a fast pace for hot weather theatricals at the Castle Square Theatre, where he has just ended a joyous week with "The White Sister." "The White Sister" with its sombre colorings was far from a joyous play, but the results from Mr. Craig's standpoint convinced him that there is no good business reason why his theatre should ever have been closed during the Summer months. From an intensely dramatic week with "The White Sister," Mr. Craig and his company will pass on to-morrow to the delicious comedy of "The Rivals."

The retreating season will find two new plays at the down town houses to-morrow. "The Kiss Waltz," which opened at the Shubert last evening, will enter upon its first full week, and "Doctor DeLuxe," with the eccentric Mr. Herz, will move into the Colonial. For the benefit of Mr. Casey, censor, it may be said that the bare legs that astonished New York audiences may not be visible to his cold official eye when he inspects "Doctor DeLuxe" to-morrow evening. It is rumored that somebody in New York had heard about Mr. Casey and a new set of hosiery was purchased for the small girls of the company.

What is probably in one respect the most remarkable motion picture ever released will find its way into town this week. It is a typical picture play, called "Grenadier Roland," and is conspicuous for the large number of people employed in making the film. The story relates to an incident in Napoleon's ill-fated invasion of Russia and in several of the scenes, showing the battles and the retreat, more than 1,500 persons were engaged. The picture sets a new mark in the successful handling of a large company of actors before a camera.

MANTELL LOVES A JOKE.

Famous Actor Tells One on Himself Made Up as the Moor.

Robert Mantell has a keen sense of humor and dearly enjoys a joke even though it be at his own expense. He tells this story with great relish: During his extended engagement at a New York theatre two or three years ago he discovered a genuine character in a quaint old man, who operated the stage elevator. The star's dressing room at the theatre was four floors above the stage, and during his frequent trips with the operator, the distinguished Shakespearean actor became much interested in the rare old man. On the occasion of his first New York appearance in Othello, Mantell entered the elevator in the makeup of the swarthy Moor to descend for his first appearance. The operator looked him over carefully as he entered the car, and after a judicious scrutiny exclaimed in all seriousness as the tragedian left the car to make his initial entrance: "He is the livin' image of Lew Dockstader."

Plays at the Theatres

Colonial Theatre.

Joseph M. Gates will offer at the [illegible] Colonial Theatre, starting to-morrow evening, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, Mr. Ralph Herz in a new novel musical play, "Dr. De Luxe," by Otto Hauerbach and Karl Hoschna, the authors of "Madame Sherry," "The Girl of My Dreams" and "Three Twins." This new musical play is described as a novel musical comedy, because it introduces a new theme in the musical comedy line. The piece concerns the fondness of society people for dogs and cats and the disregard of some of them for their children. The first act opens in Dr. De Paw's pet emporium just off Broadway where the beauties of the metropolis come in their motors whenever their pets need expert treatment.

The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given and during the engagement at the Colonial Summer prices will prevail.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Rivals" is a play that proclaims its own merits. No less popular than when it was produced for the first time in London many years ago, it amuses a twentieth century audience as easily as it entertained an eighteenth. Mr. Craig is reviving this masterpiece of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's [illegible] and its [illegible] features will be emphasized by an excellent cast. [illegible] Bob Acres, the jolly country squire who makes endless mirth through his challenge of Sir Lucius O'Trigger to a duel. Miss Kate Ryan returns to her part of Mrs. Malaprop, which she has made memorable on more than one previous occasion, and Mary Young after an absence of two weeks, will play Lydia Languish.

As for the other characters, Mr. Craig will [illegible]. George Hassell will appear as the irascible Sir Anthony Absolute.

Majestic Theatre.

For the second week of his summer stock season at the Majestic Theatre, Manager Lindsay Morison will present his popular players, headed by Eleanor Gordon and Wilson Melrose, in Broadhurst's play, "The Man of The Hour," by special arrangement with W. A. Brady. The season opened with conspicuous success last Monday afternoon and evening, with the elaborate production of David Belasco's "The Girl of The Golden West" and it is no more than justice to the members of Mr. Morison's company to say that this stirring drama of the West was never better presented in Boston.

Beginning Monday afternoon "The Man of The Hour" will be the play every afternoon and evening for the week. The entire strength of the Lindsay Morison Stock Company will be utilized. Mr. Wilson Melrose will, of course, play the part of the young Mayor, Alwyn Bennett, and Miss Eleanor Gordon will be seen in the leading role of Dallas Wainwright.

Shubert Theatre.

The new Viennese operetta, "The Kiss Waltz," which the Messrs. Shubert produced at the Shubert Theatre last evening will continue the attraction at this theatre all the coming week, beginning to-morrow night, including Wednesday and Saturday matinees. A review of this new musical offering from the land of "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Merry Widow," where it ran for two seasons, will be found to-day on another page.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

What promises to be in many respects the most pretentious bill of the year is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. It is headed by Irene Franklin, one of the greatest character singers now on the stage, and her song "Redhead," will be remembered for all time. This bill will contain a number of features new to Boston. It will include J. C. Nugent, the Western actor, and a splendid company in a comedy called "The Squarer." There will also be Stepp, Mehlinger & King, three boys from the Western Coast who have created a sensation in New York with their rag-time singing, piano playing and impersonations. The week will also mark the first appearance in vaudeville of Anton Torelli, one of the greatest double bass players in the world, who was brought to this country by Director Russell of the Boston Opera House and during the past season played with the Opera Company.

Park Theatre.

[illegible] who lives in a suburb is busy [illegible] in Boston this Spring, and the result is a record breaker in the line of patronage at the Park Theatre. That house has made a specialty of long engagements in recent years, and a number of the attractions have stayed here for nearly or quite three months. Now comes "The Commuters" and it looks as if that would make a new mark for itself, since it starts upon its fourth month of uninterrupted popularity to-morrow evening. It came to town when the weather was cold in February, and here it has remained ever since, and the thirteen weeks at the Park Theatre have ranked among the best that that particular playhouse has known for a long time.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Aphie James has been received with the greatest of enthusiasm at the Hollis Street Theatre on the occasion of her first visit to Boston as a star, and after the experiences of the opening week of her engagement here in "Judy O'Hara" it is very evident that she will always be considered as a firm favorite here [illegible]. Much had been heard of her popularity in other sections of the country, but it remained for this romantic play of the days of Queen Anne to bring her to the local stage. She has been fortunate in securing this piece from the pen of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett and Frederic Arthur Stanley of London, and they have provided her with a dramatic offering that is of interest from start to finish.

Tremont Theatre.

The character of the audiences that have witnessed "A Country Girl" at the Tremont the past week is an unanswerable argument against those pessimists who assert that the Boston public is devoted to cheap and trashy musical "shows." "A Country Girl" is sound, wholesome musical comedy and the genuine laughter and hearty applause, practically [illegible] throughout the performance [illegible] conclusive evidence that there is a large and discriminating public eager to see and show its appreciation of a really good thing.

Globe Theatre.

The season of pictures and vaudeville at the Globe Theatre has started most successfully, even exceeding the tremendous business done last year. For the coming week Manager Janette has arranged one of the best variety programs ever put into one bill, and will include new and sensational films and a list of engaging vaudeville. The illustrated songs are handled in an agreeable way by talented singers.

Palace Theatre.

There will be much in the new programme at the Palace Theatre to-morrow that will interest lovers of good vaudeville and motion pictures. The quality of the show given at the Palace is such that not even the hot weather keeps the people away. Few houses equal in merit the splendid offerings that are to be found at the [illegible].

Orpheum Theatre.

The approaching weather will have no effect upon the programmes at the Orpheum Theatre unless it adds to the [illegible] novelties that the management has [illegible] planned for the next few weeks. Patrons of the house will find an especially attractive list of features to-morrow, including both high class vaudeville and new motion pictures.

Gaiety Theatre.

The regular season of burlesque at the Gaiety Theatre came to an end last evening, and beginning to-morrow the house will be devoted to motion pictures and vaudeville. The first program under the new arrangement will include several of the newest and most attractive films and the vaudeville will be high class.

Columbia Theatre.

The Fay Foster burlesque company will present two merry farce comedies, "Devil of a Scrape" and "Skimmerhorn's Boy," at the Columbia the coming week. With a large assortment of pretty girls, good vaudeville and lively music the entertainment is promising.

Waldron's Casino.

In the performance to be given by the "Big Gayety" extravaganza company, at Waldron's Casino this week is the new and amusing burlesque entitled "A Florida Enchantment." Between the opening and closing acts of the burletta is an olio of acts comprising the best vaudeville talent obtainable.

Austin & Stone's.

The new program at Austin & Stone's Museum this week will include many novelties in both the curio and the theatre. [illegible] attractions that will both entertain and amuse.

Hub Theatre.

Charley Bigney, Boston's own high diver, appearing as the feature at the Hub Theatre, is going to repeat the 134 feet dive from a coal wharf in the vicinity of the Dover street bridge.

Howard Athenaeum

Pat White and his "Gaiety Girls" will be the burlesque features at the Howard this week. Pat is always a big favorite in Boston and his mirthmaker "Casey in Society," will find a warm welcome. The [illegible] show will compare favorably with the best offered here this season.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre

The [illegible] Twins, who look so much alike that it is impossible to tell one from the other, will be the feature of the program this week at the Bowdoin Square theatre.

Scenic Temple.

[illegible] will be [illegible] the olio at the Scenic Temple this week and the motion picture display will have an educational value.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

"If I only looked like that again!"

Women who never tell their age forget that strangers guess it from their hair. Why allow people to treat you as if you were old? It's gray hair that does it, and gray hair is unnecessary.

Farr's Gray Hair Restorer does not instantly color or dye the hair, nor does it merely cover up the grayness, as most preparations do. It Gradually Restores gray or faded hair to the color that properly belongs to it—not the color that is near to what you had, but the actual, original color. Sold under a positive guarantee that it is absolutely harmless. Its use cannot be detected. It is clear and pure as water, and pleasant to use. Once the hair has returned to its natural color it is a simple matter to keep it so. It can be washed, shampooed and curled as often as you wish, and the color will not be affected.

SUMMER COTTAGE BOOM HAS RESULTED IN BIG CHANGE ALONG THE SOUTH SHORE

SEVEN hundred Summer cottages, with a total valuation of almost a million dollars, have been built on the South shore from Atlantic, Quincy, to Crow Point, Hingham, during the last twelve months.

Instead of diminishing, the tremendous building boom is on the increase and, from present indications and with continued good weather, it is expected that over four hundred more cottages will be constructed before next Fall.

Thousands of acres of land, facing the waterfront, have been thrown open to the public. For years the main portion of the waterfront has been owned by private people. By death or loss of fortune, this land was placed on the market. Immediately active real estate men, realizing the great demand for a Summer cottage within a cheap car fare to Boston, obtained control of large sites, and cut them up in house lots. Easy terms were offered to every one. The poor man received the same treatment as the wealthy man. The real estate men, backed by large capital, started into building cottages and selling them at moderate prices on cash terms. $50 down and $10 a month purchased a cottage containing from four to six rooms, bath and a broad piazza, within a few steps of the water.

Rush to Build.

The rush for this class of cottages was so great that the real estate men had to call a halt. They could not handle the orders. Hundreds of cottages were bought before they were built.

The city of Quincy and the towns of Weymouth and Hingham, appreciating the increase in the taxable property, came to the front and appropriated thousands of dollars for water and sewer connections. Streets were laid out and every inducement possible was offered by the city and town officials to the summer residents. The storekeepers were forced to triple their working force to handle the increase in business during the Summer months. The city of Quincy alone appropriated $15,000 for water connections. Streets running through the newly-opened property were put into good shape and in many cases street lights were installed. The Old Colony street railway was forced to double and sometimes triple the number of cars on its lines running to the shore resorts. In Quincy Brokers Oscar F. Fisk, James F. Burke and Frank Fessenden Crane all report big business. There has been a decided decrease in the tax rates in Hingham and Weymouth, caused by the big increase in taxable property.

From Squantum Head to Hingham, three years ago large areas of vacant land met the sight of the yachtsman in the bay. To-day this land is occupied by thousands of cottages. At Squantum, where five years or so ago, there were but three or four cottages, to-day there are over 150. The location of the Harvard aviation field at Squantum has attracted many to this section of Quincy. Squantum Park, now being developed by J. R. Nelson, is one of the popular tracts with investors. Two years ago Charles M. Conant opened up the water front of Atlantic. He named his tract Atlantic-by-the-Sea. The tract contains hundreds of building lots and faces the Quincy Shore reservation and Dorchester Bay. Forty cottages, averaging in value about $3000 each, have been constructed within seven months, and contracts have been given for about forty more.

Boom at Wollaston.

Following down the shore will be found Wollaston beach. Since the construction of the State boulevard on the bay front, Wollaston beach experienced a building boom. Easy access to Boston by electrics and train cars helped the boom along. Sixty cottages have been built there within a year. This section of Quincy, with all others, enjoys water, sewers, street lighting and good streets. The average type of cottage at Wollaston is the bungalow. The average cost is about $1,200. The Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs are located at Wollaston beach.

At Adams Shore and Post Island sections of Hough's Neck the building operations during the past year have been enormous. Seventy-five cottages have been built and twenty-five cottages has been contracted for. This section of Quincy has had a quick growth. Adams Shore faces Dorchester Bay and is within a ten minutes' walk of Quincy centre. Fifteen minute car service is given during the Summer, a half hour to an hour during the Winter. The value of cottages in this section ranges between $1,000 to $10,000. Bungalow and cement houses are the most popular. Land values have increased 200 per cent. at Adams Shore within twelve months. Neil McNeil, the building contractor, has constructed for himself a Summer cottage at the extreme end of Adams Shore, facing the famous John Q. Adams farm and Dorchester Bay. The McNeil house is worth $10,000.

Post Island, adjoining Adams Shore, is also in the path of the boom. Twelve cottages have been constructed and there are but few lots obtainable. Land which was considered swamp land a few years ago has been filled in and is the site of many beautiful cottages. This section of Hough's Neck is considered most exclusive. Stringent restrictions prevent the building of a cheap class of cottages.

Twenty-five hundred building lots have been sold at Hough's Neck, one of the most popular Summer resorts on the South Shore. Nearly 250 cottages have been built, many of them constructed for Winter occupancy. One of the busiest operators in this section is W. A. Dunham, real estate broker. The city of Quincy has built a $20,000 schoolhouse at Hough's Neck as an inducement for people to stay there all year round. Through the efforts of the Hough's Neck Association, an improvement society, street lights, gas and a sewer system have been installed. The Quincy Yacht Club is located on the Quincy Bay side of Hough's Neck. Excellent attractions in the shape of three dance halls, a merry-go-round, bathing, boating, fishing bring many to Hough's Neck. There are two churches there, a Catholic chapel and a Union church.

Cottages at Low Prices.

Hough's Neck is the ideal resort for the working people. A working man with a small family can buy a cottage within three minutes of the water for $495. Fifty dollars down and ten dollars a month, are the terms. The cottages contain three rooms, bath, city water and gas for cooking or lighting purposes. Twenty-five of this class of cottages have been sold during the last three months. Each house is located on 3,000 feet of land, presenting plenty of room for a small garden.

Rock Island, which four years ago, was a big farm with only two houses on it, is to-day dotted with over 200 cottages. The growth of this particular section of Hough's Neck is little less than marvelous. Rock Island is connected with Hough's Neck by two bridges. It has plenty of city water, will have gas this Summer and good fire protection. The $15 a week man with a family has found this place an ideal one to escape the Summer heat. The bathing beach is good. The street cars run within five minutes walk of the place.

Germantown, a combination of country and seashore, faces Quincy Bay, Fore River and Quincy Town River. It is the home of the Merchant Sailors' Snug Harbor and C. C. Hanley's shipyard. Two tracts opened last year containing about two and fifty lots each have been disposed of, and a new tract within two minutes of the street car, and facing Quincy Town River, has been opened. This tract is known as Oak Bluffs. Ten cottages were started here last week. Plans for fifty more are out and they will be constructed by July 1.

At Bethel Beach, a part of Germantown, the Quincy Swedish Baptist Church has purchased three hundred lots. The land is not sold outright, but leased to the purchaser for a term of ninety-nine years. The society helps the purchaser to build a home. Fifteen cottages have been built on Bethel Beach.

Low Car Fares Help.

From Quincy centre, the waterfront facing Quincy Town River is dotted with small cottages. The city maintains a public bathhouse on Town River and recently appropriated $2,500 for the building of an addition for the women. Girls' camps are numerous on Town River.

The ten-cent fare by electrics from Quincy to Boston and the nine-cent fare, by buying twenty-five trip books, on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, coupled with the easy terms building propositions, has made the seashore resorts of Quincy ideal for the workingman and his family. Special workingman tickets have been issued by the New Haven road cutting the fare from Quincy to Boston to six cents a trip.

Inspector Warren S. Parker, in charge of the building inspection department of Quincy for the past decade, told a Sunday AMERICAN reporter that it is impossible for his department to keep up with the rush. Hardly a day passes without ten applications being made for permits to build cottages. Though the boom seems to have especially struck that portion of the city commonly known as Houghs Neck, he finds that every section facing the waterfront is also experiencing it.

Principal Assessor Warren W. Adams, whose department is busy assessing the city, said that the increase in taxable property over last year has been tremendous. He did not care to state just what the increase would be as the work had not been completed.

Every section of the town of Weymouth facing the water is receiving the benefit of the building boom. Thousands of lots have been cut up and sold, the purchasers, in main, being the working class. The townspeople are welcoming the Summer residents with open arms. Every effort is being made to induce them to make Weymouth their Summer residence.

North Weymouth Bluffs, under development by Gerald J. Savage, which but a few years ago, was used as pasture land by the townspeople, is the location of eighty cottages. The average value of cottages on this land is about $2,300. Land, which went begging for a purchaser three years ago, is selling easily at 20 and 30 cents a square foot. Five dollars would have bought 300 feet five years ago. Many well-to-do people have chosen North Weymouth Bluffs for a Summer residence. The type of cottages varies from the bungalow valued at $1,200 to the more expensive cement Summer mansion.

The land is most beautifully located on the Weymouth Fore River, directly opposite the mammoth shipyards of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at Quincy Point.

Directly back of North Weymouth Bluffs, facing the Quincy Bay, Bay View, Bay Side and Wessagusset can be found. Bay View and Bay Side are new resorts, having been opened within two or three years. There are now about one hundred and fifty cottages averaging from $1,000 to $6,000 in cost. A five-cent fare to Quincy, with half-hour service, connecting with all Boston trains for Quincy, has encouraged building in this section of Weymouth. The people who locate at Bay View and Bay Side do so to escape the heat of the Summer and want complete quiet. There are no attractions other than bathing and boating. The colony has organized into a society and maintains a landing. Clubs of any kind are barred. On two streets alone thirty cottages were constructed within fifteen months. Land values have doubled and few lots are obtainable.

All the Shore Booming.

King's Cove, jutting out into Quincy Bay, has been recently opened. This tract contains but fifty lots. Though opened but a few months ago, several cottages are being constructed and many are contemplated. Adjoining King's Cove is Hunt's Hill. The land is not sold, but leased for a short term of years. The lessee builds his own cottage. The cost of a fair-sized lot on a short term lease is $10 a year. Many well-to-do people lease land in this manner and put up portable cottages.

Wessaquesset, Weymouth's most famous and oldest summer resort, has also been touched by the building boom and thirty cottages have been erected since last May and more than twenty contemplated. The summer residents last year built a club-house and dances and other forms of entertainments are held during the summer months. Public amusements are barred. Merry-go-rounds and public dance halls are not permitted to exist there. Every precaution is taken by the residents to prevent undesirable people to establish there. There is an unwritten law, which is conscientiously obeyed, barring out clubs of young men and girls.

Fort Point and Rose Cliff are two small summer colonies at Weymouth. These places have not received much benefit from the building boom, though several new cottages have been constructed since last year. Many summer camps have been established along the banks of the rivers and stream from Rose Cliff and Fort Point. Several large camps for boys are located there.

Crow Point at Hingham is also left behind by the other sections on the South Shore. Building operations here are scarce. The car fare to Boston from Crow Point is a little too high for the average workingman to afford.

Though many of the city people have already established themselves in their cottages on the South Shore, the majority of the people with families wait until the schools close. It has been conservatively estimated that over fifteen hundred families spend the summer on the South Shore, and the greater number of them are buying their cottages by paying rent.

At Wilmington terrace, Wilmington, another Coughlin property, he reports lots 191 to 196, on Norfolk avenue, sold to M. A. Hanson of Wilmington.

NUTTINGS LAKE PARK.

This Billerica Tract Is Now Meeting With Big Demand.

A well developed property controlled by A. A. Brand of the Old South building, is Nuttings Lake Park, Billerica. Considerable work has been accomplished in the way of installing modern improvements, and judging from the large number of visitors to and buyers of this property, it has become very popular with vacationists. About sixty bungalows have been erected so far this season and many more are contemplated. The electrics of the Boston Elevated from Sullivan square run through to Nuttings Lake Park and afford a picturesque ride through this historic section. Mr. Brand will also run a special excursion at 10.40 to-day from the North station.

ASSOCIATION FORMED BY NEWTON BROKERS

Leading Realty Firms of the Garden City Organize for Mutual Benefit.

A permanent organization of the principal real estate brokers of Newton has just been formed. It is the purpose of the association to embody in its membership all the representative realty firms of the Garden City so that a better spirit of co-operation among the brokers will develop. Brokers in other nearby suburbs, dealing in Newton property, will be admitted to membership.

The organization will be known as the Real Estate Brokers' Association of Newton and all matters affecting Newton property and its betterment, and all questions relating in any way to the upbuilding of the city will be acted on by the association.

Wiley S. Edmands of Newton has been elected president of the association. The other officers are Albert H. Wallt of Newton, vice-president, Paul J. Burrage of Newtonville, secretary and treasurer, and all the officers with Wm. J. Cozens of Newton Highlands and E. E. Fernald of Auburndale, executive committee.

The following firms were represented at the meeting and they form the nucleus of the association membership: Alfred L. Barbour & Co., by A. L. Barbour; Newton Real Estate Co., by E. M. Rumery, William J. Cozens of Newton Highlands; Bernard W. Riley of Auburndale; W. Waldo Trowbridge of West Newton; Wiley S. Edmands, by Phinias Byfield; Alvord Bros. & Co., by H. L. Alvord and P. J. Burrage, Albert H. Wallt of Newton; Fernald & Squire of Auburndale; Edwin L. Stone of Watertown, James McTigue of Brighton; E. Arthur Robinson of Auburndale, and Fred E. Critchett of Watertown.

SALE ON ESSEX STREET.

Site for New Building in the Leather District Selected.

Papers were passed at the registry of deeds yesterday afternoon in the sale of the property at Nos. 209-213 Essex street, adjoining the Hotel Essex, having about 50 feet frontage upon Essex street and a depth of about 70 feet. The sale was made by the estate of D. W. Farquhar, and the purchaser was James Arnold Lowell, trustee. Joseph Dilworth, No. 16 State street, negotiated the sale.

Robert R. McNutt will begin immediately razing the old buildings preparatory to the construction of a first-class, fireproof, ...story structure from plans of Richardson, Barrett & Richardson, the rentals of a large portion of which are taken in advance. The construction of this building was announced in the Sunday AMERICAN exclusively a few weeks ago.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR BUNGALOW HUNTERS

Large Tract Opened on West Shore of Martin's Pond in North Reading.

The United States Land Trust, of which Charles E. Stephenson and J. Legro Martin are the trustees, with offices at No. 1 Beacon street, have purchased a large tract of land on the west shore of Martins pond, North Reading, with a shore frontage of 2,000 feet. They will develop this tract for bungalow and camp lots.

The transportation facilities are unexcelled, there being 60 trains daily, and electrics leave Sullivan square every fifteen minutes via Reading, passing this property, which is to be called Inglenook.

To start this sale the trust has offered several inducements which will be given with every cash purchase, and they have also offered seven ... bungalows. This offer is to encourage building at Inglenook at once.

The land is assessed for $ ..., while the house has not yet been taxed. John L. Harberger was the purchaser and bought for a home.

The same firm has also sent deeds to record in the sale of the property numbered 327 Clinton road, Brookline. The estate consists of a frame two-and-a-half story dwelling house and 8,4.. square feet of land carrying a total assessment of $10,200, of which amount $..., is on the land. Lillian H. Colburn of Brookline conveyed to W. R. McDonald.

Henry W. Savage also reports that he has sent deeds to record in the sale of the brick apartment property at No. 38 Winchester street, Brookline. The building, being new, is not yet assessed, while the lot containing 3,708 square feet is taxed on a valuation of about 70 cents per square foot. John J. Johnston, Jr., conveyed through another to Blanche M. Bancroft, who bought for investment.

Henry W. Savage has sold to Charles H. Davis of Winthrop the estate belonging to Henry P. Smith at No. 149 Strathmore road, in the Aberdeen district. The property consists of a modern frame dwelling of two and a half stories and 11,158 square feet of land, assessed in all for $14,000, of which amount the land carries $5,000. Mr. Davis will occupy the premises at an early date.

TWO AUCTION SALES.

L. H. Bonelli Closes One Land Deal and Opens Another.

The auction sale of lots at Aberdeen Park, Aberdeen, conducted by Louis H. Bonelli of No. 60 State street, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, was most successful. A total of 75 lots was disposed of, Mr. Bonelli on Thursday and Friday selling an aggregate area of 173,000 square feet with a value of many thousands of dollars.

Mr. Bonelli is a firm believer in the sale of land by the auction method and he has arranged to hold a sale of house lots on a large tract on Morton street, Dorchester beginning next Friday. This tract is known as Morton terrace and contains several hundred lots. The sale will open Friday afternoon and will be continued on the afternoons of Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, the holiday. Dorchester is rapidly building up and Mr. Bonelli expects to sell the entire tract in four days because of the big demand for land there by builders.

GO SOUTH, SAYS CHAMP

Congressman Champ Clark of Missouri, the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, recently amended the famous saying of Horace Greeley, "Go West, young man, go West," and made it read, "Go South, my boy, go South."

"The South is the place, and my advice is to go there," he said. "You won't eat as much as you do here in the North. If you do, you'll die. Your clothing must be lighter and therefore less expensive. You won't have to buy any fuel to speak of and you can allow your horses and cattle to graze out of doors the year around.

"Believe me, the South is the poor man's land, and you'll live to see the day when the South is going to be the richest part of the United States.

"Why, say, I know a man who made $[illegible] in one year off three acres of lettuce. Sounds fishy, doesn't it? True, though, for I took the pains to find out. It's a great country, boys, and if you want a good tip follow my advice. That is, go early to the Southland and grow up with its progress."

If you are working on a salary with no prospect of ever becoming independent—if you are not able to give your family the luxury and comfort they would like, and want to improve your condition, we can show you some things that will open the way for your advancement. The man who wants a home of his own is turning his thoughts to the farm. To this man Florida offers opportunities that are unheard of in other farming sections—and no part of Florida offers the same advantages to the man with a little money and a disposition to work as does our land at Brooksville in Hernando county.

TWO AND THREE CROPS RAISED EACH YEAR

Florida is a land where a man of average intelligence with from ten to twenty acres (and the soil and climate of Hernando county to help him) can easily make himself independent. Such are the men who have already made good in Florida, and they have not toiled like slaves for it either.

Dark rich top soil and loamy sub-soil underlaid with clay close to the surface, the ideal soil and climate for oranges, grapefruit, pecans and garden truck, produces the brightest and best oranges and grapefruit shipped out of Florida, $500 to $1000 worth per acre.

MANY MEN MAKE $1000 NET ANNUAL PROFIT PER ACRE

Produces $525 worth of cabbage per acre, $600 strawberries, $672 celery, $552 lettuce, $400 onions, $400 cucumbers, $400 tomatoes, $550 eggplant, $400 radishes, $250 potatoes and everything Northern markets demand in like proportion as well as corn, hay, sugarcane and all staple crops.

The soil, the equable climate and the abundant water make all this possible. The thermometer seldom goes above 90 degrees in the daytime and 70 at night, the government records for thirty-five days show an average day temperature of 78 degrees. Florida, being practically surrounded by sea and gulf, is swept by sea breezes that make the Summer relatively cool and the Winter uniformly warm. Under these conditions the ordinary outdoor crops of Florida are as prolific and as choice as the costly hothouse products of the North—yet without the glass house and without the artificial heat.

Hence we say that nature has done more for man in Florida than in any other State. Every day in the year is a day of planting, cultivating or harvesting—or all together—the farming is thus forever placed beyond the fickleness of the weather and made the one occupation that can absolutely be depended upon.

You are invited to come to an established and intelligent community of homes and schools. The pioneering was done in Hernando county long ago.

YOU CAN BUY ONE OF THESE FARMS ON MONTHLY PAYMENTS

Brooksville, the county seat of Hernando county, is situated on the only range of hills in all southern Florida, its altitude being 328 feet above the sea level. It is always favored by cool breezes from gulf or ocean, and the oppressiveness of the lower altitudes is never experienced. Its high hills assure it a sense of mosquitoes, malaria and other disadvantages of the flat, low lying land of other sections. It is a thriving, busy and thoroughly modern city of about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is equipped with electric lights, an ice plant, extensive factories, the largest turpentine plant in the State, six churches, excellent schools and many enterprising stores. Two railroads enter the town. The telephone service covers the entire county and connects with the long distance service.

The people are cultured, wide awake, progressive, extremely hospitable and anxious to welcome the energetic Northerner who comes to develop the country.

OUR FREE BOOK

explains everything regarding Florida. It goes into detail as to location of our land, the climate, the soil, the different cities near our property, the various kinds of fruits and vegetables that are now being grown there and sold for high prices. It also explains the length of time required for the proper cultivation of the various fruits and the number of crops harvested yearly.

The book also contains tables compiled for the government of the United States, showing the average productions per acre in dollars and cents. To the man in the North with a worked-out farm these figures will seem astounding, but they are taken from the government reports and are therefore reliable.

We do not ask you to take our word. Our book makes plain statements and you can easily verify them.

Send for the book at once. Better still, come and talk it over with us. We are a New England company, made up of highly responsible New England men and we selected this land especially to please New England people.

Money to Loan.

SEVEN REASONS
Why you should borrow from us: 1—You need no security, just your plain note; 2—You do not need an indorser; 3—We will forfeit $100 to a charitable institution if we notify your employer or friends of your intention to borrow from us; 4—You can get your loan at once; 5—You can pay it back in small payments; 6—You don't ride in an elevator where you are liable to meet your employer or friends; 7—Last, but not least, we only charge you 1 per cent. interest on each $1 you borrow from us up to $100, with a written agreement not to charge you said interest if you are dissatisfied. Come and talk it over in our private office. WAGE EARNERS' LOAN ASS'N, 10 State st.

PRIVATE LOANS
TO salaried employes without security or indorser at cheaper rates and easier terms than heretofore offered in Boston.
If you have a loan elsewhere bring in your receipts and we will show you how much you can save by borrowing from us. Having loans elsewhere is no bar to your getting loans here.
Credit once established with us is as good as a bank account in time of need.

Stand Back, You Bigot

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

—(Copyright, 1911, by Herbert Kaufman.

You're an obstruction in the Great Road—a stubborn donkey, so bent on having your way that you block the way for others. You don't know what lies ahead and you won't be guided.

The blinders of conceit cut off the broad distances that stretch to the right and the left of you, so you can't behold the mighty opportunities constantly calling to the competent.

You can't possibly succeed, because you view the universe through a blur of self-satisfaction—you are short-sighted—your judgment has no range—it reaches nowhere.

You estimate in extremes. You give yourself double the credit to which you are entitled, and the rest of us half the consideration we deserve.

You reason with feeling and not with fact. You exaggerate the weight of your own conclusions and depreciate the sanity of all who disagree with you.

You measure men and methods solely from your experience. You reject as unsound everything that you do not approve, and belittle what you can't understand. You are a judge listening merely to one side of an argument—your decisions are worthless.

When Intolerance fashions a lock, big keys are useless.

A broad idea can't possibly penetrate to you—the gateway to your mind is always half-closed.

You never discover the best in individuals or issues, because you are searching solely for trivial weaknesses, and so stalwart virtues and mighty abilities escape your attention.

You're commonplace, incompetent, unworthy of the privileges and powers of a progressive. You must not be permitted to deal with vital forces, because you aren't equipped to cope with them.

You're out of date—an anachronistic accident.

Nature was drowsing when you made your appearance.

You're a throw-back from the Black Ages. Evolution exterminated your type centuries ago. We've outgrown you.

We've lost bigotry through the same processes which eliminated our tails. We abandoned your attitude toward existence when we stopped burning witches and outlawed the torture chamber.

There is no place for you and no sympathy with you. You won't help us and we won't let you hurt us.

We declare for man's ability to mount as high as his vision can reach—to attain as far as his honorable desires—to accomplish in proportion to his will—to achieve as broadly as his ambition. We deny the barriers of impossibility. We are intolerant of intolerance.

Our quest is the Light Eternal, and Ignorance is our enemy.

How the Piano Trust Forced Me Into the Piano Business

And is Now Trying to Force Me Out

In the Meantime Read These Bargains

Don't think because we name the same make of Piano day after day and week after week that we have no other kinds. We have in our stock scores of Pianos the names of which are not familiar to New England people. We always name the leading Boston and New England makes, those having the high standard of workmanship with which we Bostonians are so well acquainted. Any week you are liable to get a swell bargain in any of the following makes: WELLINGTON, CHICAGO—SOMMER, OMAHA, NEB. WHITNEY, CHICAGO—SMITH & BARNES, CHICAGO—ROGERS BROS., CHICAGO. MARSHALL & WENDELL, NEW YORK—KRANICH & BACH, NEW YORK—KINGSBURY, CHICAGO—WOODBURY, LEOMINSTER—GEO. STECK, NEW YORK—JACOB BROS., NEW YORK. People familiar with these makes will know that they are excellent pianos in every respect. They are sold at a less price than New England makes only because Boston is not acquainted with their true worth.

$5 Down $1 a Week
DELIVERED ANYWHERE IN UNMARKED WAGONS

NOTICE No matter what make of Piano you are thinking of buying, get the Roxbury Piano Storage Salesrooms Co.'s price on the same instrument first.

BACK HEARST VIEW ON TRUST DECISION

Nation's Big Men Agree That Sherman Law Is Made "Punk and Putty."

NEW LEGISLATION NEEDED

Declare Congress Must Take Up the Task of Determining Trust Regulation.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Chairman William C. Adamson of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, before which much of the [illegible] legislation must come, agrees [illegible] with Mr Hearst and the AMERICAN that the Supreme Court in deciding the Standard Oil case has reduced "the Sherman anti-trust [illegible] to punk and putty."

[illegible] with the AMERICAN [illegible] legislation is necessary, and [illegible] Congress will have up again the task of determining how the trusts shall be regulated. As this committee will have to frame the new legislation, the views of Mr. Adamson are of importance. Said he:

The powerful editorial in the AMERICAN, in which Mr Hearst expressed his views of the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case, has been the subject of continuous comment and approval among Senators and Congressmen. It is still being talked about as one of the strongest utterances evoked by this notable decision."

"Among the comments upon this editorial which I send to-day from leading members of the Senate and House nothing is more striking than the strong and forceful expression of Senator Clapp of Minnesota, chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, and of Representative Adamson of Georgia, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate Commerce. These two great committees will handle much of the legislation growing out of the Supreme Court decision

Kills Sherman Law.

The views of Senator Clapp and Representative Adamson, joined with those of the other distinguished Senators and Representatives, make up an imposing symposium of aproval for the AMERICAN'S editorial and a most important addition to the great tide of public opinion which has arisen in criticism of the decision

Said Mr Adamson

"Mr Hearst makes no mistake when he says that the Sherman Anti Trust law and destroyed the weapon created by Congress to control trusts and combinations If I had felt uncertain about this, the trusts themselves would have convinced me So certain are they that they have benefited under the Court's interpretation of the law that they advanced their stocks on the market to show the increased value they had gained under that decision

Through that decision of the Supreme Court they gained what they had been struggling unsuccessfully for years to get through Congress Almost with the passage of the Sherman Anti-Trust law they began combining for its amendment so that they could engage in 'reasonable' restraint of trade. Both as a matter of principle and policy Congress has steadily resisted all such efforts, and the lower federal courts, recognizing the [illegible] intent of Congress and the purpose of the legislation, have refused to put any other interpretation [illegible] law than what was clearly set forth [illegible] its language. The Supreme Court [illegible] read into the law that 'unreasonable restraint of trade' is illegal.

Mr Adamson explained he did not wish to be considered as criticising the Supreme Court at all was discussing [illegible] the effect of the decision. Continuing he said:

It has long been understood that restraint of trade was morally and legally wrong There has never been any [illegible] of the legality of reasonable restraint of trade

"If a thing is wrong, it is wrong; and if it is not 'reasonably' wrong If two trusts are robbing the people it makes no difference that one extorts smaller [illegible] than the other. You could scarcely say that the trust taking the least was only 'reasonably' wrong

"Manifestly there must be some new legislation strengthening and reaffirming the principles of the Sherman law that all restraint of trade is illegal if the trusts are to be controlled effectively."

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN of Washington—Mr Hearst has been on the right side of all these questions, and I approve of what he says about the Standard Oil decision and the necessity of amendment of anti trust law His papers have done a power for good and have done a vast service for the people of this country in molding public opinion. Other newspapers of the country should follow his example and bring to the attention of their readers the imperative necessity of impressing upon Congress the importance of prompt and proper action

In my opinion the most important matter to which Congress can now address itself is the consideration and enactment of a law with regard to the trusts and combinations of the country about which there can be no possible misinterpretation. In this Standard Oil decision the Supreme Court undoubtedly has reversed itself, and and Congress must meet the new situation.

Where It Will Lead.

SENATOR REED, of Missouri—That I agree with the position taken so ably by Mr. Hearst and his newspapers is evidenced by the amendment I have offered, which is intended to meet the new conditions imposed by the decisions of the court. It will be a good thing if the papers generally call the attention of the country to the need of amending the Anti-Trust law and making it the enactment that those who framed it, those who voted for it intended it should be, and what the courts, until last Monday, have held it to be.

I look upon the decision in the Standard Oil case as revolutionary In it the statute has been written words the legislative body never intended should be there; words that were kept out after a struggle and which have been sought to be written into the statutes in many subsequent efforts to amend that law. As the law is now interpreted the people not only must prove that a combination or a conspiracy exists, but they must prove that such combinations are injurious and that the people through their operations have been injured.

Extortionate prices, great profits and large dividends are not the greatest evils that come from monopoly. When monopoly controls the sources of supply of any of our great natural products or dominates the entire output in any field of industrial activity, it not only suppresses all competition but makes the whole world pay commercial tribute

SENATOR GORE of Oklahoma—I have read the editorial in Mr. Hearst's AMERICAN with keen interest. It sounds the right note This Congress will not refuse to accept the responsibility placed upon it, I am quite sure, and before it adjourns an amendment to the Sherman law will have been adopted that will nullify the effect of the recent decision The trusts seem to be elated over that decision. However I believe it is but the beginning of the end.

The people should be educated upon this subject, and I am glad to see Mr. Hearst taking the lead in that direction, as he has in so many things. Believing as I do that the fear of a jail sentence will act as a more powerful deterrent to officials of corporations than the fear of fines. I have provided in an amendment to the Anti Trust law that I have just introduced for the imposition of an imprisonment sentence only and have increased the minimum period of imprisonment of two years Congress must act and act promptly.

Suggests New Tribunal.

SENATOR FRANCIS G. NEWLANDS of NEVADA—The decision in the Standard Oil case emphasizes the force of my recent remarks in the Senate on the subject of interstate trade. The administration of the trust question must be taken out of the hands of the Attorney-General and out of the hands of the courts and placed under the control of a great correctional tribunal similar in its workings to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This is my suggestion in reply to the AMERICAN'S powerful statement that Congress should enact laws to remedy the situation left by the Standard Oil decision

SENATOR GEORGE D. PERKINS of California—The people have demanded the regulation and control of combinations in restraint of trade. The spirit of the law should be carried out If, as Mr Hearst states, the teeth have been taken out of the Sherman act, it should be amended until the will of the people can be enforced. This course would be along the lines of the least resistance It is easier to amend an existing law than to make new laws

SENATOR JOHN D. WORKS, of California—Mr. Hearst and the AMERICAN express my views when they state that the duty now devolves upon Congress either to reaffirm the Sherman act in even more definite and positive terms or to enact new laws which will rigidly control the formation of trusts, the conduct of trusts and the prices of trust products.

The Supreme Court has interpolated into the law one word which leaves every case not upon the terms of the statute, but upon the judgment of the courts, as to whether a restraint of trade is reasonable It will involve great and continued litigation, as nothing has been determined except that the statute is valid and that this particular corporation has violated the law.

Senator Clapp's Views.

SENATOR CLAPP of Minnesota, chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce:

It would be a great public service if the newspapers of the country would do as Mr. Hearst has so ably done—educate the people to the point where they would understand that the greatest danger to our institutions lies in court made law

The AMERICAN is one of the influential newspapers of the country. I approve of the position it has taken with regard to the amendment of the present Sherman Anti Trust law. I think the matter to which I have referred is of paramount importance."

It will not do to throw the responsibility upon Congress and say the courts have been able to so construe a law because Congress was derelict in its duty or only partially performed that duty.

Let public opinion grow to such development that the courts must take cognizance of it and legislation by judicial interpretation soon will end, for the courts, as well as all others in authority are not beyond the reach and influence of the sentiment of the country once that sentiment is aroused and has been given effective expression

It might be well to remind those who are opposed to the recall as applied to the courts that court-made law will do more than anything else to bring about general approval of the principle of the recall to the judiciary.

Says Hearst Is Right.

CONGRESSMAN BAKER, of California—Mr Hearst is right. The trouble with the Standard Oil decision is that it leaves the situation that no one case is determinative of the trust question. The law must be applied to a different state of facts in every case, and questions of fact must be passed upon by the courts in reaching a conclusion as to whether trade restraints are reasonable or unreasonable

The Sherman act should provide that combination in restraint of trade is illegal, and the question of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the restraint should not enter

World's Horse Champions

1400 Entered for Parade

Special Features Promised for Ninth Memorial Day Event.

FOURTEEN hundred horses have been entered for the ninth annual parade of the Boston Work Horse Parade Association on Memorial Day morning. There are special prizes of gold and silver medals offered for old horses, and a silver medal for the driver who has the longest term of service with any person or concern.

This "Old Horse Class" is an innovation of the Boston Association It is intended to constitute one of the most interesting features of the big parade this year, which will cover about four miles.

Seventy old horses, arranged in five divisions according to their age, have been entered in competition Prizes of silver medals and sums of money have been put up in each division. In the division which includes the oldest of the lot, the first prize is a handsome gold medal offered by the M. S. P. C. A.

These "Came Back."

The class for reconstructed horses, made up of run-down horses that were bought for small sums by their present owners and later restored to health and strength, also will contain a large number of interesting exhibits. There also are special prizes of money and medals in the "hackster," "express" and the barrel-rack" classes.

Five new classes have been instituted for champion horses, open only to animals that have taken three or more blue ribbons in previous parades. This, the judges think, will bring together the finest collection of work horses ever seen in this or any other country. These champion classes are divided as follows:

Class 1—For light, single horses such as laundry-wagon horses.

Class 2—For single, middleweight or wagon horses, such as milk and bakery horses.

Class 3—For double teams of middleweight, or wagon horses.

Class 4—For single truck teams.

Class 5—For double truck teams.

For Lawrence Medal.

Ten four-horse teams of great beauty and strength have been entered for the Lawrence gold medal, offered in memory of the late R. A. Lawrence, the founder and first president of the association. This medal goes to the best four-horse team, provided it is also cared for by the driver

This year's board of judges will include four men from Maine, two from Providence and veterinary surgeons from New Bedford, Fall River Springfield and other places. Among them will be Dr Cleaves of Gardner, president of the Massachusetts Veterinary Association; Dr Madison Bunker of Newton, Dr May of Jamaica Plain, Dr Draper of Milton, Dr. Bolger of Cambridge, Dr F J Sullivan of Boston, Dr S. F. Wadsworth of Boston, Dr H A. Soutler of Boston, Dr Harrie Pierce of Medford. J H. Sullivan and R. A. Kennett.

"STARS AND BARS" EMBLEM

Representative Gudger of North Carolina Makes Slip.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Confederate flag—the "Stars and Bars"—is the national emblem of the people of the United States according to a statement by Representative Gudger of North Carolina in the Congressional Record. Mr. Gudger spoke Wednesday. Following is the peroration of his revised speech as it appears in the Record:

"In a great country like ours, stretching from ocean to ocean, from lake to gulf, embracing within its limits every kind of soil, capable of producing everything used by man, the trade privileges of the greatest government on earth should be retained and used for the people who float the stars and bars."

"Oh," he said with a smile, "it was just a slip of the tongue. Thinking more of the stars and bars than of the stars and stripes, I said it."

MAY PROCESSION.

Children Parade To-day in Annual Fete at Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, May 20.—The annual May procession of the children of St. Mary's and the Immaculate Conception parishes will take place to-morrow afternoon, weather permitting For the past week or more the preparations have been under way, and to-day everything is ready for a splendid demonstration It is an unique custom and proudly revered by the Catholics of this city, who marched when youths and now watch the coming generations take their place in the line of march. The first May procession was held in this city in 1830.

GATES IN AN OIL MOVE.

Increases Capital Stock of His Texas Company to $90,000,000.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 20.—The Texas company, a gigantic oil concern of which John W. Gates is the head, with headquarters in Houston, to-day filed articles in Austin increasing its capital stock from $36,000,000 to $90,000,000 This action following upon the heels of the Standard Oil decision, caused considerable comment, but no explanation of the move was vouchsafed at the office of the company.

NEW WARSHIPS FOR CHILI.

Great Britain Gets Contract for Building Two Dreadnoughts.

LONDON, May 20.—The English tenders for the construction of two Chilean dreadnoughts have been accepted, according to the London Evening News, which says to-day that definite orders for two battleships of 28,000 tons will be placed here soon One of the English tenders is said to have been $1,000,000 below the next lowest bid The ships are to be named the Libertad and the Constitution, and will be armed with twelve new 13.5-inch guns.

BIG BIBLE DISTRIBUTION.

Five Thousand to Be Given To-day to Boston Hotels.

Five thousand Bibles will be distributed among Boston hotels to-day as a result of the efforts of W. E. Henderson, national secretary of the Gideons and of the Christian Commercial Travelers' Association of America.

"In my work of placing over 70,000 Bibles in more than 650 hotels the last few years" Mr Henderson said, "nowhere have I found the people more responsive than in Boston."

CATHOLIC FORESTERS SHOW GREAT GAINS

Reports for Coming State Convention at Worcester Set Present Membership at 32,000.

The Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters will hold its thirty-second annual convention in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, on Wednesday next and there will be unusual interest in the event because during the last twelve months the growth of the organization has far exceeded that of any previous year in its history Many new courts have been instituted and the financial standing of the order is very gratifying.

The order was chartered in Massachusetts thirty-two years ago and to-day stands with the best of Catholic fraternal insurance bodies. There are now 332 distinct courts in this State. One hundred and thirty-seven of them have men only for members, fifty-eight have women members only and thirty-seven others have both men and women on their rolls. Women were not admitted to membership until 1894, but since that time have been very influential in the order

More than 650 delegates will attend the convention and each of them must be a Past Chief Ranger or in other words, must have held the office of presiding officer of his or her court.

Membership Is Large.

Advance sheets of the report to be read at the convention by Secretary-Treasurer Daniel H. Maguire of Haverhill state that at the close of 1910 the Massachusetts order had 32,072 members The f[illegible] membership up to May 10, 1911, was 32,566 There were 2,832 members initiated in 1910, and the membership loss that year totalled 786. The net gain was 20,460.

Since the order was established $3,800,614.56 has been paid to beneficiaries of members who have died

The supplementary financial report to May 10, 1911, is very encouraging. The figures are pointed to by members of this organization as substantiation of their claim, "that this order is the largest, safest and cheapest Catholic fraternal insurance body in the United States." The supplementary report states as a summary:

|---|---|
| Balance January 1, 1911 | $80,712.51 |
| Income during the year to May 10: | |
| Mortuary assessment | 173,046.02 |
| Emergency | 1,356.50 |
| General | 1,681.23 |
| Total | $176,083.75 |
| Total receipts with balance | $256,796.26 |
| Payments | |
| Mortuary benefits | $149,676.21 |
| Emergency fund to trustees | 1,051.26 |
| General fund expenses | 9,407.19 |
| Total | $160,134.66 |
| Balance on hand May 10, 1911 | $96,661.60 |

The trustees will report to the convention that up to Wednesday last the total amount in the emergency fund in their hands was $337,280.18 First mortgages on real estate amounted to $156,325, they held besides for the order municipal bonds for which $107,171.40 had been paid; they had $557.20 on deposit in the Union Institution for Savings and $3,226 on deposit with the Old Colony Trust Co.

Reception to Delegates.

Worcester courts will tender a reception to the delegates, and this social function will be on the eve of the convention opening Dr. John H. Smith is chairman and Frank R. Hickey secretary of the Worcester committee in charge of the Tuesday evening sociable.

The convention will begin at 9.30 Wednesday morning and a recess will be taken from 12.30 until 2 The Australian system will be used in balloting It is understood that High Chief Ranger John F. Harrigan does not seek re-election. He has been at the head of the State order for two years. It has been the vogue to apply the rule of succession in electing state officers for a long time. It is thought the custom will hold this year The present full high standing committee comprises John F Harrigan of Worcester, H C. R.; Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic, H. V. C. R.; Daniel H. Maguire of Haverhill, H S. T; James Dignam of New Bedford, H. S. C.; Edward N. Clancy of Watertown, H J. C.; Cornelius F. Buckley of South Boston, H. I. S.; Timothy J Collins of Springfield H O S; Dr Francis J Hanley of Whitman, H. M. Ex., and Rev. James H. O'Neil, LL.D., H. C. C.

This order was several times commended by the late Archbishop Williams and Archbishop O'Connell has also expressed his approval of it. There are on the roll of its active members more than two hundred priests.

AT PINEDALE ANNEX.

This Billerica Tract Popular With Homeseekers and Investors.

Much interest is being shown in the Pinedale Park Land Company's new development, Pinedale Annex, Billerica, since its opening a few weeks ago Customers have availed themselves of the low prices and purchased from four to twelve lots apiece, so that there now remain but two hundred lots to be sold. Pinedale Annex adjoins Pinedale Park the company's successful colony with 150 bungalows on the property. The land is virtually a pine grove, with a Summer amusement park and the river close by and the Boston & Maine new repair shops but a short distance from it. These many advantages, including the fact that Pinedale Annex is situated on the State boulevard and on the trolley line between Boston and Lowell, make it a desirable location for either the homeseeker, the Summer camper or the investor

Shortly the company will open another and very large tract of land. One hundred men are now at work upon it building streets. Detailed announcement about this tract will be made later.

REPORTS MANY SALES.

A. A. Brand Disposes of 127 Lots at Wilmington Square Park.

A. A. Brand of the Old South building reports that since the opening of Wilmington Square Park, last Sunday, 127 lots have been sold to people, most of whom expect to start improvements immediately.

Among the purchasers were over a dozen residing in Wilmington, who, knowing the values in the vicinity, took advantage of the offering for sale of the property. Wilmington Square Park is located in the heart of the town surrounded by [illegible] schools, stores and less than [illegible] feet from the Wilmington depot Three electric car lines pass the property. The company is about to let contracts for a number of all-the-year-round houses for which there is a great demand by clerks, draftsmen and other mechanics employed on the new repair shops of the Boston and Maine, which is only ten minutes' ride from Wilmington Square Park and only a 5-cent fare on either train or electrics. Mr. Brand is running a special excursion to the property today at 12.40 from the North Station, as announced in the advertisement

JUDGE QUITS BOARD.

Leaves School Committee in Brockton, Dissatisfied.

BROCKTON, May 20.—After twenty-five years of service as a member of the school board, Judge Loyed E. Chamberlain has decided to quit the board. He gives no reason for his action, but says up to a short time ago he enjoyed the work Rumors of Judge Chamberlain's dissatisfaction with his place on the board have had circulation since the first of the year, when the new "progressive" committee, as it is known, was organized. The old guard no longer reigns and, coupled with the opinion that the old members have met with this year, the reason for Judge Chamberlain's withdrawal from public life is obvious.

CITY OFFICIALS ARE PLANNING QUICK MOVE

Many Departments Must Hustle Into "Junior City Hall" Overnight to Avoid Hitch.

Moving one-third of City Hall in a night will be the problem that the public buildings department will be called upon to solve before July 1.

The old Court House is coming down to make way for the new eleven-story annex to City Hall and the fourteen city departments housed there will have to be moved in a night to prevent any interruption of the city's business.

The building which will probably be the junior City Hall for about two years is at the corner of Devonshire and Summer streets. John C. Kiley, the city's real estate expert, is conducting negotiations for the lease of the property.

Some of the important departments temporarily located in the auxiliary municipal buildings will be the health, election, sealers of weights and measures, building, wire, public buildings, registry of births, marriages and deaths and a part of the street laying out department

Immediately the city departments have been removed to their temporary home the work of razing the old Court House will begin. It is planned to have the structure completely leveled by September 1 and the work of building the annex will be rapidly pushed. With the completion of the new building, which it is estimated will cost about $800,000, the city will be able to save about $50,000 a year now paid for outside rent.

It is now planned to put the force of furniture movers to work immediately at the close of business on the last Saturday in June. All of the department goods will be moved to the temporary building on Saturday afternoon and evening and on the following Sunday the department employes will work arranging the material so that the city business can start in the new quarters on Monday morning

POULTRY NOTES

The poultry fanciers throughout New England at the present time are reporting a pretty lively demand for chickens and the demand seems to come from amateurs who are living in the country or have taken a country place for the summer season.

Poultry handled right will pay, this fact has been demonstrated time and again and the advent of the small houses with the system of not having a large yard room is making the business far more popular than ever before.

The Plymouth Rocks seem to hold their well established popularity although many are trying out flocks of Rhode Island Reds and the Orpington breed.

For laying, probably no breed can excel the Leghorn variety although their flying qualities make it almost impossible to keep any number on a small place. This breed is a steady laying breed and are easy to care for.

The new breed Sicilian Buttercup [illegible] attracting unusual attention from those who make a specialty of fancy poultry From all the data at hand, these hens are exceptional layers, are easy to raise and are sturdy as any of the regular breeds. But few of this type of poultry can be found now around New England although by next year we will see the Sicilian Buttercup on the market and at the shows in larger numbers than ever before.

The Heath farm at Grafton are experimenting with the White Rocks and Buff Orpingtons and [illegible] some of the chicks shows a pen of this crossing.

WHAT ARE WE HERE FOR?

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

A READER who thinks and looks at life earnestly—the kind of reader worth having—sends this:

"I wonder if you would answer these questions:

"'What are we here for?'"

"'Do you consider spirit and thought as identical, or is thought the outcome of spirit united with matter?'"

"Yours sincerely,

"Reader."

The first question, "What are we here for?" is offered to our readers for discussion to-day. The other question will be reserved for future discussion.

Is there a man or a woman among the many who see this editorial into whose mind this question has never come?

At this great question which fills the minds and the consciousness of men we may look in many different ways.

A man may say to himself as an individual, What am I here for? What is MY particular task? What are my special duties and possibilities?

Or a man may look at the question from a wider standpoint and ask:

"For what purpose is THE HUMAN RACE put here?"

Men are all brothers, although a majority are not yet civilized enough to know that. Men are undoubtedly as much alike, seen from the heights of justice and knowledge, as so many grains of sand or drops of water.

Men were put here as a RACE to fulfill duties as a race, to live and achieve together. There can be no doubt of that. And the biggest question that men have to answer, the question that the Greek philosophers studied thirty centuries ago, that the Asiatics studied and abandoned long before them, is this:

Why is the human race here, what should it do, what CAN it do?

The question will be answered one day, and the answer will come because men forever discuss the great problem.

To see any question clearly you must go far away from it and study the picture as though you had no place in it.

Suppose that you were a superior being on another planet, looking at this earth with its rivers, mountains, flowers, trees, beautiful green fields and about fifteen hundred million human beings scattered over it.

The earth would look to you like a great garden in need of cultivation, and you would look on the little microscopic, two-legged creatures as gardeners. If any one asked you, "Why are the little human beings put on that planet?" you would probably answer:

"God owns the planet. His pride is in that beautiful round earth. He has put the little men there to cultivate it, drain the marshes, irrigate the deserts, wipe out the jungles and finally make a glorious and beautiful park of the whole earth.

"I marvel at His patience with these little human beings that fight each other and rob and cheat each other and waste their time instead of working at the great round garden confided to their care."

That would be the view of a thinking being, AWAY from this earth. Such a being would say that we human beings are here to beautify the EARTH and improve it, and that as the microbes in the cheese give the cheese its flavor, so we microbes are here to give this earth its beauty.

That would seem reasonable from our feeble human point of view.

If you went down to Mr. Vanderbilt's magnificent place at Biltmore, or to the estate of some English duke, and saw hundreds or even thousands of human beings working at the lawns, the walks, the flower beds and the greenhouses, you would not hesitate for a minute to answer the question, "Why are those men there?"

You would say, "They are there, of course, because the man that owns the great gardens wants the gardens looked after. First he got the garden, and after that he put the gardeners there to make it beautiful."

The materialistic man looks at the earth in that way; says that men are merely animals, with just sufficient thought to make them good caretakers of this planet, with no life hereafter, no probable great improvement here.

But this is not the highest or the true conception.

You might imagine the English duke thinking of his workmen only as human machines to care for his lawns. But you could imagine a nobler soul more interested in his gardeners than in his gardens, anxious that the garden should be made beautiful in order that the gardeners and their families might live happily and develop spiritually amid beautiful surroundings.

The man is dull-minded who doubts that the great power of Law and Justice that rules this universe and maintains in perpetual equilibrium and warm sunlight our little planet has failed to plan and provide for the fullest development of the spark of cosmic consciousness called soul, which is in each of us the mainspring.

The wonderful earth, born in heat and fire, changing geologically through long millions of years, becoming more beautiful with each succeeding age, is ultimately to be an ideal home, perfect and beautiful. Who can doubt that that is to be the history of this planet?

A race of men born in ignorance, passing through hundreds of thousands of years of suffering, struggling, poverty, ferocious combat, famine and disease, are ultimately to attain civilization, high knowledge, true brotherhood, to live happily on this planet for millions of years, with the dreadful past forgotten. Who can doubt that that is to be the future of the human race?

The race will become beautiful and perfect in beautifying and perfecting the planet. The human gardener will improve as his work improves; he will become worthy of the beauty and harmony that surround him in infinite space. Such is the hope of men as a race.

Thus man thinks of himself as a drop in the ocean of humanity. But apart from this thought there is the constant study of the individual BY the individual, man seeking to know HIMSELF.

It is this self-study, this questioning and self-reproach that push the world along, lifting up the race by lifting up the atoms that compose it.

The beautiful picture on this page illustrates and helps to answer the old great question, "Why are we here?"

The little child in the doorway on the poor street looks in wonder at the face of the old man, furrowed, sad and discouraged.

The old man, whose questioning and striving with fate has been answered by failure, looks down upon the little child, and in that child's face and hopefulness and helplessness finds a partial answer at least to the great question.

He knows that his own life need not be a failure in reality, although it has failed on the surface.

He knows that to protect one such child, to give it an hour's happiness or save it from a day of suffering is alone worth while.

His clothes are torn, his shoes are worn, his face is sad with the disappointments and mistakes of many years.

He looks at the child, whose face is a page with no line written upon it, whose eyes reflect the wonders and all the beauty of truth and innocence, and looking at the child he is able to answer the question, saying to himself:

"I am here to help others, to use power wisely if it comes, and to endure poverty bravely if it must come. I am here to think not of myself but of others, to think of children such as this and to help them and protect them."

What are we here for?

We are here to find our work and do it, to realize our duty and do it, and to put ahead of all other considerations and things the needs of the weak and the poor.

A Question That Is as Old as the First Man, the Most Important Question That Enters the Mind of Man.

What is the Fragrance of Your Soul? by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

WHAT kind of an impression are you making on people?

What do you suppose is the influence you leave on your friends after you have been with them?

Although this may seem a vain thought, it is quite worthy of your consideration.

We all have our spiritual or mental ODOR.

Each ones leaves a subtle fragrance perceptible to the MIND; a fragrance or rank odor; emanating from the mentality.

You may use delicate jessamine on your laces; you may scatter the breath of roses from your garments as you pass out of a room; your kiss on the cheek of your friend may leave the scent of the violet sen-sen you have just crushed under pearly teeth; but the real thing you leave behind you in the room is the ODOR OF YOUR SOUL.

And if your conversation has been full of unkind criticism, and gossip and sarcasm and ridicule have marked your speech, then the room will need airing, and the rank smell of SCANDAL will fill the air.

DON'T look for flaws as you go through life;
And even when you find them
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind,
And to look for the virtue behind them.
For the cloudiest night has a hint of light
Somewhere in the shadows hiding;
It is better far to hunt for a star
Than the spots on the sun abiding
The current of life runs ever away
To the bosom of God's great ocean;
Don't set your face 'gainst the river's course
And think to alter its motion!

Don't waste a curse on the Universe;
Remember it lived before you;
Don't butt at the storm with your puny form,
But bend, and let it pass o'er you.
The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims to the letter;
Some things must go wrong your whole life long,
And the sooner you know it the better.
It is folly to fight with the Infinite,
And go under at last in the wrestle;
The wiser man shapes into God's plan
As water shapes into a vessel.

A beautifully gowned woman, who seemed to exhale cleanliness and flowery fragrances, sat in a room with a circle of friends. The hostess endeavored to make the conversation general and of interest to all present. But no sooner had she touched upon a topic than her handsome and daintily gowned guest took it up, and left a blighting touch upon it.

An admirable young woman who possessed genius was praised, but the guest reminded her hostess that the girl was bold and needed to be trained in good manners, a fault of bad breeding at home. A woman was mentioned as bright and entertaining, but the guest, while agreeing, felt it to be a misfortune that she was such a bad housekeeper and that her children were not sent to school. The hostess remarked that they were quite well informed owing to the father's education, but the guest added that it was a pity he was such a shiftless sort of person and the whole family was queer.

Another gifted woman was pronounced a Freak; and so on went the comments and criticisms, mixed always with some word of praise to be sure, but with the unkind and uncharitable words predominating, so that the label POISON needed to be pasted above each potion.

When the woman rose to leave each remaining guest breathed a sigh of relief; and the hostess threw open the windows, saying the room seemed close.

Another woman sat in a room which had seemed sunny and bright on her entrance, but her continual recitation of sickness and trouble, and her descriptions of surgical operations, shadowed the sunlight and invited depression and gloom; and it seemed as if a waft of hospital odors, drugs and anaesthetics was left in the room after she went out.

Sitting beside a couch, on which lay a strong man felled by an accident and made an invalid for months, sat a troubled woman. She had been deprived of her sleep, and by anxiety and nervous strain she felt upon the verge of collapse. A called entered, a woman whose face was like the dawn of a beautiful day, albeit the woman had almost reached the half century mark in life's journey.

She had known sorrow and felt the need of money; she had seen the grave shut away a worshipped face, but she had grown stronger, and more courageous, and more trustful with each year of her life; and strength, and courage, and trust, and hope, all breathed from her presence.

Even passing along the street, or entering a shop, she radiated a SOMETHING which people felt without hearing her speak. It was the fragrance of her soul.

She came into the room where sat the discouraged friend and the sick man. She chatted a half hour with them on various topics; after she went away, indeed, her friend tried to recall just what she said without remembering any special topic. But, nevertheless, the whole world seemed changed to the tired woman and the sick man. The invalid was laughing over some bright bit of nonsense, some amusing story the lady had told. And the good cheer, the optimism, the sweetness and the good will which were in the caller's heart and mind filled the room all day long, and drove out discouragement, and gloom, and nervousness.

Sympathy is a word much used, and much misused, and greatly misunderstood.

Perhaps you think yourself a sympathetic person. And because you so think yourself you enter the home of your friend who is in trouble, and you fall upon her neck and tell her how terrible is her lot, and you wonder how she endures it. And when you go out she feels tenfold more despairing than when you came.

That is not real sympathy. Real sympathy understands and feels for the sorrows of others, but it helps the sorrow-centred mind to look AWAY from its own cross; and it leads it to think of the strength and growth which come through such suffering. When the truly sympathetic friend calls there is always an uplifting influence left behind; the cross seems lighter, the future more hopeful, the way easier.

There are people who possess a powerful magnetism; and when they are with you it is impossible for you to decide just what their influence is.

But always when they go away, always as you sit alone afterward, you may be able to judge of the real influence which your callers exert.

It is left in the mental odor behind them.

Just what kind of fragrance are you leaving?

Just how are you impressing the people with whom you converse? Do you stimulate, exhilarate, encourage, strengthen, amuse and instruct?

Do you leave them with better feelings toward humanity, better ideals of life, greater hope and larger faith?

Or is your influence one which arouses suspicion, destroys faith, undermines ideals, and discourages ambition?

Analyze yourself.

And if you lack the divine ingredients to be a mental tonic and a spiritual elexir, get them from the Universal Storehouse.

They are free to all.

MRS. GLOVER'S LIFE STORY

In Concluding Instalment, Widow Deals with Mystery of Her Husband's Death; Telling What She Knows of the Tragedy.

THE thrilling life story of Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, written exclusively for the Sunday AMERICAN, in today's concluding instalment, treats of the mysterious tragedy in which the life of Clarence F. Glover was snuffed out by the bullet of an assassin. Charged with this crime, Hattie Le Blanc was arrested, tried and acquitted.

Mrs. Glover to-day tells what she knows of the murder. She especially explains why she did not go to the bedside of her dying husband in the hospital.

In the former chapters Mrs. Glover has told of her early life in West Arichat, her trip to Boston when she was a girl of ten; her heroic and successful attempt to learn English and earn money; her acquaintance with and two marriages to Clarence F. Glover, and the entrance of Hattie Le Blanc into her Waltham home. Mrs. Glover declared that Hattie Le Blanc was a girl of amazing strength; that she had often seen her take Clarence Glover up in her arms and [illegible] him about like a child; and he weighed 165 pounds.

In last Sunday's instalment Mrs. Glover told of her husband's last words to her before he went to his fate in the laundry.

"Wait and I will go with you," Mrs. Glover said.

"No," he replied with a smile; "you are always wanting to chase me."

CHAPTER XI.

SHOT IN THE DARK.

Where is the husband of my youth!
Where dwelleth honesty and truth!
Each hour seems eternity,
And life and death—a mystery!

CLARENCE left our house on that fatal Saturday evening about 6.45 o'clock. I should say it was about three-quarters of an hour after this when Hattie left. I do not intend to go into all the details of that awful night. But there are a few features which I wish to discuss.

I spent the evening reading, looking over some accounts and in talking with Mrs. Freeman over the telephone. Then a policeman came to the house and told me that Clarence Glover had been shot. I recall distinctly that I thought the policeman was very small and talked very slowly and deliberately for a man in his position. The policeman told me that my husband had been taken to the hospital, of [illegible]

"Mr. Glover said that Hattie Le Blanc shot him," the policeman told me. "Who is she?"

"She is my [illegible]," I replied.

"Where is she?" asked the policeman. "Aren't you Hattie Le Blanc?"

"I am not Hattie Le Blanc," I answered. "I am Mrs. Glover. I don't know where Hattie is."

I got ready at [illegible] immediately to the hospital. I was so [illegible] I can not recall [illegible] about the trip. I remember that I found myself [illegible] down the street here.

When [illegible] asked at once to see Mr. Glover. [illegible] to the hospital [illegible] has been a great [illegible] as to why I did not see [illegible] that night. I want to explain that and I want to tell the truth and nothing but the truth about it as nearly as I can, taking into consideration the great strain under which I labored that night.

Dr. Cousens went upstairs and he was gone so long that I thought they were going to operate on Clarence. I heard the police tell Dr. Cousens not to let a soul in until they got a statement from him. I could hear Clarence vomiting violently. I knew his voice.

I was in awful agony. I asked again and again to be allowed to see my husband. The doctor took hold of me and put me in a chair. I nearly collapsed. I was told by one of the doctors that they were going to operate on Clarence, and I said that I could not stand the sight of blood. I couldn't look at Hattie Le Blanc, you will remember, I told, when she had the operation on her throat. When any one is bleeding I always have to shut my eyes.

I could tell from the tones of my husband's voice that he was suffering, and I simply could not stand it. I became so hysterical that I took two large bottles of alcohol that were on the table there, one in each hand, and brought them together with a crash. Then some one talked to me about Clarence and myself. We talked about hunting and shooting. It is true. But my mind was in such a condition at that time that I would have talked about anything.

I did not go up to see my husband that night because after being refused at first I became so agitated and weak that it was a physical impossibility for me to go through such an ordeal. The idea that I feared anything that my husband might say to me on his dying bed is absolutely ridiculous.

I don't remember how long I remained in the hospital. It seemed to me as though it were a month. I have been told since that it was about an hour.

Mr. McCarthy accompanied me home from the hospital and remained in the house a little while. I had Mr. McCarthy call up the hospital on the telephone and ask how Clarence was when we got to my house. They said they would let me know of the progress of the case, but that he was very low.

"Whatever takes place," Mr. McCarthy said to the hospital, "please notify Mrs. Glover."

It has been said that a woman called up on the telephone and asked if Clarence [illegible] me in any statement that he had made. I want to say here that no woman called up over my telephone, and, of course, I never asked any questions.

The policeman had told me that Mr. Glover accused Hattie Le Blanc of shooting him. But when I reached the hospital I was told that a Mrs. Hill, with whom we had had some trouble, shot him.

I might say here that I did not believe that Hattie Le Blanc shot my husband. I did not think from what I knew of Hattie that she would do that. It is an awful thing to take a person's life. It takes an awful lot of grit to shoot a person down, and I did not think that Hattie could do it.

I have thought all the incidents of this case over and over thousands and thousands of times, and I recall that Mr. Glover was always promising Hattie a diamond ring and a gold locket and chain.

"I will give you a good locket and chain and a diamond ring," he often said to Hattie, "providing that you will learn to speak English."

I often heard him make the promise. He asked me if I objected to it. I knew that Hattie was awfully fond of jewelry, and I said that I did not object.

"I will not take anything cheap," said Hattie to Clarence. "I want a real gold locket and chain and diamond ring."

But Clarence never kept his word. How this failure of Clarence to make good his promise to Hattie in this respect affected him I do not know.

When the search was being made for Hattie by the police and no trace of her could be found it was my belief that Hattie had thrown herself into the river. The fact that Hattie had disappeared and that Mr. Glover had accused her of shooting him were enough to indicate that the girl was at the laundry at least that night. I believed that in her despair she had killed herself.

On that Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Freeman came to the house to stay with me. I think it was on Monday night when I was lying on the couch in the den and Mr. Freeman was sitting near the door that he jumped up and cried:

"I think I heard a noise in the kitchen."

He peeked around the door of the den and listened. Mrs. Freeman and I had been all through the house. We knew there was no one there. But we were both very nervous. Mrs. Freeman exclaimed one day:

"My God! What would happen to both of us if Hattie should come in? Would she shoot both of us?"

I want to say this with all the emphasis possible: Hattie Le Blanc did not hide in my house for the three days and three nights the police were searching for her. I don't know where she was. But I know that there was a Summer house in the next yard and a neighbor came to me and told me that there was a couch there with pillows and blankets. In fact, it was quite comfortable inside. I do not say that Hattie Le Blanc hid there, but she might have.

I never set eyes on Hattie Le Blanc from the time she left my house on Saturday evening until the following Tuesday evening, when the police were taking her away.

When Hattie was found Mr. and Mrs. Freeman, Mr. Elmore, and myself were in the dining room having some luncheon. It was after my husband's [illegible] Some one spoke up, "I think [illegible]" Mrs. Freeman started to cry [illegible] I went to her and tried to quiet her. I started to go in to the room where she was, but Mr. Elmore said:

"You stay here. You get me a cup of coffee, quick."

I gave him the coffee. At that time the officer had Hattie sitting on the edge of the couch. Her face was awfully dirty. Her hair was matted. Her hands were almost black. I would have gone into the room and would had spoken to her, if I had not been prevented.

I have not spoken to Hattie Le Blanc since. I saw her at her trial and at the various hearings where she and I appeared, of course. She seemed to avoid [illegible] I have heard since her arrest and her trial that she called for me a lot, [illegible] was in jail. Then I heard from another source that she never mentioned my name. I have no means of knowing which is the truth. I am curious to know if she ever asked for me.

I went through a trying time at Hattie Le Blanc's trial. But I made up my mind to see it out, and at night when I [illegible] home after having been on the stand [illegible] day I rested. I braced myself for the ordeal, knowing that if I weakened at such [illegible] I would never pick myself up again. I did not talk to any one about the trial while I was away from the courtroom and tried to keep it out of my mind. [illegible] best of my ability I answered every question at the trial truthfully.

CHAPTER XII.

HOPE FOR THE FUTURE.

How sweet the words that come to cheer
A woman in her days of of sorrow;
They banish hours dark and drear
And form a rainbow for to-morrow.

IT has been insinuated and even charged from some quarters that I had a motive for killing Clarence Glover, and that I did kill him. It is a base lie. I neither shot him nor had any reason to shoot him. I don't know who did shoot him. I only know that with his dying lips Clarence Glover said over and over again:

"Hattie Le Blanc shot me."

Why, I never knew that Clarence Glover had made a will until three weeks before his death, and all this talk about me forcing him to make a will is poppycock. I remember very well the day he told me about the will. He had taken the auto out of the garage.

"Say, Lil," he said, "I want you to go into Elmore's and make a will. No one should neglect to make a will who has any property."

"What's the use?" I retorted. "What does a will amount to? Any one can break a will."

"You go into Elmore's and make a will," he said, "and then when you let me see your will I will let you see mine."

We went into Boston and on the way we laughed and joked about our wills.

This is all I care to say about my property. Since my husband was shot I have had a great deal of trouble. But I have no fear for the future.

I have been asked [illegible] contemplate getting [illegible] I have received [illegible] proposals of marriage from among a thousand strangers who have written to me. But I would not get married under any consideration. I have had enough of that.

I propose to live the rest of my life, if I can, as near to nature as possible, mingling with dumb animals and doing charity work. I am going to build a marble watering trough where all dumb animals can drink in the street near my home in Waltham. I am going to build it in memory of Clarence Glover.

At the present time I am giving a musical education to a girl of sixteen. She is a violinist and has played since she was five years old. I intend to send her abroad to study under the best masters if everything goes well.

I am going to live here in Waltham and devote a good deal of my time to raising chickens. I love chickens and I have been very successful with them. I want to do as much good as posible during the rest of my life.

I have received a number of very beautiful letters from people throughout the country who sympathize with me in the awful trouble through which I passed. I answered each of the letters personally and thanked the writer. I take this method again of thanking those who have said a kind word to me. I have taken the liberty here of making a few extracts from from the letters that I received, keeping the identity of the writer, of course, a secret.

The following is from a letter I received within two months from a girl in West Arichat whom I have been helping.

I received your kind and welcome letter last Wednesday and I was glad to hear from you. I am in good halth so far, thank God. I wish you the same.

You ask me if I am going to get married this Winter. No, I am not going to get married this Winter, not before next Fall. I was to get married this Winter, but my fellow's brother died. I am twenty years old and my fellow is twenty-two.

I sold the pair of shoes you gave me to a girl that you have seen since. And you saw the shoes on her feet. You say in your letter that I never told you about it. I sold the shoes because they were too small for me.

I cannot forget you; you have been so good to me. I hope to see you soon. Mr. and Mrs. Dorin send you their best compliments.

This letter was written to me from Dorchester by a prominent man.

You indeed have many friends of whom you know naught for in this community are many who stand by any woman who has goodness within her. Your record in your early struggles prove that you were a good, brave and brilliant woman.

Circumstances connected you with Mr. Glover in your early life, and you gave him the best there was in you. But he did not appreciate this. This course was one that might have driven you away from him in place of protecting the home and backing you up in your brilliant business career, but he had but one thought and one motive in life.

Sincerely I hope that the Washington doctor may prove to be your guardian angel, for you do have need of some one strong and good who can see in you what I believe exists—all the elements of a good, true woman.

A Maiden woman wrote in part as follows:

My dear Mrs. Glover:

Words fail me at this time to express the sympathy I feel for you in this your sad bereavement.

I will come and see you soon. May God give you the strength and courage you need. With much love and most heartfelt sympathy, I am,

Your sincere friend.

This letter came from a woman stranger [illegible]

I have studied your photograph in the papers so often that really I can see you now. I want to tell you how sorry I am for you and also to assure you that you have many more friends even though we all remain silent. It is one consolation to know that God is above all, and surely he will not fail you now.

A young woman writing from Brockton in the course of her letter said:

Pardon the liberty I take in thus addressing you, but I have felt so much sympathy for you during your trying ordeal, but I was not sure my letter would reach you. Believe me, I am writing [illegible] but it is through kindness to you, a much abused and maligned woman.

If you can and will come to Brockton to see me. The change for a day would at least take your thoughts from the scene of your trouble.

A prominent physician, writing from Long Island City, said in the course of a letter:

I must write you and express my admiration for you and your conduct in the trying ordeal you have undergone. I am a stranger it is true. But my heart goes out to such a brave little woman as you. I wish that you were a relation of mine so that I might protect you against such vile insinuations and scandalous tales as you have had to face. Bear up, dear madam, and please remember that should you at any time come to New York to live, as I hope you will, that I will be most happy to be of assistance to you. It is true that I am a crusty old bachelor. But such is my nature or misfortune.

A Boston woman wrote in part as follows:

My dear Mrs. Glover:

I tried to speak to you over the phone but couldn't. I wish to let you know how deeply I sympathize with you. Every one I have heard discuss the case admires your courage. If there is the slightest thing I can do for you, command me. How I pity you!

Here I shall stop my life story. It has been a life of hard work and strong endeavor to get along. It is a world full [illegible] my plan has been always [illegible]

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued)

WE held him there like that till night. Tommy seemed to like us being there with him. His poor voice was so hoarse he couldn't speak, but once he said: "Mr. Kirk is all right—he's all right."

I don't know who came or went—there may have been twenty people—I don't remember. I only felt the thin body that lay against me like a feather stirred by a dying breath. Down at the foot of the bed was his paint-box and pad.

Mr. Kirkland said to me, "He was trying to paint you a picture of Mohawk"; and I said, 'Don't!'"

Tommy tried to say something—I couldn't make it out. Then he began to talk very fast and very low, as he were hurrying.

"He says something about a view," Mr. Kirkland whispered, "and 'hurrying to the top'."

I knew he was thinking of Pine Hill and he was climbing—climbing. I held my brother on my breast, and he said, "Higher—higher," and looked at me to help him, and I said to Mr Kirkland, "He thinks he's climbing—lift him a little."

And, as though our arms lifting him brought him to the height, Tommy smiled as if he saw some lovely country, and the light never left his face when we laid him back on the pillow.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Proposal.

ABOUT a week after Tommy died Mr Kirkland was sitting on our porch, and all of a sudden he leaned forward in his chair and said to me:

"Well, what are you going to do about it, Esther?"

I asked him what he meant.

He said, "What are you going to do with me?"

He knocked his cigarette ashes off on the chair-arm, where my name had come out written across his band. I think I must have said, "There isn't anything for me to do, is there?" for he exclaimed, "Well, then, the whole thing is to go to pot, is it?" And he stared at me like a lion, then laughed in his old way. "I supose you have heard some lively stories about me?"

I said I had heard a few.

"You don't know half the truth of them, my dear girl, but I shall tell them all to you," and, smiling and frowning together, and smoking like a chimney, right then and there he told me his life. Like Tommy his mother had died when he was little, and he had brought himself up with plenty of money to ruin him. "Until last year," he said, "I hadn't been to sleep sober for a century." He repeated the words "until last year" very solemnly. "There isn't a pleasure that I envied that I didn't take, but since I came out here this Fall I haven't touched a drop of liquor or looked at a woman or at a game of cards. Do you know why?"

I said that I did not.

"By Jove," he cried, "I don't believe you do! Simple, modest, unselfish creature that you are, I don't believe you dream what your power is. Why, it's for you, my dear girl—for your sake. There's not a woman I have ever seen that could keep me sober for a week. But I've kept straight for eight months so that I could ask you—I mean so that I could tell you—I ask you nothing—nothing—but I tell you——." He looked at me quietly for a few moments and smoked. Then he sat for a long time, his cigarette between his fingers. When it went out he let it fall on the piazza. He patted the chair-arm. "Your name here, on this bit of wood, spread itself across my palm. There isn't a bit of me that your name isn't written upon." Then he said slowly: "You look like the Madonna of the Consolation; you look as though you understood. Esther, you look as though you were going to——" He held out his hand to me, and I gave him mine. "Esther, Esther," he whispered, "do you mean that you will see me through?"

It was hard for me to speak. But I told him that I would if he needed me.

I didn't say anything about this to a soul. Anyway, there were only the little boys and Fanny, and she didn't like Mr Kirkland. Of course, he was entirely dependent on his uncle, and he decided to wait for a while until he had made himself indispensable to Senator Bellars before he told him about his plans. Neither of us called it an engagement. He had such queer names for everything that an "engagement" would have sounded commonplace. Nothing changed in any way; he just came and sat and talked and talked and sent books and candy.

Was Writing a Drama

He was writing what he called a "prose drama," and he used to read it to me, smoking and waving his long, brown hands. He said there were "great lines" in it, and it had "the elements of a masterpiece." He said, too, that he "couldn't combine politics with art," and spoke of things as national disasters, and he thought there were a great many wrongs in Washington, and he used to rave against them in the parlor to Fanny and me—she never stayed long, though. She saw her callers in the dining room. We could hear them giggle.

One night Mr. Kirkland said to me: "That sound is like the trickling of a fountain in a silver basin"; and I said: "It sounds just too silly for any use to me. I should think Fan would have more sense"; and he answered: "My dear girl, you wouldn't spoil a perfect creation, would you? Fanny is perfection."

And I couldn't help thinking that perhaps Fanny was the kind of woman his uncle had raved about.

Over and over again he used to say, when we were talking of Washington and of what he was doing:

"Oh, if I were only a man—only a man."

And when I told him "You seem an awfully strong one to me," with a real pleased look he exclaimed:

"That is nice of you! Do I really seem so? Well, you couldn't have pleased me better than by saying it to me. It is a medal of honor—the first, but I am really only an idealist, and Brackettsville is a singular place for me to drift into."

He asked me a great many questions, but I never asked him any. I just let him talk, and by and by I gave up saying "What do you mean?" when I didn't understand, for it seemed to disappoint him, and I discovered if I waited long enough I found out without. He told me I was an excellent audience.

I tried to take up sewing because he strayed so late; I was stupid at it, for I didn't even know how to hem, but he didn't want me to sew steadily, anyhow. He said he required my "undivided attention." "Sit with your hands folded and look divine, Esther." So I had to sit idle in the mahogany rocker and let him talk or read.

My business went along all right. Mr Falsworth had moved his offices out of the building and had gone out West, and Minnie went to Europe. Senator Bellars went to Washington, and the Summer after Tommy died things just drifted along.

WHITE-ROBED ARMY OF JUNE BRIDES GATHERING FOR NUPTIAL PAGEANT

Boston Society Awaits Series of Weddings That Will Deplete Ranks of Spinsterhood of Many Charming Girls Who Have Become Popular in Circles Since They Made Their First Bows in Social World

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

MAKE way for the brides'

Gently as June roses will unfold to greet them they begin to group themselves on the stage for the great June pageant of weddings. The coming weeks are theirs by divine right. In the swirl of white glory that the advancing procession makes we begin to single them out. There is the timid, hesitant bride, who, like the rose itself, blushes without a crime. We all love her, and to this distinguished class belongs the dainty Ruth Lawrence, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. William Lawrence, and foremost among the brides of the year. Pretty Margaret De Ford belongs in the same class.

Then there is the regal, Junoesque bride, commanding our highest admiration, and of this class charming Caroline Gay is a striking example, as is also dashing Sally Pierce

There is also the wondrously winsome "thistle-down" bit of a bride. She fascinates us quite completely. There are fewer of her number, therefore she attracts more admiring attention. Of these there is Elizabeth F. Nash, who sailed across the sea to plight her troth, thus depriving Boston of an interesting matrimonial event, and an even more interesting bride. Then, too, there is the dainty Caroline Sturgis.

SWEET CHARITY AT WEDDING.

The open-air bride—she who has been the athletic girl, winning honors galore for herself on the tennis court, the golf links and at the horse shows,—is wholesome as a snow-apple and with a breezy personality fragrantly suggestive of a sprig of apple-blossoms themselves. To this class belong Marie Leslie Hastings, Susan Fellowes Davis, Madeline Brewer and a score of others. Oh, they are all lovely—discerning bridegrooms discovered that some time ago.

And now anent the weddings—who is it that are throwing up their hands at the waste of fashionable Boston weddings?

Do the fashionable weddings represent waste alone? In Boston the sick and poor of the city received thousands of bouquets from the city's social functions, the delicate orchids, violets and various other blooms carrying their sweet messages to the dingy tenement sick rooms and the hospital wards. In Boston the brides as well as the debutantes always send the great array of flowers bestowed on them by admiring friends to the hospital. Most of these young women have their pet charities and the day of the wedding or the morning after the coming-out party the plants and the cut flowers are all handed into a wagon or the family automobile and sent off to the sick children or mothers in some far corner of the city. Thus the flowers have travelled a four-cornered route of pleasure. The florist has profited financially, the giver has found pleasure in sending them, the bride or debutante in receiving them and the grand climax comes in the joy they carry to the sick or poor.

Gardner-Davis Wedding.

All arrangements are completed for the marriage of Miss Susan Fellowes Davis and James Edward Gardner, Jr., which takes place June 1 in the First Unitarian Church at Milton. The ceremony is to take place at 4.15 o'clock and will be performed by the Rev. James DeNormandie of the First Church, Roxbury, on account of the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Roderick Stebbins, in Europe. The bride is to be attended by two maids of honor, a decided novelty, as one maid of honor has always been the custom. They will be Miss Mary Prince Gardner and Miss Pauline Lambert Davis, sisters of the bride and groom respectively, who came out the same year and have been the best of chums. The attractive group of bridesmaids will be made up of the Misses Martha Peabody, Ruth Wigglesworth, Charlotte Fellowes Harding and Rachel Brewer of Milton, Gertrude Sturgis of Boston and Annie Tinker of New York.

John Norris Thorne of New York, a Harvard classmate '08, will be best man, and the ushers chosen are Nathaniel Fellowes and J. Winthrop Davis, brothers of the bride; Richard Eustis and Henry Durant of Cambridge, Augustus P. Loring, Jr., a classmate, who is himself to become a benedict on the 22d, and John Marsh of New York, all of them Harvard men.

The reception will follow at the Davis home, "Curmathan," in East Milton. The young people will make their future home in Duluth, Minn.

Rivers-Channing.

Another interesting marriage to be celebrated the coming month will be that of Miss Bessie Channing, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Brookline, to Robert Wheaton Rivers of Milton, to be celebrated at the country home of the Channings, Charlesvale Farm, Sherborne, the last week of the month. It will be one of the largest al-fresco affairs of the early Summer. The ceremony will be witnessed by only a few of the closer friends and relatives, but hundreds of invitations have been issued for the reception. Miss Channing is a decidedly interesting bit of femininity and will doubtless make the loveliest of brides. Her wedding will be the third matrimonial event in the family, her brother, Henry Morse Channing, having married Katherine Minot, and another brother, Walter Channing, Jr., marrying Cornelia Higbee of Marlboro street.

The Rev. Samuel Smith Drury, who at Easter time married Carmelia Wolcott and who is abroad on his honeymoon, is to return in time to officiate at the marriage of Miss Sallie Pierce and Dr. James Huntington, which is to take place in the First Parish Church, Brookline, June 3.

Dr. Huntington, who is a son of Mrs. George P. Huntington and a grandson of the late Bishop Huntington, was one of the ushers at the wedding of Mr. Drury and Miss Wolcott.

Miss Pierce is one of the four handsome daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce. She, like so many of our other brides, has decided to have no attendants

Frederick Dana Huntington, Harvard '12, is to be best man, and the ushers will be Dr. Vincent, with whom Dr. Huntington makes his home in Beacon street; Dr. Arthur Ruggles, Dr. Charles Day, Dr. Robert Green, Dr. Henry James and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, Richard Hale and Robert Barbour, Owing to the illness of Mrs. Pierce there will be no reception. Dr. and Mrs. Huntington will make their future home in Marlboro street.

An important wedding on June 15 will be that of Miss Caroline Sturgis, one of the prettiest of the past Winter's debutantes, and Theodore Scudder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Scudder of Cambridge. Miss Sturgis is the daughter of Mrs. Russell Sturgis of Fairfield street, and will be the second of the Winter's buds to don bridal attire. Mr. Scudder graduates from Harvard in June, after which they will make their home in New York

Evans-Allen.

Another June bride will be Miss Rosamond Allen, daughter of Mrs. Roger N. Allen, and a well known member of the Vincent Club, whose engagement to Dr. Evans of Montreal shortly after her return from Egypt was announced. The honeymoon will be spent abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hastings have issued cards for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marie Hastings, to Wallace Gardner Page, on Saturday afternoon, June 3, at 4 o'clock, in St. James's Church, Roxbury. Mr. Hastings, who is well known among the younger club men, is a son of Mrs. William F. Page of Brookline. He has chosen his brother, Lawrence B. Page, for his best man. The bride will have her sister, Miss Ruth Hastings, for her maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Elsie and Miss Katherine Page, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Katherine Cobb and Miss Amy Mayo of Jamaica Plain The ushers will be A. Abbott Hastings, brother of the bride, and Edward F. Rice of Jamaica Plain, R. T. Harrison of New York and John S. E. Wheeler and John Nightingale of Boston. A reception at the Hastings home will immediately follow the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Page will make their home in Brookline.

Brooks-Cobb.

For the wedding on June 3 of Miss Florence Cobb and Walter Denison Brooks, which is to take place at the First Church in Milton on Saturday afternoon, June 3, at 2 o'clock, Miss Madeline Brewer, one of the Winter's debutantes, has been chosen as maid of honor. The ceremony is to be performed by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association. The bride, who is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chandler Cobb of Milton Hill, will have for her bridesmaids her sisters, Miss Beatrice Cobb, who was a bud of the past Winter, and Miss Hildegarde Cobb, who is still a school girl, Miss Catherine Foster of Charles River Village, Miss Frances Clark of Pennsylvania, Miss Jessie Bishop of Chicago, Miss Elisabeth Brooks is to be the flower girl.

The bridegroom, who is a Harvard '02 man and a member of the Puritan and Norfolk Hunt clubs, will have for his best man Philip Wingate Thorndike, while his ushers will be Augustus and Stanley Cobb, brothers of the bride-elect; H. Gardner Perry, now of New York, Francis Colby of Boston, J. Arthur Brooks and Ralph W. Page of Eagle Springs, N. C. A reception at the Cobb home will follow the ceremony.

Mason-Gay.

Final arrangements have been made for the wedding of Miss Caroline Gay and Albert Gardner Mason, which is also to take place on June 3. The ceremony will be at the Lee First Parish Church in Cohasset and will be performed by the Rev. Charles E. Park, pastor of the First Church, Boston. A breakfast at the Summer home of the bride's parents will follow the ceremony.

Miss Marion Gay will be her sister's maid of honor and Robert Mason of Worcester will be his brother's best man. The ushers chosen are Charles L. Harding of Dedham, Edgar H. Graham and Nathaniel W. Aye of Boston, Samuel W. Lewis of Brookline, Charles Hamilton of Worcester and Charles H. Schweppe of Chicago.

Another important at fresco event of June will be the wedding of Miss Rosamond Bowditch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bowditch of Bay State road, to Augustus P. Loring, Jr., of Marlboro street. The wedding will take place at "Moss Bank," the family country home in Jamaica Plain.

SOCIETY TEA FOR INFANTS' HOSPITAL

Directors Will Hold Reception Wednesday in Harvard Medical School Building.

Despite the fact that society is now scattered here and there, enough of the fashionable folk left in town to keep the social ball rolling at a merry rate and pave the way for this late in the season society events crowd the calendar

An important event of the coming week will be the reception and tea to be given by the directors of the Infants' Hospital Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The affair will take place in the Administration Building of the Harvard Medical School.

President Lowell of Harvard is to preside, and addresses are to be made by Dr. Isaac Bishop Lawrence and Dr. Joseph Collins Warren

Among the patronesses for the affair are Mrs. Elsie R. Draper, Mrs. William Endicott, Miss Mary E. Adams, Mrs. John C. Gray, Mrs. S. Parker Brewer, Mrs. Lara Anderson, Mrs. William Lawrence, Mrs. Charles W. Eliot, Mrs. George H. Lyman, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Mrs. J. Collins Warren, Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Mrs. Thomas Morgan Rotch, Mrs. Rhett D. Jordan, Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, Mrs. Charles T. Lovering, Mrs. John L. Saltonstall, Mrs. William D. Sohier, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, Mrs. C. K. Thayer, Mrs. John Lowell, Mrs. Henry Parkman, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. Nathan Matthews, Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson, Mrs. Francis B. Higginson, Jr., and Mrs. Charles A. Ashley

Of interest to all the fashionable Back Bay set, especially those who have children attending Miss Chamberlayne's private school, will be the closing exercises there on May 31 at 11:30 o'clock. The Rev. Charles Reynolds Brown, dean elect of the Yale Divinity School, will deliver the address

A decidedly brilliant event in yachting circles this Summer will be the dedication of the Cohasset Harbor by the Colonial Yacht Club, when all sorts of water sports will be in order

All the dog lovers in the smart set—and there are many—are looking forward with much pleasure to the New England dog show of the Ladies' Kennel Club at Chestnut Hill on June 1. Among the exhibitors will be Mrs. Arnold Hague, Mrs. Edward C. Clark, Mrs. Ross Blaine Stanwood and numerous others. Among those offering premiums are Miss Dorothy Forbes, George Lauder, Jr., and Miss M. F. Sturgis.

On May 31 the American Fox Terrier Club of America will hold its exhibition at the Country Club in Brookline, and on the same day and at the same place the Irish Terrier Club of America will hold its show.

On Tuesday afternoon Miss Alice M. Longfellow is to receive the Circolo Italiano, to which so many of our prominent society folk belong. The reception will be held in Craigie House in the afternoon. The conductor of Cadman Williams Rooker Thayer will be followed by a conversazione

The Enchantress, owned by Seward W. Mott, has been entered in the Bermuda ocean race for auxiliaries. The Enchantress has been cruising in Bermudan and West Indian waters and is now at Nassau. It is She will sail from Boston in the Bermuda race on June 1.

Homes of Many Boston Society Leaders Already Closed for the Season, While Owners Are Flocking to Summer Residences in the Country, Shore or Mountains as Vanguard of Hot Weather Hegira

As society flits gaily about from one point of interest to another, the fashionable world at home is left rather dull, preparations for the Summer looking up most of their time. Although Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears and her daughter, Miss Helen Sears, have not given as extensively as usual here the past season, have closed their Arlington Street house and have gone for the early Summer to their country place in Southboro. They are planning to take a short trip abroad late in the season, returning in time for the initial gayeties of the Winter in town

Word from Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, who with their two daughters sailed a week ago for Liverpool on board the Lusitania, and where they are planning to remain until after the coronation. They will not return to Boston until July, when they will go direct to their beautiful North Shore villa

Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth, one of the most enthusiastic sportswomen in society has gone to Beverly and will go from there to Alaska to hunt and a lot of big game. Mr. Wadsworth, who is also in Washington, formerly lived on Beacon street, and still keeps his membership in all the Boston clubs

Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich and Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich who are already at their country place, Redman Farm, at Ponkapoag will remain there only until the middle of June when they will go to "The Crags," Pernant Harbor, Maine

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Bigelow have closed their town house for the season and are at their country estate, "The Ridges," at Cohasset. The Bigelow dogs owned also opened their country home on Jerusalem road.

On May 30th Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Coffin of Longwood and their two daughters, Miss Miriam and Miss Mary, are to sail for Europe. They will spend June in London and will later on go to an English country place in host to remain until November.

Countess Moltke will come over from her home in Washington to her late father's country estate in Lancaster early in June, where Mrs. Thayer and Miss Sally Thayer are already domiciled for the season

Miss May Loring, one of the most expert skippers on the North Shore, has a new yacht boat which she is to sail the coming Summer. Miss Loring with her parents is already at the family estate on the North Shore.

Mrs. William L. Jackson and Miss Margaret Talbot Jackson, who have been spending the Winter in Rome have just been heard from in Paris. They will return to Boston the latter part of the month

The engagement is announced of Miss Elinora Richter, daughter of Mrs. Emma Richter of Portsmouth, N. H., and Lieutenant Arthur Hopkins Rice, U. S. N., attached to the Naval Training Station at Newport. Lieutenant Rice is expecting orders for duty at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. The wedding will be an event of the coming Autumn in Portsmouth.

The bench show committee for the New port Dog Show to be held at Newport August 12 includes Miss Alice Brownell, Mrs. Benjamin Wenner, Daniel Jackson, William Cudman, Charles Hiesel and Miss Anny Sands. Reginald C. Vanderbilt will be invited to serve on this committee

An engagement in anticipation is that of Francis Rooke, son of Dr. and Mrs. Burke Rooke, and Miss Doris Webb. Miss Webb is regarded as the beautiful daughter of a far more beautiful mother

The Edward Cunningames, who are at present in Westwood, are planning to sail for Europe in a few weeks. They will pass several months at Aix-les-Bains.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Hodges of Brookline are to spend the Summer at West Manchester, where they have taken the Dennis cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Bosworth and Miss Sabella Bosworth, the Bay State road sailed yesterday on the Canopic for Italy. They will remain abroad until September

Mr. and Mrs. J. Livingston Grandin, Jr., of Bay State Road have taken the Walter Lodge cottage on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, for the Summer.

T. E. Byrnes, vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, with his family, is at their Summer place, Briar Hill Farm, Cohasset

Miss Gladys Olmstead of Ivy street is to sail for Europe on June 3d and will spend the entire Summer in foreign travel.

It Is Possible to Reduce Flesh Without Dieting or Exercise

It is not only possible but being done everywhere. Exercise, unless carefully superintended by a physician and expert Athletic Director, may easily do a deal of harm to the great overburdened fleshy body. The unnatural fat man and woman determined to get thin are only too likely to overexertion their fat clogged muscles by their awkward, ill-advised gymnastics, and so cause nerve and muscle troubles that may develop into something far worse than a bulge too much flesh. Some way with dieting. Starvation is certainly effective if kept up long and faithfully enough, but it is almost impossible to injure the nutritive process and so waste the patient's body, even if it is abominably fat, of course, especially if a part of the dieting fiend must do some work. Nobody can long exist on a starvation diet of fats. The process of reducing and storage of the ingredients of which are contained in any fat or flesh food. The physique is as follows: Take of Marmola 1½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic ½ oz. Peppermint Water, and tea proper amount to take to make teaspoonful after meals and retiring. This mixture takes the fat off rapidly and naturally so that the wrinkles are not left behind, as is the case with "Physical Culture" or "secret" advertised remedies.

"Billy Bullfrog's" Gayest Time of All When He Startles Little Guests.

PETER PAN and Mrs. Peter Pan, and all the grown-up folk who believe in fairies—you would be surprised to know how many of us there are have made a special mark on the calendar, to be sure to take notice of Saturday, the third of June, and the festival of the good people, in Mechanics building. There was one Boston man last year, who forgot to make a special note of it—imagine!—and the first thing he knew he read about it in his Sunday paper—woof!—and he hasn't been fit to live with all the year. He's improving some, now.

Some people call it the annual May festival—this will be the 23rd—and some call it "Mrs. Butler's party"—which is a very pretty name for it, because Mrs. W. S. Butler continues to be the patroness. After all however, it is just a day in Fairyland no matter what one calls it. There will be a production at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and another at 8 in the evening. Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman, as usual, is the very successful director of dancing.

Somebody who peeped in at a fairy rehearsal, the other day, came down town and tried to tell the reporters about it. There were so many "O's!" and "Ah's!" and "Ooh's!" in the telling that it was quite like watching the fireworks of a July night from a canoe on the river.

Fun for "Billy Bullfrog."

So far as could be made out, the busiest time of all seems likely to be had by Leland Benham. Leland is going to be "Billy Bullfrog," and he will dart right out into the garden and scare the pretty little pansies blue!

This will be at "Betty Marigold's Party." Fifty little girls, in the very loveliest of costumes, will represent hollyhocks, and roses, and morning glories, and pansies, and bachelor buttons, and four o'clocks, and sweet peas, and golden rods, and oh, everything!

Just when morning breaks, in the beautiful garden, "Daffodil" appears. She comes to awaken the flowers. Little Pauline Mason, who knows exactly how it is done because she has only been here four years, will impersonate "Daffodil." The lovely roses, eight in number, dance before her in pink and crimson and strawberry robes. The Morning Glories troop out in all their shades of blue, while "Alice Hollyhock" (Jane Poppers) bears the greetings of her sisters.

In the background you see the passing of the forget-me-nots, quickly followed by the pansies with Topsy Talsy[illegible] clad in pink, and the four o'clocks, in blue. They say Doris Steward makes a charming Bela Bachelor Button."

Eva Francis will take the part of "Daddy Dandelion," a lame boy, who, visited by the sprites, throws away his crutches and dances just as good as new. Polly Primrose and Goldie Goldenrod and all the other flowers rejoice with him when 'ooh' out jumps "Billy Bullfrog (that's only Leland Benham, you know) and scares the pansies, booh!

James Kennedy will be Peter Pumpkin. Joe Knox will represent Reuben Cauliflower. William Knox will be a blushing Reddy Radish.

You know enough, now, so that you will not want to miss the May festival, and be grumpy all the year like a certain Party but there is lots more. Lots and lots and lots!

A Russian dance, nothing less than the mazurka, will be led by Virginia Tanner, Inez Spencer, Amelia Burnham, Leroy Young, Clayton Robinson and Wilfred Baxter.

Indian Dance and Irish Lilt.

A pantomime, all the way from la belle France, will be danced by any number of young folk. Katherine MacDonald is down to be the first nymph. There are solo parts for Stella Best, Dorris Stewart, Pauline Mason, Clayton Robinson and Frances MacDonnell.

Mary Murphy's contribution will be an Indian dance. Theresa Weiscopf will show us what an Irish lilt should be. Margaret McDonough's number is the valse caprice. Clarissa Weiscopf and Lillian Brown dance together in a Spanish farruca. Then we come back to the present, when Caroline Brine, assisted by Charles Williams, mimics Bessie McCoy's "Teddy Bear" dance.

The festival has always reminded us that Spring is well settled and Summer near at hand. It will open this year with an introductory piece called the June revel. Forty of the little tots, wee mites, from three to five years old, take part in the revel, the cherry color of their costumes spreading all around the Spring-like tints of the season.

An Elderly Dancer of 12.

Immediately follows a dance number from the navy, the dancers including elderly people of from twelve to seventeen. The midshipmen wear "Middy" costumes of cream colored silk, the ladies—there will be eighty girls in this number—wearing plaited skirts with "Middy" blouses. The applause is likely to be loudest when the dancers come together in the form of a great cross, Jack Tars forming the outline. Now, trooping in from the background, come thirty other girls in varicolored dresses, carrying hornpipe stems and encircling the other group. In the centre of the picture Miss Stella Best, twelve years old, will dance the hornpipe that sailors know.

They do say, in our town, that James Russell Lowell must have come from something very like this annual festival of the children when he wrote "for what is so rare as a day in June?" In any event, you believe in fairies, and of course you have marked the third of June on your calendar.

SOCIETY TURNS TOWARD SEASHORE

GLOUCESTER.

A social event of importance was the presentation of "Alice in Wonderland," which was given at Bradford Hall on Friday evening under the direction of four Vassar students, Misses Marion Babson, Alice Garland, Florence Cunningham and Mary Cunningham. The proceeds will be devoted for the aid of the Vassar College maids industrial and social club house.

The Hawthorne Inn, Harbor View and Delphine, are among the first of the Summer hostleries at East Gloucester to open. Quite an advance booking of June guests have been made and a busy season and full houses are anticipated.

Dr. Thomas Boyle and William Searle of Boston have arrived at the Flags on Haven avenue for the season.

SOUTH BOSTON.

The Bay View baseball team will hold its annual dance in Bethesda Hall next Friday evening. Jud Logan, their manager, has been untiring in his efforts to make this year's event eclipse all past efforts of the association.

Dr William J. Sheehan of South Boston will spend two weeks in New York and Atlantic City, starting June 10. Dr. Sheehan has been prominently connected with the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club for many years.

Dr. Charles F. Painter, surgeon-in-chief of the Orthopedic department of the Carney Hospital, is spending a two weeks' vacation visiting friends in Cincinnati.

The T[illegible] Associates will open their cottage at Hough's Neck, May 30. President William M. Cole assures the members and guests that it will be a gala event.

Miss Rose Riley of the Bay View section has recovered from an illness which kept her confined to her home for several weeks.

Miss Katherine Noonan of East Second street will start this week on a two weeks' trip to New York and Washington.

Health and Beauty Queries

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Mrs. Cora F.: Even though your husband objects so strongly to your using face powder, it is your duty to look as youthful and charming as possible; try this lotion, and although it will beautify your face much better than powder, he can never detect any evidence of a powdered look. Get four ounces of spurmax at any drug store; dissolve it in one half [illegible], then add two teaspoonfuls [illegible]. Apply this lotion to your face [illegible] and arms, rubbing gently until dry [illegible] most wholesome, natural, charming tone to your skin. It will whiten and clear your complexion and take away that sallow, sallow look. I find [illegible] for removing freckles and skin [illegible], it also affords the skin splendid [illegible] against the sun and wind, and [illegible] rub off easily like powder does when you wear a veil.

Daisy L.: Scanty, thin, short hair can be fluffed up and made to appear abundant without the aid of false hair. Try shampooing your hair with a teaspoonful of canthrox d[illegible] in a cup of hot water, rinsing [illegible] clear water. This shampoo [illegible] rich, creamy lather that cleanses the hair and scalp as no other shampoo will. It makes the hair beautifully lustrous, soft and fluffy. It dries very quickly, and after using it you will find your hair easy to do up and will stay in place without the aid of a net or veil, and look nice much longer than ever before. You will no longer be bothered with dandruff and itching scalp. You can get a canthrox shampoo at any first-class hairdresser's or buy the canthrox at your druggist's and do your own shampooing. Never shampoo with soap. The alkali streaks, bleaches and eats the very life out of the hair, making it dull and lifeless.

S. M.: To purify the blood, tone up the system, sharpen the appetite and get new life and strength, there is nothing like taking a good tonic. If you will go to any drug store and get one-half pint alcohol and one ounce kardene and mix them together, then add one-half cup sugar and boiling water to make a full quart, you will have one of the best tonics known to medical science. It is inexpensive, and by taking a tablespoon before each meal you will soon get rid of your pimples and liver blotches and your sallow skin will take on the tint of perfect health. This excellent tool has a most beneficial effect upon the complexion and will brace you up from that "played out" feeling.

Nancy. Don't worry even if your eyes do seem to be weaker and losing their color. You can easily make them strong and just as clear, bright, sparkling and full of color as ever by putting in each eye twice daily a few drops of a simple tonic made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of cold water. This tonic is very strengthening and soothing to tired, weak, inflamed eyes, and you will find by using it regularly you will never have cause to complain of not having beautiful, charming eyes.

Irene. Unless you want your face covered with unsightly hairs, you had better stop using those greasy creams at once. If you want a good, dependable, greaseless complexion beautifier, make it yourself as follows. Stir together two teaspoonfuls glycerine, one ounce almozoin and one-half pint cold water. Let stand a few hours before using. You will find this fine for massaging, as it removes thoroughly all pore dirt. There is nothing like it for removing and preventing blackheads, wrinkles, skin roughness and enlarged pores. This cream jelly will make your skin clear, smooth, fresh-looking and plump. As a complexion beautifier, you will want nothing better.

"Worried" (and others): Yes, I am glad to repeat the flesh-reducing formula which has given such splendid results in relieving so many of their burdensome fat. Get four ounces of parnotis at any drug store; dissolve it in one and one-half pints hot water and when cool strain out the sediment and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy is harmless and cuts down fat rapidly without the inconveniences of dieting and exercising. It has accomplished excellent results where other remedies failed.

Ada (also Eva): I am glad to repeat the formula of that wonderful remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Mix together one-half pint alcohol, one-half pint cold water and one ounce quinzoin. This tonic is noted for its remarkable hair-growing properties as well as for stopping falling hair and destroying dandruff. I have known many people that were practically bald, who by using this tonic regularly twice a week on their scalps soon had as luxuriant and fine hair as any one could desire. It checks scalp irritation instantly and makes the hair glossy, fluffy and free from stickiness. Many high-class hair dressers and barbers use this tonic exclusively and with excellent results.

Miss Prim. It is an easy matter to restore the youthful blonde tint and lustre to your hair if you first shampoo thoroughly and dry the hair, then wash in marlox tea, rinse and dry again. To prepare the tea, get an ounce of marlox from the druggist and steep in a pint of water and strain before using.

Maude. The troublesome hairs of which you speak can be quickly removed by applying plain delatone. Get an ounce of delatone from your druggist and with a little mix some water to form a paste. Spread on hairy surface and in two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin. You will have to pay a dollar an ounce for delatone, but it is worth it, as it rarely requires the second application.

SOCIETIES AND CLUBS

THE annual meeting of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs will begin in New Bedford on Wednesday.

Members of the Woman's Club of that city have made plans to provide a pleasant visit there for all delegates. The opening feature is to be an organ recital in the Rogers Memorial Church, one of the most beautiful structures in the country and which is located in Fairhaven.

The recital will begin at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and that evening there will be an informal reception in the Old Dartmouth Historical Society rooms in New Bedford. These social events will be the prelude to the business sessions. The first of the latter will be called to order in the First Baptist Church the next day.

The first proceeding will be an address of welcome, and after Miss Georgie A Bacon has replied to it, reports will be presented as follows:

Report of clerk, Mrs. Effie S. Nowers; of assistant clerk, Mrs. L. F. Bullock; of corresponding secretary, Mrs. Grace V. Hibbard; of treasurer, Mrs. L. B. C., No. 27, to attend its memorial service and also to attend the memorial service of William H. Smart Post, No. 30, G. A. R., on Sunday, May 21.

A dancing party was held at the Newtowne Club Hall, North Cambridge Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Sexto Club.

The Old Colony Union, a recently organized club of the women of the village of Bourne, is to hold an exhibition this year to encourage farming and flower propagation. There will be substantial prizes for the best potatoes, corn, squash, pumpkin. The flower gardens in the contest must be at least 100 square feet. Besides the above prizes there will be prizes for sloyd work and sewing. A committee will visit the gardens during one day of the exhibition.

Victor Associates Dance.

The annual May party and dance of the Victor Associates will be held in Cyprus Hall, Cambridgeport, Friday evening, May 26.

On Friday afternoon, May 26, the art department of the Cantabrigia Club will visit the Germanic Museum at Harvard.

The Cantabrigia Club delegates to the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs which will be held in New Bedford, May 24, 25 and 26, will be Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Bonney, Mrs. John Amee and Mrs. Hovey.

A May party and dance will be held in Odd Fellows' Hall, North Cambridge, Tuesday evening, May 23, under the auspices of Signet Chapter, No. 22, Order of the Eastern Star.

Friendship Lodge, No. 20, I. O. O. F. will observe the 92d anniversary of Odd Fellowship with a banquet, entertainment and dance Monday evening, May 29.

The officers of the Unitarian Woman's Alliance of the First Parish, Lexington, Church for next year are as follows: President, Mrs. Louise Putnam; recording secretary, Miss Sarah E. Robinson; corresponding secretary, Miss Hudson, treasurer, Mrs. George F. Jones, chairman of Postoffice Mission, Mrs. Frances E. Ballard; chairman of cheerful letter department, Miss Ellen Harrington; chairman of luncheon committee, Miss Henrietta Ewing.

Yesterday afternoon and evening Unity Lend-a-Hand held a fair in Lexington. Fancy and household articles were sold besides a large amount of candy, cake and ice cream. There was dancing, both in the afternoon and evening, to the music of a hurdy-gurdy.

The Lexington Dramatic Club has elected the following officers. President, Mrs. Edwin Read; vice-president, Mrs. Augustus E. Scott; treasurer, James R. Prince, secretary, Miss Gertrude S. Smith; executive committee, C. C. Doe, Ezra F. Breed, William Roger Greeley, Mrs. William C. Stickel and Miss Beatrice C. Stevens. The next social event of the club will take place in the Town Hall, Thursday evening, May 25. "A Bachelor's Romance" will be presented that evening with this cast: Martin Beggs, David's secretary, Ezra F. Breed; Mr. Mulberry, an antique literary man, James P. Prince; Mr Savage, a man of letters, Mr. Mason; David Holmes, literary critic and editor of the "Review," Mr. Badger; Sylvia Somers, David's ward, Miss Beatrice C. Stevens; Helen Le Grande, sister to David, Mrs. Edwin Read; Gerald Le Grande, David's brother, Mr. Smith; Miss Clementina, a maiden lady, Miss Barbara McKinnon; Harold Reynolds, on the staff of the "Review," Mr. Watts; James, a servant in the Le Grande home, Mr. Fourcy; Harriet Leicester, a friend of Helen's, Miss Ruth Wilder.

Delegates Chosen.

At Friday's meeting of the Brockton Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in its new quarters in the Marston building, delegates were chosen to the big county convention, which will be held in Plymouth, June 14. This convention is being looked forward to with pleasant anticipation by white ribboners all over the county. The hospitality of the Plymouth union is well known, and there will also be a chance to see the sights at the historic town.

The board of directors of the Brockton Y. W. C. A. are considering the advisability of conducting a Summer kindergarten. The ladies of the association are anxious to take up the work, and in all probability the Summer kindergarten in Brockton will this year be a reality. It was announced that $155 was realized as a result of the presentation of "The Village Postoffice" a few weeks ago.

The annual outing—the closing event of the season—of the Fortnightly Club of Brockton was a motor trip to Boston. The ladies breakfasted at the Vendome and later spent two hours at the Boston Art Museum. Those in the party were: Mrs. J. H. Averhill, Mrs. John F. Allen, Mrs. L. F. Alden, Mrs. J. Howard Field, Miss Jennie Hilton Ford, Miss Isabelle D. Fraser, Mrs. E. A. Keith, Mrs. C. Carroll Keith, Mrs. S. C. King, Miss Lillian D. Leach, Miss Bessie K. Packard, Mrs. Fred L. Packard, Mrs. C. S. Pierce, Mrs. F. P. Richmond, Mrs. W. S. Washburn, Mrs. S. Heath Rich, Mrs. George Cole and Miss Emma Porter.

The directors of the Brockton Women's Club are up against a difficult proposition the coming year. It is up to the board to select speakers for the ensuing year and this must be done within the month. They have discovered to their great disappointment that the cost of lectures will be more than ever before and they are loath to spend $250 per lecture, the price demanded. They are now planning to secure the services of good speakers at lower cost. "The High Cost of Living," it seems, has also entered into this phase of life.

Members of Deborah Sampson Chapter, D. A. R., of Brockton, met at the home of the treasurer, Miss Jennie Hubbard of Plymouth yesterday (Saturday) and made plans for the coming meeting of the chapter, which will be the annual meeting, to be held at the First Congregational Church, Brockton, May 29. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected at this meeting.

Deborah Sampson Chapter, D. A. R. of Brockton, has selected the following as delegates to the Massachusetts State conference to be held at Worcester May 23. Mrs. John Alden, Mrs. Amasa Soule, Mrs. O. W. Charles, Mrs. Jarvis Bourne, Mrs. George Q. Jenkins, Mrs. Alton M. Thayer, Mrs. E. P. Boynton, Mrs. A. M. Starratt, Mrs. Charles Poole and Mrs. Lucius Cook. The alternates are: Mrs. Lucy Howard, Mrs. M. E. Pierce, Mrs. George W. Keyes, Mrs. R. C. Boomer, Mrs. John S. White, Miss Paul Black, Miss Marion Dean, Mrs. George A. Beal, Mrs. Julia Hawthorne, Mrs. J. W. Cooper and Mrs. John Lufkin.

Women Aid Hospital.

At a special meeting of the Ten Times One Club of Brockton it was voted to donate cash to the Brockton Hospital this year, instead of having charge of a booth at the Brockton Hospital Ladies' Aid Association. The hospital directors are conducting a campaign for funds and the club is among the first to lend aid.

The Progressive Chautauqua Circle of Brockton has accepted the invitation of Mrs. D. S. Whittemore to be her guests at her Summer home in Providence on June 3, at which time she will entertain the members of the Roger Williams Family Association.

The Young Matrons' Club was entertained Thursday at the home of Mrs. Harry L. Thompson, on Lexington street, Brockton. The club received an invitation from Mrs. Herbert L. Tinkham and Mrs. Thomas L. Kendall to be their guests at Mrs. Tinkham's Summer home, Buzzards Bay in June. At Mrs. Albert L. Brown's suggestion, magazines and other reading matter will be collected by the club to be sent to Rutland for distribution among the patients. The club will have charge of the candy table at the annual lawn party of the Brockton Hospital Ladies' Aid Association, June 15. Mrs. Walter T. Keene, Mrs. J. J. Wilde and Mrs. Ira W. Holbrook will have charge of it. The banquet Thursday was in charge of Mrs. W. Newell Wade, Mrs. J. H. Smith, Mrs. Ira W. Holbrook, Mrs. Irving Churchill, Mrs. John W. Barlow, Mrs. George Hazen, Mrs. William Cholerton, Mrs. Lizzie Newcomb, Mrs. George Perkins, Mrs. E. Herbert Ripley, Mrs. J. M. Brock and Mrs. Willard Hassan.

The annual meeting of the Melrose Club will be held Saturday, May 27. The nominating committee has recommended the election of these officers: President, Robert T. Hay; vice-president, Arthur S. Davis, secretary, Byron G. Morgan, treasurer, George H. Towne, executive committee, Howard C. Morse and Eugene W. Owen; membership committee, Frank H. Atwood, George E. Cornwall, Jesse A. Dill, George L. Davis, Ralph S. Franklin, Fred E. Everett, A. W. Haroth, C. W. H. Frederick, George M. Hall, John H. Pattee, Carl A. Raymond, E. E. Stebbins, A. W. Sewall, A. F. Taylor, F. A. Ross, W. S. Towner and Fred Whilton.

Sarah Bradlee Fulton Chapter, D. A. R., will entertain the Massachusetts D. A. R. at the historic Royall House, Medford, to-morrow, with a luncheon and afternoon meeting. The chapter, with other patriotic societies, is planning to decorate the graves of veterans in Medford on Memorial Day.

To Form Permanent Club.

At a meeting of Fitchburg Lodge of Elks, Hon. J. Lovell Johnson was elected esteemed leading knight, Charles T. Grout, esteemed loyal knight, Eugene Stone, esteemed lecturing knight, George J. Mitten chaplain. The new election was caused by the resignation of Carl D. Bates, esteemed leading knight.

Members of Loyal Progressive Lodge of Fitchburg and Loyal Rockwood Lodge of Leominster, I. O. O. F., M. U., are planning for a joint annual memorial service to be held Sunday morning, May 21, in the Calvinistic Congregational Church. After the service they will march to Forest Hill Cemetery, where the graves of deceased members will be decorated.

How Old Is Your Complexion?

(From London Graphic)

"I have just returned from Paris, where I have been hunting up all the new fashions, and I have many valuable ideas.

"I obtained an interview with Madame De Veaux, Paris' most renowned beauty. Although a woman of fifty years, she could easily pass for thirty. The skin on her face, neck and arms is clear, soft and velvety, and entirely free from wrinkles and stray hairs.

"She has never used powder or paint, but makes a solution by dissolving an original package of mayatone in eight ounces of witchhazel, and massages her face, arms and neck twice a day with it. This does not show upon the skin; removes all sorts of blemishes, and prevents the growth of hair.

"The use of powder will not be found necessary at all, as the solution removes any shine from the skin at once and gives the face a dainty, natural color. The stray hairs will disappear if the treatment is continued.

St. Augustine Parish to Honor Veteran Pastor, Monsignor Denis O'Callaghan, at Double Reunion

Parishioners, Present and Former, to Join in Tribute to Boston Priest.

OVER seven thousand past and present parishioners of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, will take part in a double reunion to-morrow night and Tuesday night in honor of the Rt. Rev Monsignor Denis O'Callaghan, D. D., permanent rector of the church.

Outside of its tribute to Monsignor O'Callaghan, this double reunion has an additional object of raising funds to clear the $14,000 debt remaining on St. Augustine's school and convent.

During the forty-three years in which he has been the spiritual head of the big parish, Monsignor O'Callaghan has established numerous and costly buildings. In the course of time the old St. Augustine's Church, school and convent, the large parish house on E street and St Monica's Church and rectory on Dorchester street. All these are clear of debt except the $14,000 balance remaining on the school and convent of St. Augustine's.

Next June will be the forty-sixth anniversary of the ordination of Monsignor O'Callaghan as a priest and the forty-third anniversary of his coming to St. Augustine's. The dual anniversary will be celebrated with elaborate exercises, plans for which are already shaping

Classmate of Cardinal.

The parishioners wish to have St Augustine's property wholly free from debt for their beloved rector by the time the June anniversaries arrive. Hence the reunions to-morrow and Tuesday nights.

Monsignor O'Callaghan is a native of County Cork, Ireland, coming to this country at the age of five. He was seventy years old on March 18 last. After his boyhood in Salem he went to St. Charles' College at Ellicott City, Md., where he was a classmate of Cardinal Gibbons. He was ordained to the priesthood at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore in 1865.

He was assigned as curate to St Peter and St. Paul's Church, South Boston, and remained there two years. In June, 1868, he went to St Augustine's. His pastorate has been an uninterrupted course of spiritual and material betterment for the big parish.

The double reunion to-morrow and Tuesday nights will take place in St. Augustine's Hall on E street, South Boston.

In connection with this celebration there will be a benefit performance at the Olympia Theatre on Broadway at 8 o'clock this evening under direction of the women who will have charge of the "Green Table" at the reunion. The benefit program will include songs vocal and instrumental numbers and other entertainment by Sarah Chapman, the Midland Quartet, Little Essie Henry Casey, Miss Donovan, Peter Ball, Pall Sisters, Charles Forester, Miss Lynch, Jimmy Pennington, Highland Four and Orpheum Trio.

The reunion proper will begin at 8 o'clock to-morrow night in St Augustine's Hall. The Waverly Orchestra will furnish music. Charles S. O'Connor, secretary of the general committee, will be chairman. After a selection by James J. Templeton there will be an address by Major Fitzgerald.

Pastor Will Speak.

A sketch by the Manning Sisters and a selection by the Highland Quartet will be followed by the principal feature of the program of exercises, an address by Monsignor O'Callaghan. His topic will be "Our Seventh Arrow," meaning "Our Dear Irish Priest."

There will be another sketch and then the exercises will close with music.

After the exercises dancing will begin, to continue till 1 o'clock in the morning. William A. Wall will be floor director both evenings. Miss Ella Hall and Miss T. Donohoe will be assistant floor directors. Edward G. Norris floor manager; John L. Monahan and Peter F. McNiff assistant floor directors and William J. Day chief of aids.

"Old Folks" dancing, with piper and fiddler, will be an extra feature.

Supper will be served from 9:30 to midnight at four tables. There will be the yellow table and red table, in honor of the colors of the name of St Augustine's school, each presided over by women of the parish, with large staffs of assistants.

For the reunion celebration on Tuesday night in the same hall tables will be furnished by Holah's orchestra. There will be no admission charge, tickets or numbers will be by Miss Eileen V. Driscoll, the Orpheum Trio, Harry Sweet, accompanied by Wm J. Illey and Carl J. Brinkman, and by professional talent in sketches.

Who Are In Charge.

There will be dancing and supper as on the first night. An extra feature will be a parade of two divisions of Hibernians to the hall, accompanied by a band, in honor of the Monsignor.

Elaborate plans have been made for this double reunion by the committee, whose officials and chairmen are:

General Committee—Chairman, John H. Toland, secretary, Charles S. O'Connor; treasurer, John J. Leonard.

NOTED CHURCHMEN COMING HERE IN JUNE

Apostolic Delegate and Clergymen Will Attend National Conference of St. Vincent de Paul.

The apostolic delegate to the United States, it is expected, will attend the annual conference of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, to be held in this city, June 4, 5, 6 and 7. A letter of regret has been received from Cardinal Gibbons by Chairman David F. Tuley of the reception committee, regretting his inability to attend. It reads as follows:

Cardinal's Residence,
Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:

Your very kind invitation to attend the national conference of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul came to me yesterday, and I thank you very much for the same for I am sure it will be a very good one for those who attend. As for myself, a previous engagement of that date will prevent me accepting much as I should enjoy and be edified by this truly Christian work. The great success is fairly assured.

CARDINAL GIBBONS.

It is understood that the most Rev Diomede Falconio, D.D., of Washington [illegible] delegate to the United States is arranging to come.

Fourteen archbishops have been invited.

Noted Ecclesiastic Coming.

The committee in charge of the arrangements are holding meetings daily. It is assured that this will be one of the most notable gatherings of religious celebrities ever held in this country. The delegates will come from all over the country. They will have headquarters at the Belvidere, and the meetings will be held in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple. The Catholic Union will tender them a reception, Sunday afternoon, June 4. A trip down the harbor on the afternoon of the 6th will be another feature of the conference.

The conference was first opened Sunday, June 4, with a solemn high mass at the cathedral, Monsignor Michael J. Splaine, D.D., preaching. That evening Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald will address the delegates at the Majestic Theatre. Monday the members will attend mass and receive communion, and a conference will be held. The first session will open at 9:30 a. m. Thomas W. Hynes, president of the Particular Council of Brooklyn, and John Rea, president of the Particular Council of Philadelphia, will discuss the topic, "Conference Charity." In the evening the subject, "Administration of Councils and Conferences" will be considered. Thomas Mottey president of the New York Particular Council, and Edward A. Spindler, D.D., of the Springfield Central Council, will speak.

Many Subjects on Program.

"Women's Auxiliaries" will be considered Tuesday morning, after the delegates have attended mass. "The Preservation of the Home and Children" will be the subject at the fourth session, held Tuesday evening. The final session will be held Wednesday morning, beginning at 9:30. Peter Collier, chairman of the Particular Council of Chicago, will preside and will read a paper on "The Spiritual Side of the Society." Lawrence Gonner, president of the Particular Council of Dubuque, will follow him.

New Pastor Is Ill.

Owing to ill health, the Rev. William F. Cahill of Malden will be unable to assume his duties as curate at St. Columbkill's Church, Brighton, for which he was appointed by Archbishop O'Connell during the week. Fr. Cahill has recently returned from Gabriels, N.Y., where he spent several weeks. He is at the home of his mother on Charles street, Malden.

St. Mary's May Party.

Wednesday evening the members of St. Mary's Catholic Association of the North End will hold a May party at Roughan Hall, Charlestown. Proceeds will be used for renovating St. Mary's school hall.

Social Notes

At a recent meeting of the parishioners of St. Eulalia's church, an organization was effected to arrange a lawn party on the Murray Field East Somerville street between Q and P streets, Saturday, June 24. The committee has chosen John P. Reidy chairman and Joseph B. Cassidy secretary, the chairman of the committees to be announced as follows: Daniel to deb nasile, Philip Lane, dancing, Joseph A. Rossarik; entertainment and refreshments, Henry H. Wallace; printing, Joseph D. Gerrish. On the grounds there will be three rings in charge of the young women, the married women and the Sunday school. There will be dancing for the old folks and many other attractions for the young and old.

Miss Marguerite Gallagher, a soprano of South Boston, and recently connected with St. Monica's Church, sailed for Europe from New York for Paris, where she will study voice culture. She is a pupil of Mme. Miss Gallagher has been prominent in amateur theatricals for several years, having important parts in shows given by St Augustine's church and many K. of C. entertainments. She was a student of the Conservatory of Music for several years. Her parents reside on West Broadway.

An active committee headed by George N. Cassili have completed arrangements for the concert and dance to be given by the choir of St. Vincent's parish at Dudgeon Hall, in Jamaica Plain, Monday evening. The affair will be under the auspices of the Society of St Vincent de Paul and a large attendance is expected, as the association will undoubtedly be present to help the well known parish, which in the course of years has built up one of the finest choirs in the city. Miss Cassili will be seen in a special number which will be given on Wednesday afternoon. In the sum performance of the evening, the proceeds of the benefit of the festival to be held on June 2. Mrs. P. C. Quigley is the hostess for the June 16 the Ladies' Auxiliary will hold their final matinee whist. The series has been the most successful ever held and netted a substantial sum to the treasury.

A meeting of the parishioners will be held in Appleton Hall next Sunday evening to make final arrangements for the reception to be held in Investigator Hall on Monday evening, May 29. James O'Neil will receive the guests. Miss Bridie Cunningham will punch score cards, and James A. Connors will distribute the prizes.

The Galway Ladies will meet this evening in Appleton Hall at 8 o'clock. A large attendance is expected, as twelve candidates are to be initiated. The social and May party was a complete success. Mrs. Anna M. Casey will preside.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Flannagan of Newton accompanied by the latter's sister, Miss Margaret Sullivan, will sail on the 27th for an extended tour on the continent. They will return in the early Fall.

Miss Alice T. Horan of Charlestown is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Crawford of New York. Many hospitalities have been planned in her honor, among which is an extended auto trip through the State.

Sister Frances, for many years connected with the Carney Hospital and who recently celebrated her 30th anniversary as a Sister of Charity, has returned from Emmitsburg to St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum.

Hon. Arthur Herrigan, Patrick J. Kyle, Maurice J. Power, William H. Breen and Joseph A. Doff comprise the newly appointed committee of the Charlestown Improvement Association.

Mr and Mrs T. P. Murphy of Roslindale, accompanied by their two young children, will sail the latter part of the month for a three months' tour of the continent

Miss Ruth Mulvihill, president of the Business Men's Association of Charlestown, has been elected Color Marshal of the Society's Washington Parade.

Members of the Catholic Union will celebrate the anniversary of the organization with a dinner at the Boston City Club, on the evening of May 25.

Miss Julia Murphy and Miss Lulu Donovan of Charlestown are attending the graduating exercises at Georgetown, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Daniels of Brookline will leave early in June for Bozzaris Bay, where they will remain until September.

Boston College Commencement.

Francis Kiley, David B. Waters, James J. Cotter and Francis A. O'Brien will be the speakers at Boston College commencement. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. James A. Supple of St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay, a graduate of the class of 1900.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY WILL HOLD JUBILEE

Organization Attached to St Patrick's, Roxbury, to Observe 21st Anniversary.

The Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's Church, Dudley street, Roxbury, will observe the quasi-centennial anniversary of the founding of the society with a dinner and entertainment in Intercolonial Hall, Dudley street, Tuesday evening, May 30.

On February 14, 1886, this Holy Name society was instituted by the Rev. Charles H. McKenna, D. D. It was the third society of its kind founded in the archdiocese of Boston by the eloquent Dominican from the fifty men who formed the nucleus the society has increased in membership until to-day it can count more than 600 active members. Few Holy Name societies in the archdiocese have a larger membership. Some is on a better financial basis. The present Holy Name League is spiritual director. The other officers are: President Joseph A. Boerling; vice president, John B. Maher; financial secretary, James Conroy; recording and corresponding secretary, Francis Mahoney; marshal, John F. Cahill; guide, assistant financial secretary, William J. Cahill; sergeant-at-arms, John F. Cahill; guides, [illegible] Michael J. Dacey, Joseph Dacey, Joseph Hall, Joseph Kelly.

It was decided that Archbishop O'Connell would be asked to attend the celebration dinner, but it has since been learned that he will probably be in Europe by that time. Bishop Anderson, it is expected, will take his place.

The chief feature of the affair will be the reception to be accorded to the Rev. Joseph P. Gallagher, the pastor of St. Patrick's church, who is soon receiving from a surgical operation. He will deliver a brief resume of his work as head of the parish. The other speakers will be the Rev. Maurice F. Flynn, the Rev. James Carney and the Rev. James Bennett. The remainder of the evening will be Bishop Anderson, should he attend.

"THE TWIG OF THORN."

St. Mary's Club to Present Play in Cambridge.

On June 5 the members of St. Mary's Dramatic Club of Cambridge will present "The Twig of Thorn" in St Mary's Hall on Norfolk street. The play was written by Miss Josephine Warren of Wellesley, and presents, in a pleasing manner, charming characters of Irish folk-lore. Dancing and music, by the junior classes, will be interspersed between the acts. Those in the cast include the Misses Clare O'Donnell, Elizabeth Gray, Edward A. Norris, Mary Cogan, Anna Toner, Josephine Lynch, Margaret Dunphy, Agnes Murphy, Theresa Doyle, Bertha Conlin, Elizabeth Gray, Grace Logan, Grace Kaiser, and Marie Girard.

St. Mary's Choir Concert.

The members of St Mary's Choir, Thatcher street will give a sacred concert on the evening of June 4, in the upper hall. Under the direction of Miss Mary Barr. The soloists will include Miss Mary Holland, Miss Mary McGinnis, Miss Lucy Winn, Daniel J. Canney, John A. Winn and Robert H Walsh.

Chase Homestead Plans.

Rev. John A. Dugan, the newly appointed pastor of St Columba's Church, Lowell, is developing plans for the renovation of the Chase homestead, which was purchased by Archbishop O'Connell. Father Dugan was formerly of St Greg. ory's Church, where he has a host of friends.

Men at St. Mary's Mission.

The week's mission for the single men of St Mary's parish Charlestown, will open this evening with solemn services at 7:45. It will be the four weeks' mission, one of the most successful ever held. It is conducted by the Rev. Fathers, Connolly, Clark and Nolan of the Redemptorist order.

Hair Troubles and How to Treat Them

Nature has set a limit on everything. One of these limits is that man cannot create life artificially.

You read occasionally that some professor has created the lower forms of life in his laboratory, but when you run the story down to its source, you will find that the truth has not been told.

When you see a statement that tells you some nostrum will make your hair grow after the roots are dead, don't believe it, because it's not so.

When hair roots are dead, hair will not grow again. You can, however, put your scalp in such a healthy condition that the dying of hair roots can be stopped and growth be encouraged.

There are two ways to do this, and both of them should be resorted to. One way is to follow the simple life, eat plain foods, breathe fresh air, sleep eight hours every night, avoid liquors and live right generally. This will build up your constitution and improve your blood. The other thing is to keep your hair and scalp clean, because cleanliness is one of the essential requisites of health.

Keep your hair and scalp clean with Birt's Head Wash, and your hair troubles will largely be a thing of the past. You might as well give up putting secret nostrums on your hair and head under the impression that they possess some mysterious power to promote the growth of hair, because they don't do anything of the kind. Birt's Head Wash removes the dirt, disease germs, dandruff and microbes that gather on everybody's head.

Nobody is immune from these things, and the sooner people wake up to these facts, the sooner the spread of contagious diseases will be stopped.

Birt's Head Wash not only cleans the hair and scalp thoroughly, but leaves the hair glossy and soft, and the scalp in a pink, healthy condition. People have been humbugged long enough with worthless preparations for the hair that hide behind a mask of mystery. No preparation for the hair ought to be good enough for you unless it is good enough to carry the formula on the package.

The formula is on every package of Birt's Head Wash, and when you buy it you know exactly what you are getting. Here it is:

Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid.

In hygienic tubes 25c., at drug and dept. stores.

ACTIVE WORKERS FOR ST. MARY'S MAY PARTY

ISABEL BRIGHTMAN. MARGARET McELANEY.

Former Parishioners to Join in Reunion to Be Held Wednesday Evening in Charlestown Hall

ON Wednesday evening the members of St. Mary's Catholic Association will hold a May party at Houghan's Hall, Charlestown. No effort is being spared by the committee to make the affair a record success. Former parishioners will be present from Revere, Chelsea, Charlestown, Everett and Malden.

A large committee of women will assist, headed by Mrs. Mary A. Lynch and Miss Isabel I. Brightman and Miss Mary McElaney. The following members comprise the committee:

John Flynn, chairman; Augustine Rasmussen, treasurer; Frank Sobris, Henry Hayes, Frank Sullivan, George Cummings, Thomas McMackin, John McDavitt, Frederick Fitzgerald, John Gibbons, Patrick McLaughlin, Michael Dagle, Mary Sobris, Rose Ryan, Ann Garrity, Mary Harvey, Mary Caney, Grace Brennan, Anna Powell, May Walsh, Helen Morrison, May Coughlin.

Committees are being formed among the members of St. Mary's parish, North End, to plan for a mammoth picnic to be held during the early Summer. It is the intention of those interested to make the affair one of the largest out of door parties the parish has ever held.

The proceeds will be used to purchase a carriage for the conveyance of the sisters from Berkeley Street Academy to the various parochial schools in the North and West Ends.

SUFFOLK DEGREE CORPS WORK TODAY

This afternoon the newly organized Suffolk Degree Corps will work the major degrees in a class of sixty-eight candidates for Division 60 at St. Rose Hall, Worcester street. At a recent meeting of the Suffolk County Board, County President Richard Dwyer was instructed to organize a county degree staff and the work to-day will be its first attempted since the decision to have a corps in this county. The team is made up as follows: Ard-Rill, County President Richard Dwyer; Ollav, County Recording Secretary William T. Fleming; Brehan, County Vice President Fred J. McLaughlin; Bard, County Financial Secretary Thomas J. McMackin, Chief of Escort, County Treasurer Cornelius J. McLaughlin. The guards will be composed of a number of prominent members. The work to-day will show the result of painstaking efforts on the part of the instructor and drill master, former president of Division 5, Representative Patrick F. Carr. In addition to the ritual work, a concert will be given by several talented artists. President John J. Conway of Division 60 is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

Auxiliary 5's Anniversary.

The first anniversary of Auxiliary 5 of ... held in Bradley Hall, Orienta ... was an enjoyable affair. The ... programme included whist, ... and music, both vocal and instrumental. The committee in charge was Miss Mary A. McGovern, Mrs. Margaret T. O'Brien, Miss Ellen J. Leach, Mrs. Alice Williams, Mrs. Margaret S. Fale, Mrs. Sarah Donovan, Miss Mary Fahey, Mrs. Annie F. Dunn, Miss B. M. Carr, Mrs. Barbara G. Appleton, Mrs. Sarah Fewore and Miss Ellen Morley. Auxiliary 5 meets on the third Wednesday evening in Bradley Hall, No. 2152 Washington street, Roxbury.

Will March to Cimmunion.

Divisions 6, 7, 13, 32, 36, 57, 58, 70 and 75 will receive holy communion this morning at St. Eulalie's Church, City Point. Rev. Mortimer Twomey will preach the sermon. The members will report to County President Richard Dwyer at Dahlgren Hall, E street, at 7 a. m., and march to the church.

Arrangements are completed for the annual concert, reunion and ball of the past and present members of Division 24 of Boston to be held at Corinthian Hall, Deacon building, on Monday evening, May 29. Military men are requested to appear in uniform.

Representative W. A. H. Crowley, who has charge of the publicity for the field day of Division 72 of Boston at Locust Street Grounds, announces that four of the best football and hurling teams in the State have signed agreements to compete for the handsome prizes offered by the division that day.

National Organizer George H. Sheehan addressed large meetings in Lewiston, Portland, Biddeford and Saco last week. He was accompanied by State President Robinson, who desires an increase of fifty per cent. in membership. Mr. Sheehan says he found the A. O. H. ... the cities visited and among ... the rolls were a great many ... prominent professional and business men.

... whist parties of Auxiliary 37 ... held at Brooks Hall, will ... during the hot weather. ... Mrs. Maria A. McDonough announces that the past term has been the most successful in the history of the auxiliary.

Bay State A. O. H. Gains.

Advance reports made by the county presidents at the State board meeting in Springfield fulfil the prediction made by State President John H. Dillon that Massachusetts would make a big gain in membership and finances during the present term. Middlesex, Suffolk, Essex and Worcester are in the lead at present.

Auxiliary No. 11 will hold its annual May party on Monday evening, May 22, at Eberle Hall, Union square, Somerville. The committee of arrangements is Misses Gertrude Knight, Rose McArdle, Anna Kiley, Katherine Mulqueeney, Mrs. Fontanny; matrons, Mrs. J. Mack, Mrs. J. Dardis, Mrs. J. Welch.

The uniformed companies of the Charlestown divisions will participate in the military parade in that district on June 17.

Every division in Massachusetts is joining in the appeal to Senators and Congressmen calling on them to vote against the proposed treaty between the United States and Great Britain. As the A. O. H. alone number almost 50,000 men in Massachusetts the protest is a formidable one.

The annual field day of the Suffolk County members will be held at Locust street grounds on Labor Day. One of the best athletic cards yet presented will be offered that day.

Division 76 of Dorchester will meet to-day at Washington Hall, Codman square.

A visit to the meetings of Division 43 of Boston amply repays the Gaelic student. A number of the members are fluent speakers of the Celtic tongue and debates are frequently carried on in that language.

Whist for Orphans.

A whist and dancing party will be given by the Orchid Club, East Boston, Wednesday evening in Armory Hall for the benefit of the table of the Holy Redeemer parish at the May festival for the Home for Destitute Catholic Children. The party is under the direction of Miss Alice M. Dunne, Miss Anna White, Miss Mae Welch, Miss Katheryn Bonner, Miss Helen Brant, Miss Gertrude Walsh, Miss Josephine Donahue, Miss Alice Lane, Miss Nellie Welch and Miss Annie Croak.

BIG GARDEN PARTY TO AID THE DALY SCHOOL

The thirteenth annual garden party of the Daly Industrial School will be held on Saturday, July 1. On the grounds surrounding the institution, Train street, Dorchester. A myriad of Japanese lanterns and calcium lights will be strung from and amid the foliage of the beautiful forest of trees. The many booths representing the various sections of Greater Boston, will be blended in the colors of the school, and in charge of a bevy of pretty girls from the sections represented. The afternoon will be especially devoted to the entertainment of the children. Merry-go-rounds, Punch and Judy shows, ventriloquists, auto rides, Marathon races, games and a mammoth May pole dance will make up the program. It will be a gala day for the little ones. Children accompanied by parents will be admitted free.

All amusements will be in the open air. The grounds are admirably adapted for the event. There are many beautiful shade trees, and the hill commands a sweeping view of Dorchester bay and surrounding country.

In the evening dancing will be under the direction of the members of the Daly Industrial Aid Association. The various booths at which refreshments will be served will be in charge of prominent members of the different parishes of Greater Boston.

Patrick F. Burke is chairman of the committee and Richard Lynch, secretary. The Sister Superior is treasurer of the party, and all donations may be sent to Sister Superior, Daly Industrial School.

There are more than eighty orphan girls from the ages of eleven to eighteen years in the school. As there is no endowment fund to draw from, and as the garden party is the largest source of revenue to the school at the charitably inclined are invited to aid this most worthy charity. The committees are:

Arrangements—Colonel John J. Sullivan, P. F. Carroll, James E. Coyle, Joseph F. Flannigan, John F. Fitzgerald, James M. Lane, William A. Boudrot, James M. Curley, Joseph F. McGreeney, Joseph P. ### St. Lawrence's Garden Party.

The annual garden party of St. Lawrence's Church, Brookline, will be held on June 17, on the parish grounds. An excellent program is being arranged, with special features for the entertainment of the children in the afternoon.

Reception to Pastor.

A reception will be tendered tomorrow evening to the newly appointed pastor of St. Bernard's Church, Newton, the Rev. John F. Kelcher by the Newton Catholic Club. Father Keleher entered on his new duties two weeks ago.

Seminole Club May Party.

The members of the Seminole Club will entertain their friends at their eigoth annual May party to-morrow evening at Catholic Union Hall. Several hundred invitations have been issued. A concert will be given from 8 to 9, to be followed by dancing from 9 until 1 o'clock.

SOME OF THE YOUNGSTERS FOR WHOM CHARITY BAZAAR WILL BE HELD

IN NEARBY TOWNS

LAWRENCE.

The biggest event of its kind in Catholic circles will be the annual May procession of the children of the St. Mary's and the Immaculate Conception Churches. The parade will be held Sunday afternoon, May 21, weather permitting. If the day is unfavorable, the parade will be held on the following Sunday. Visitors from the neighboring cities and towns are expected to witness the procession, which gives indication of exceeding in numbers any previous parade.

The handsome banner of Court Sacred Heart, 140, Catholic Order of Foresters, will be blessed Sunday, June 4, in the open air on the grounds of the Sacred Heart Church, South Broadway. The blessing will be preceded by a parade in which all the local French societies will take part, while organizations from Lowell, Manchester, Nashua, N. H., Haverhill, and Salem, Mass., have signified their intention of taking part. Between 1,800 and 2,000 are expected to be in line. There will also be a banquet.

The Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's Church recently and voted to hold a picnic at Stevens Grove in West Andover. The following committee was appointed to complete all the arrangements as to date and other details: Chairman, William E. Dorney, secretary, Thomas McDonnell; John J. O'Brien, John J. Dalton, James Fitzgerald, Joseph Carberry, Robert Barrett, Thomas F. Sentry, Patrick Kileoyne, Joan Gallivan, Rev. Fr. James T. Lanergan is spiritual advisor of the society.

The Catholic Young Men's Association has arranged a dual track meet with Boston English High. The meet will be held in this city Tuesday morning, May 30 (Memorial Day) and it will be held either at Riverside Park or at Glen Forest.

Lawrence Knights of Columbus will assist in the working of the third degree to be performed in Haverhill City Hall Monday evening, May 29, under the auspices of Haverhill Council, K. of C.

The local committee in charge of the Lawrence table at the annual field day of St. John's Preparatory School, Danvers, Saturday, June 17, will meet Sunday afternoon and complete their plans. Lawrence expects to have 2,000 attend the festivities.

LYNN.

In connection with the fortieth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. John C. Harrington, P. P., of St. Joseph's Church, Lynn, the parishioners have planned a celebration which will open on June 3 and end in the evening of the 7th. The program will include special services on Sunday, June 4, in which His Grace, Archbishop O'Connell, will take an important part. On the evening of the 7th a public reception will be tendered to the popular pastor in the Lynn Theatre.

A large number of candidates received the third degree at a regular meeting of Valladolid Council, K. of C., held Friday evening in Odd Fellows Hall. District Deputy James J. Donohue exemplified the degrees. Grand Knight John M. Harney was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair.

Miss Marie Callahan of Nahant street has returned from Chicago.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Bertha Stern ..., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis ... of No. 28 Atlantic terrace, Lynn, and Robert W. Murphy of Arlington. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George A. Gatley of St. Joseph's Church, that city. Miss Elizabeth Murphy, a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, ... Medford. The newly married couple are now on an extended wedding tour and upon their return will take up their residence in Arlington.

NEWTON.

Throughout the coming week there will be a mission for men at the French Catholic Church which was recently organized at Nonantum. The veteran missionary Rev. Fr. Barolet, will be in charge and will be assisted by the pastor, Rev. Fr. Joseph Rotchland.

Forty hours devotion will be observed at St. John's Church, Newton Lower Falls this week. A number of visiting clergymen will assist Rev. Fr. P. H. Cadanc, the pastor. For the benefit of parishioners living in Wellesley, special cars will be run from Wellesley at 4:40 o'clock on Monday and Tuesday mornings. The services will end Tuesday morning at eight o'clock.

For the children's pageant of the crowning of the Blessed Virgin, which will take place next Sunday afternoon, invitations have been sent to a number of clergymen in this section by Rev. P. H. Callanan, pastor of St. John's Church. Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S.J., president of Boston College, has delegated some of his assistants to attend.

WATERTOWN.

A parish hall for St. Patrick's Church, Watertown has been made possible by carrying out an idea of Rev. Ambrose F. Roche, the pastor, and remodelling the old church structure. This building stands on Church hill, adjacent to the parochial school, and has not been used since the new church was built. The work of renovating and changing the old building will be completed in about a fortnight and will result in a hall that will seat 800 persons.

WELLESLEY.

The annual festival of the crowning of the Blessed Virgin will be held on Sunday, May 28, by the children of St. John's parish, and also of St. Paul's Mission at Wellesley. Rev. Fr. P. H. Callanan, pastor of St. John's Church, Wellesley Lower Falls, will be in charge. This event includes a procession of hundreds of children, and in the past has attracted many interested spectators. In the morning of that date 175 children will receive their first communion in St. John's Church.

BABIES' FRIENDS TO AID THEM AT GREAT FETE

THE call for help for the children cared for at the St. Mary's Infant Asylum is meeting with a hearty response from the friends and well wishers of the asylum throughout Greater Boston.

Much interest is being shown in the festival now planned to aid the little ones. The fete takes place in Mechanics Building, on June 3. The proceeds will be used to benefit the babies at St. Mary's.

A Pathetic Appeal.

There is a plainly written little appeal which is being sent out to the friends of the babies. It is simply worded, and it strikes home. Here it is:

Dear Friend—I am a wee, helpless little fellow and I know that if I could only tell you all about myself you would be interested in me and in all the tiny boys and girls at our home.

Won't you come to our festival? There will be dancing, moving pictures and other things to entertain you, and besides, you will know that you are helping at the same time the little men and women who need your help and kindness.

Haven't you some little boy or little girl, that is dearer to you than anything in this world? Or don't you know some little person that holds a place very deep in your heart? Wouldn't you, if you only gave it a thought, be very happy, to know that you had done something, no matter how little, to help those who are helpless through no fault of their own?

A little out of your own abundance, given in the name of those you love, can do good and bring happiness to children.

ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE.

The festival is under the direction of the Ladies' Aid Society. Every parish in Greater Boston is interested, and the women and girls of all are working zealously to assure the success of the bazaar. Representatives of the different parishes will be in charge of the tables.

Knights Are Working, Too.

Officers and members of the Boston Council, Knights of Columbus, have also interested themselves in the work. Committees have been appointed for the various tasks, and the council is distributing circulars and coin cards, along with a statement of what has been accomplished by the Sisters of Charity who care for the infants at the St. Mary's Asylum.

This week, the chairmen of the men's committees will confer with the Ladies' Aid Society, for the purpose of perfecting the festival plans. A contest will be started by the separate councils of Knights. Each council will have a table in the bazaar, and the competition will be to see which table brings in the largest receipts.

There is no charity in Boston more worthy than St. Mary's. In all it has cared for more than 17,000 infants. The last annual report shows that the number of children in the asylum during twelve months was 667, all from Greater Boston.

Most Worthy Charity.

These little ones have all been deprived of parents' care, either through death or misfortune. Many of them had been thrown upon the mercies of the world. Some of them are in poor health when received, or in bad condition from starvation, abuse, or sickness. So large has been the number of children received lately, that the sisters of the asylum have been compelled to board some of their little patients in private homes because of lack of room in the asylum itself.

A visit to the hospital would convince any one of the merits of the institution and of the great good work that is being done by the sisters. The sun room is on the lower floor. Here are the swings, hammocks, tiny chairs and the toys. It is here in the sunlight when the weather is good, and protected from the elements when the skies are overcast, that the babies play through the long hours of the day.

Upstairs, on the second floor, are the "creepers," which are supplied with rattles, dolls and rubber toys. Here are the smaller babes. They learn their "first steps."

On the top are the sleeping rooms. To right and left are neat wire cribs, each holding its mite of humanity. Their prattle or laughter, the attention they get, give evidence of the patience, love and vigilance of the nurses, and also attest the wonderful good the asylum is doing for the little ones.

In Charge of Tables.

The women who will be in charge of the tables the various parishes will have at the festival are:

St. Catherine's, Charlestown, Mrs. J. Trumbull; St. John's Roxbury, Mrs. Thomas O'Toole; St. Phillip's, Roxbury, Mrs. M. Cousins; Brookline parishes, Miss Marion O'Brien; St. Catherine's, Somerville, Mrs. Edward O'Neil, Sr.; Jamaica Plain parishes, Mrs. T. Lennon; St. Patrick's, Roxbury, Mrs. K. Reed, Gate of Heaven, South Boston, Miss L. Breen; St. Margaret's, Mrs. J. Kellard; Immaculate Conception, Miss Patricia Flynn; St. Cecelia's, Miss Mary O'Connor; St. Peter's, Dorchester, Mrs. M. Crosby; St. Joseph's, West End, Miss C. McGillicuddy; St. Leo's, Mrs. Charles W. Rodgers; SS. Peter and Paul's, Mrs. B. Nee; St. Vincent's, Miss K. A. Coughlin, Mission Church, Mrs. J. Coleman; St. Patrick's, Miss G. Farrell. The asylum table will be under the direction of the sisters.

LONG POND VISITORS TO AID SMALL CHURCH

To raise funds to pay off part of the debt of St. Mary's Church of Collinsville, a suburb of Lowell, a number of vacationists who spend the Summer months at Long Pond, near to the church, will hold a party in Intercolonial Hall, No. 214 Dudley street, Roxbury, to-morrow evening. A feature of the affair will be the reception tendered to the Rev. Thomas A. Walsh, pastor of the church. Fr. Walsh was for a number of years a curate attached to St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury.

Fifteen young women have been actively engaged in arranging the details for the party. They have prepared several novel features, one of which will be a receiving line to greet Fr. Walsh. It is planned to have the pastor speak during the evening. Invitations have been extended to the clergy of St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury, and other dignitaries of the State and city.

The young women in charge of the affair are the Misses A. M. Nihan, Margaret ... Rose Hawley, Mary O'Toole, Mary McInnes, Sadie Macdonald, Anna Flynn, Jeanette Johnson, Lena Kopenhaffer, Mary Conroy, Nellie and Theresa Ryan, Lena Nihen, Mary and Alice Driscoll and Ina Harrington. Henry Talbot will be floor director. His assistants will be James Rigby, Laughlin McInnes, John Keefe, James Burke, Frank Gurnean, ... H. Harrington, Edward Havelin, William J. Butler, James Reagan and Richard Lincoln.

DELEGATES PLAN FOR C. T. A. CONVENTION

Thousands of delegates, representing subordinate branches of the organization in all parts of the United States and Canada, will assemble in Scranton, Pa., the first or second week in August to attend the annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, which will convene there for a seven days' session. The convention will be presided over by the Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, the eminent Paulist Father of Chicago, who is president of the union.

The feature of the convention will be the big street parade, in which will appear the famous Wilkes-Barre C. T. A. Regiment, which encamped last Summer at Castle Island, Boston harbor, during the week of the convention in Boston. There will also appear several companies of the newly formed Boston C. T. A. U. regiment. The total number who will participate in the parade will be in the neighborhood of 40,000. A number of women societies will ride in floats and barouches.

Arrangements are being made by the Boston societies to send a large contingent of members, and a special train will leave on the Sunday prior to the opening of the convention from the South Station. A number will go by boat to New York and thence by railroad to the convention city.

President John T. Shea of the Boston Union will head the delegation. He is a member of the national board, holding the office of secretary, and it is the intention of the Boston delegates to have him elevated to a higher office in the councils of the national board of government.

MRS. MATHEW OTT, WHO IS NAMIKO IN "MAID OF JAPAN"

MRS MATTHEW OTT

QUINCY TO HEAR "MAID OF JAPAN"

THE oriental operatic comedy "Maid of Japan" is to be placed on the Music Hall stage, Quincy, next Wednesday evening, in aid of St. John's parochial school.

The "Maid of Japan" was written by Matthew Ott, a young dramatist and member of St. John's parish, who also takes the leading comedy role. The opera is purely oriental. The scene is laid in the garden of Nishayme, Japan. It has something to say about the present day condition of affairs between the Americans and the crafty orientals.

Japanese secret service men are sent to America to take photographs of American fortifications. This the Japanese succeed in doing. However, they are closely followed by clever secret service men.

Running through this diplomatic tangle is the pleasing story of Shula Topalis and his charming daughter Neeta. Neeta falls in love with one of the American secret service men, Stafford Wardwell, while Namiko, sister of Tokeo Nishiyama, falls in love with Kirby Noodle, valet to Stafford Wardwell. Both Americans are deeply smitten by these Japanese maidens.

In the chorus there will be no end of pretty girls, in the brilliant costumes of old Japan. For months the chorus has been rehearsing under the direction of Mr. Ott.

The following is the cast:

Shula Topalis, a Japanese Lord ... John A. McGowan
Neeta, his daughter ... M. Josephine McCarthy
Takeo Nishiyama, a Japanese secret service man ... D. J. Seward
Namiko, his sister ... Mrs. Matthew Ott
Kataoka ... Paul Avery
Chiwaka ... James Grant
Hyoza ... Jay Place
Kawashima
Stafford Wardwell, of the American secret service ... Edward J. Sullivan
Kirby Noodle, his valet ... Matthew Ott

MRS. WM HERLIHY

COLUMBUS GUILD TO END SOCIAL SEASON

ON Thursday night the Columbus Guild of Lynn will hold its final social evening for the season at Knights of Columbus Hall. It will be preceded by a business meeting at which reports of the year will be read. The work accomplished by the guild during the past Winter has exceeded all previous records. Much credit is due the president, Mrs. William Herlihy, and her corps of able assistants, through whose efforts funds were created for the support and maintenance of the work.

The social entertainments have furnished many pleasant diversions for the members and their friends. An excellent program has been arranged for Thursday evening by the following committee:

Miss Anna B. Mangan, Miss Julia F. Callahan, Miss Marie Donohoe, Miss Mary Harney, Mrs. Joseph Moran, Mrs. William French, Miss Alice M. Donohoe, Miss Clare Donohoe, Mrs. Thomas T. # Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips.

Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO. Chicago, Ill. with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage. This Out

DORCHESTER G. A. R. MEMORIAL PLANS

Services at Cedar Grove, Decoration of Graves and Dinner by Women's Relief Corps.

Benjamin Stone, Jr., Post No. 68, G. A. R., of Dorchester, has completed its program for Memorial Day in conjunction with the Nathaniel Bowditch Camp 30, Sons of Veterans. The Women's Relief Corp and Tent 1, Daughters of Veterans, are assisting the Veterans and Sons.

The services at Cedar Grove Cemetery, the main services of the day's program, are as follows: The post will assemble at the junction of Adams and Codman streets at 11 o'clock, and march to Cedar Grove Cemetery, under escort of the Post band, and Camp 30, Sons of Veterans.

Comrade William H. Dupree will read Lincoln's address, and the Hon. Harvey L. Boutwell, Assistant City Solicitor of Malden, will be the orator of the day. Invitations have been extended to the clergy of the district to be present and a number of the laymen are expected. Special exercises will be held at Post 68 lot. The remaining exercises will consist of dirge, prayer, G. A. R. Memorial exercises, decoration of graves, firing of volley and taps. Commander David B. Fletcher of the post will be in charge of the exercises.

Services in Cemeteries.

At the other cemeteries, the services will consist mostly of dirge, prayer, memorial exercises, decorating of graves, firing of volley, and taps. The cemeteries to be visited are, and are in charge of the following officers: Codman Cemetery, 8.15 a. m., under the direction of Comrade J. J. Pratt, S. V. C. Catholic Cemetery, Bernard street, 8.45 a. m., under the directions of S. of V. in charge of Commander John F. Durham. South Cemetery, Lower Mills, 9:30 a. m., under the direction of Comrade R. E. Young, J. V. C., and North Cemetery, Stoughton street, 9.30 a. m. under the command of Commander David B. Fletcher.

The Memorial Day committee is as follows: Henry P. Oakman, chairman; E. Jarvis Baker, treasurer; Wallace Kenney, secretary; R. W. Greenleaf, W. B. Robinson, Charles T. Simpson, William H. Dupree, Samuel Brown, Walter E. Swan, William H. Haddock, Edmund F. Snow, James F. McIntire, Charles A. Vinal, D. P. Gipson, C. W. Beal, and David B. Fletcher, ex officio.

Nearly 1,000 graves will be taken care of altogether throughout Dorchester, and the committee requests that liberal contributions of flowers be made. People having flowers to give can notify or leave them at G. A. R. Hall, Park street, Dorchester.

Dinner to Comrades.

The Women's Relief Corps will tender the comrades a dinner in G. A. R. Hall at the close of the services at Cedar Grove Cemetery. Among the women assisting will be Mrs. Emily M. Barney, president, Mrs. Margaret Hall, S. V. P.; Mrs. Ella F. Dove, J. V. P.; Mrs. Mary R. Rogers, secretary; Mrs. Annie D. Perkins, treasurer; Mrs. Julia A. Smith, Mrs. Susie M. Fales, Mrs. Ida M. Marshall, Mrs. Cora B. Tyled, Mrs. Margaret Weaver, Mrs. Emma Hussey, Mrs. Mary E. Hunt, Mrs. Emily M. Heald, Mrs. Lizzie Gilmore, Miss Julia Plummer, Mrs. Mary F. Edson, Mrs. Nellie Mitchell.

HENRY C. BARNABEE TELLS SOME OF HIS BEST STORIES OF OLD COMIC OPERA DAYS

HENRY CLAY BARNABEE, who for 50 years was famous as a public entertainer, and was the most popular comic opera comedian America ever had, is writing his autobiography. The famous actor has consented to allow the Sunday AMERICAN to publish a number of the good stories and reminiscences of famous men which he is making use of for his book.

Mr. Barnabee lives in Jamaica Plain with two nieces, and very near to the old church where he sang in the choir for many years back in the fifties. He occasionally appears at dinners and evening parties, and sings as cheerfully as ever "The Cork Leg" and "Simon Cellerer," but he has retired forever from the stage, where he won such triumphs with "The Bostonians."

Eugene Field as a Dramatic Critic.

I REMEMBER a dramatic criticism by the late Eugene Field which struck me as better than pages of invective. It was about a Shakespearean actor who was not much good. Field honored him with two lines:

"Mr. Blank played Hamlet last night at the Tabor Grand. He played it until twelve o'clock."

Humorist Has Fun With the Comedian.

I never knew whether to be indignant or amused at Eugene Field's statement in a Chicago paper that I was not Henry Clay Barnabee at all, but his promising son.

"His imitations of his famous father were marvelous in their fidelity," Field wrote, "and the critic of the Barnstable Palladium, who had heard the elder Barnabee in religious concerts forty years ago, heralded the younger Barnabee as the dawn of a glorious lyric epoch.

"'When father got back home at the end of last season,' said the Junior Henry Clay, 'he sent for me and said: "Hank, I've 'bout made up my mind to let you take my place in our op'ry company. You ain't worth a darn for any other business, and I guess you was cut out for an actor."'

"The evening of the old gentleman's long, active and useful life is fitting[ly] beautiful in its quiet repose; and the retired veteran finds peculiar satisfaction in the assurance that to his place in the sphere of lyric art his best beloved son has succeeded without dispute or question."

I had the hardest time trying to persuade people that I wasn't my own son but myself, and finally I got so I didn't know whether I was my son or my father.

Heavy Handicap On Hotel Breakfast.

I have stopped at some very bad hotels in my time, but I think the worst ever was the inn that used to exist at North Scituate, late in the sixties. I stopped there for the night and was called at 6 a. m. of a freezing morning. I objected to getting up, but the man at the door was insistent.

"If you want breakfast you'd better get up, because we want the sheets for table clothes."

How a Fire Stopped Barnabee's Concert.

You know what a fire is in a country town. It is a very important event. Well, I was giving a concert in Portsmouth many years ago when a fire bell rang. The concert had only just commenced and I was singing "Rocked in the cradle of the deep." You should have seen that audience. It was crazy to get into the street and see where the fire was, and yet it had paid for its seats and did not want to lose them by leaving the hall. It was really a terrible predicament in which to place a Yankee audience.

I solved the difficulty by shouting: "Everybody keep his seat. I will go out to see, and where the fire is, and come back and tell you."

I immediately left the hall. The audience continued to boil with excitement, shrieking and yelling and carrying on. [illegible] as a sort of presiding officer was a [illegible] named Coffin, a painter, and he [illegible] to work to calming the crowd. "Keep your seats," he cried, "Mr. Barnabee will return and tell us where the fire is. Behave like sensible people. What is a little fire, anyway."

At that moment I returned, and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the fire is in Mr. Coffin's paintshop."

The chairman gave a shout, dashed down [illegible]

and climbing across benches in his eagerness to be out. It is one thing to be calm when somebody else's house is on fire and another thing to have your own burn.

A Stage Joke on Miss Georgia Cayvan

The talk of women wearing trousers, or harem skirts, I think you call them, remind me of the final performance of "Pinafore" in the Boston Theatre away back in the 80's. We were closing and we were all up to larks. I was playing Sir Joseph Porter and I sang:

I am the monarch of the sea,
And when I marry thee
I'll be true to the devotion which my love implants

And Georgia Cayvan as Hebe would sing,

"And so will his sisters and his cousins and his aunts"

Instead of the proper lines this is what I sung

"I am the monarch of the sea,
And when I marry thee,
"I'll abjure kace breeches and wear long pants!"

"And so will his—" began Georgia and then noticed what she was about to say. She stopped, the music stopped and the audience went into hysterics.

Thackeray's Opinion of a Boston Oyster.

I remember when William Makepeace Thackeray visited Boston. He was dined and wined and received all kinds of adulation. He also ate a Saddle Rock oyster for the first time when in this city.

After the great author had gulped down the big bivalve somebody asked him how it tasted.

"I feel as if I had swallowed a baby," he replied.

Honest Comment Upon a Prayer.

My sister in Portsmouth used to have a man of all work about the place named Jasper. He was a darky. Jasper got religion at a camp meeting and professed to [illegible] would pray every day and say grace at meals. But Jasper's wife Mandy was hard-headed and did not set much store upon demonstrative religion. Jasper was afraid of her comments and did not pray for some time. But one day there came a terrible thunder storm and Jasper thought this was his chance.

He flopped down on his knees and began: "Oh, Lordy, come quick and save us from this [illegible] and lightning. Oh, Lord, you can't come too soon, and come yourself Lord, don't send yo' son this time. This ain't no child's play."

Mandy leaned forward and said.

"Jasper, dat am de damdest prayer I ever heard."

Henry Watterson Named "Bostonians."

I have often been asked how our famous opera company ever happened to be called "The Bostonians." We were christened by no less a distinguished person than Colonel Henry Watterson. Colonel Watterson was a friend of all artists and he took a brotherly interest in the partnership that McDonald, Karl and myself were forming.

"We were discussing a name for ourselves when the Colonel said, 'Most of you come from Boston. Why not call yourself the Bostonians?' And we did."

Robert G. Ingersoll in Westminster Abbey.

We met Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll in London back in 1870. Colonel Ingersoll had just come from Westminster Abbey and he was still chuckling over an experience he had with one of the vergers or guides. The man had pointed out the solidarity of the great tombs which enclose the royal remains and Colonel Ingersoll was much impressed.

"It seems all right," he said to the verger. "Here is my card. If any of them escape notify me by cable."

NEWS OF THE LABOR UNIONS IN BOSTON

Moving Picture Employes [illegible] Annual Benefit To-night In Columbia Theatre.

Boston Moving Picture Operators' Union has engaged the Columbia Theatre for its big concert in aid of the union sick fund this evening. Being able to get the pick of available talent, because of their connection with the theatrical business, the members of the entertainment committee say they are going to have the big show of the year in local trade union circles. The list of attractions includes the following performers: Sacks and Harding, Bernie, eccentric violinist; Roach and Hart, Harry Mantell, S. M. Barlow, Helen McNulty, Charles Lane, Fra Walker and Petta Ferguson, Helen Mattison, Sam Moscow, Charles (Sandy) Chapman, Roberts and Clifford, Johnny McGuire, Ed and May Keene, S. S. Dunmore, Rose Shannon and George Francis. The salon also will run reels of pictures, for good measure. Eight hundred tickets had been sold for the concert last night, and it is thought this will be doubled by the box office sales before the performance begins this evening. William O'Donnell, James Burke, Harry Rosendorf and Walter Foster comprise the committee in charge of the event.

The Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor will dedicate the Philip H. Sweet memorial at Forest Hills Cemetery Friday, the dedicatory speech being assigned to Thomas J. Durkin of Holyoke, president of the federation. At the time of his death Mr. Sweet was secretary treasurer of the Boston Central Labor Union, besides holding other high offices in the labor movement of Massachusetts. The monument to be dedicated Friday was erected wholly by the trade unions of this State.

Although demanding that the wages of journeymen be increased from fifty to sixty cents an hour on June 1, and helpers from thirty eight to forty five cents, the officers of the Artificial Stone, Cement and Asphalt Workers' Union say they do not expect any trouble when the new rate goes into effect. Business is so good this season, they say, that almost without exception the members of their union are all employed. And the scarcity of men is so great that a large number of employers have begun to pay the higher rate to their [illegible] already, so as to hold them.

Final reports on the conferences held with Mayor Fitzgerald, in which it was sought to have the city pay all men the scales of wages established locally by their respective unions are looked for at the Wells Memorial Hall meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union this afternoon. It is said that this result could be brought about for less than $30,000 a year and that Mayor Fitzgerald has stated that he is in favor of having the city make the change.

Several meetings have taken place between committees representing Plasterers' Union No. 10 and the Master Plasterers' Association, to act on the new working agreement asked by the men's union which goes into effect on June 1. The men do not ask for any increase in wages, being satisfied with the present rate of $5.20 for an eight hour day but are looking for some minor changes in the working agreement. E. J. McGivern, business agent of the union, states that the prospects are good for a peaceful settlement.

A. J. Howlett of Local No. 33 has been renominated as business agent of the Carpenters' District Council without opposition. Dan H. Deegan of the same local, the present secretary of the council, also has been renominated by a large number of the affiliated unions, his only opponent being E. L. Jones of Roxbury. Balloting will begin on June 1 and be continued until all the twenty seven unions affiliated with the council have taken a referendum on the two officers in question.

Under the new constitution of the Boston & Maine Freight Handlers' Assembly No. 5,572, Knights of Labor, a death benefit of $150 is provided for the family of any member, although the monthly dues charged by the union still remains at twenty-five cents. Michael White, master workman of the assembly, reports the organization to be in a flourishing condition financially, with a constantly increasing membership.

Painters' Union, No. 11, has lost five members by death during the last seven days, the largest number ever recorded in any one week since that organization was first instituted in this city. The union has a total membership of 1,500 in Boston proper, and pays a substantial death benefit to the family of every man who holds a good standing card at the time of his death.

* * *

Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 has received notice from the general headquarters of the organization that a referendum vote must be taken on next meeting night to decide whether an international convention of cigarmakers shall be held in Baltimore in September. The last general convention of the union was held ten years ago.

* * *

Coal Hoisting Engineers' Union No. 74 has arranged for its annual smoke talk and entertainment session at No. 995 Washington street, Sunday, June 4. President J. J. Brennan, Michael McGrath, and A. J. Tighe will represent the local at the annual convention of steam engineers' unions in Rockport, Sunday, June 11.

* * *

Boston Piano and Organ Workers' Union and Firemen's Union No. 242, both hold smokers and mass meetings in Wells Memorial building Tuesday evening. The Carriage, Wagon, Automobile and Aeroplane Workers' Union has its smoker in the same building the following night.

* * *

Bay State Lodge No. 102, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, is out with a set of resolutions pledging its full moral and financial support to John J. and James B. McNamara, now under arrest at Los Angeles for alleged complicity in dynamiting the Times building in that city.

* * *

The Horseshoers' Union has obtained Saturday half-holiday concessions in all but one of the local shops for the Summer season. A social session for members only will be held in Wells Memorial building May 30 to commemorate the peaceful victory.

* * *

Anthony Flynn, recently elected president of Bakers' Union No. 7 to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. T. Walsh, is perfecting plans for more thorough organization of the craft locally. The day headquarters of this local are at No. 1,125 Washington street.

Boston Plumbers' Union has voted to co-operate with the joint district council of that craft in holding a big field day celebration at Oak Island on Saturday, August 5.

WHAT'S DOING AND WHY IN THE LEGISLATIVE AND POLITICAL ARENA

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

EUGENE N. FOSS, child of destiny. The Governor himself has suspected so for some time. Some of his near and dear friends have told him, behind his back, that he was "kidding" himself. But it is beginning to appear that there is some reason for his suspicion.

How Foss not only made a campaign but was elected after what happened in Faneuil Hall last Fall is now history. But it was remarkable, just the same. How he has traveled close to the snares with which the State House abounds is well known to those who have watched him from within the capitol. But he has always escaped [illegible] and sometimes in spite of himself.

And just give a gaze at the spectacle presented by the Supreme Court's [illegible] organized labor's eight hour [illegible]. Do you realize what happens? Foss gets the measure in exactly the same form in which Eben S. Draper said he would sign it. But nobody asked for an opinion from the Supreme Court on it to help out Draper. And the Legislature was overwhelmingly Republican in each of the years when Draper vetoed the measure.

[illegible] heard the story about the chap who fell into a well and came out with a lot of gold watches. Recent events put that chap in Class Z as compared with Eugene N. Foss, the child of destiny.

Are You Going to Tell, Sam? Or Must Someone Else Tell?

UP in the reading room of the State Senate, when two members are feeling kittenish, they bet on the flip of a coin and then ask Sam Ross of New Bedford to announce which side of the coin is up. The interesting thing about these bets is that the bettors take more of a chance on Sam's decision than they do on the way the coin falls. Sam is almost as blind as he is bald. Wears glasses almost half an inch thick and has to hold his watch almost touching his glasses in order to read the time and then he isn't always successful.

Wherefore Sam's story about the man who intimated to him, in an ambiguous statement, that there might be an opportunity for graft if he would consent to postponement on the railroad drinking cup bill is especially interesting.

There is at least one who who is ready to swear that Ross told him that a member of the Senate made the "graft" statement to him. But Sam suffered an attack of cold feet when the thing got into the newspapers, and he said then that it was not a Senator but "a man in the lobby," who approached him. He insisted that he would not be able to recognize him again. "Can't see very well, you know."

Stick to your friends, Sam, if they are your friends. There are half dozen men around the State House who can tell you who the Senator and "the man in the lobby" was. [illegible]

And That Isn't All.

SAM'S story about the attempt to put him next to a piece of easy change and his refusal to be put next made awfully good reading until Dr. Maurice Richardson, the secretary of the State Board of Health, discovered that Sam's own bill would make the railroads provide drinking water for passengers about as much as an order from the Supreme Court of Mars would make them do it.

To describe it as Dr. Richardson did not describe it, Sam's bill was as holey as a piece of Swiss cheese. It ordered the railroads to carry drinking cups. Yes. And it provided a fine of $50 per trip for each passenger car not carrying drinking water. Yes. But not a word about a penalty for failure to provide drinking cups. Wherefore Dr. Richardson rose to remark that the bill was as good off the statute books as it was on.

The Story Ought to Be Told. Speak Up, Arthur, and Tell It.

THERE is very good reason for suspecting that if Representative Arthur Bogue of Lynn had obeyed the orders of the Republican political bosses of his home city and voted for Henry Cabot Lodge for United States Senator, he would not now be encountering the opposition which he is encountering in his campaign for the clerkship of the District Court of Lynn.

But Arthur is a real Democrat. He was elected as a Democrat, and he told the G. O. P. bosses down in Lynn that he purposed to live up to his party's platform pledges and vote against Mr. Lodge. And he kept his word. Mr. Lodge's understrappers politely informed him that if he voted against the sage of Nahant they would do their utmost to make him regret it. They are keeping their word, too.

Mr. Lodge's understrappers—the Craig-Atherton [illegible] responsible for [illegible] activity in the campaign to [illegible] Joseph Doherty of [illegible] the office which [illegible] Doherty was one of those most active in the recent saving of Mr. Lodge from the political guillotine.

It is respectfully suggested that Mr. Bogue give his soft heartedness a vacation, and that he tell Governor Foss just what threats were made to him when he declined to vote for Lodge, and just who made those threats. Don't run away with the idea, Arthur, that the matter is secret. The [illegible] has been fagging about the threats it made, and it would be no violation of ethics for you to tell the true story.

John N. Has It all Settled.

WHY, oh why, is there so much excitement and wonderment among the Republican rank and file as to who's going to be the party candidate for Governor next Fall and who's going to be the party candidate for Lieutenant? Let excitement cease. Ditto for wonderment. [illegible] greatest political [illegible] modern times says [illegible] headed by Louis A. [illegible] Robert Luce. THE Boston News Bureau [illegible] cial mouthpiece for M[illegible] New Haven Road, voices the [illegible] that the cut in the rate [illegible] Maine dividends will pr[illegible] age William H. Lawrence of Medford [illegible] State House [illegible] of legislative bills [illegible] before Mr. Mo[illegible]

OUR FUNNY FASHIONS

FANTASTIC SKETCHES BY PLUM

CERTAIN fashions are odd, to say the least, this Summer Here one sees fashions as Plum sees them. Who is Plum? He is a French artist, who has "arrived" in Paris. Plum has "arrived," Paris says, because he sees things. This, however, is not meant in the common American sense.

The new French artist draws women in relation to their fashions. He adds the touch of exaggeration that brings out the essentially striking and extraordinary point of the mode. Here his two types are carrying bandboxes. It is not yet the mode for fashionable women to trip about the streets carrying large bandboxes like these, but Plum adds them to accentuate the satirical point of his drawings.

Lots of people may say that fashions do not look like these at all, but Paris likes Plum, anyway, whether they agree with his way of seeing things or not.

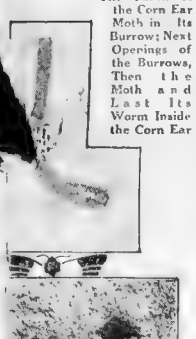
Searchlight Traps For the Destructive Moth That Breeds the Corn-Ear Worm and the Devastating Gypsy Moth, Vacuum Cleaners for Vine Thrips; X-Rays for Tobacco Beetles



The Larva of the Corn Ear Moth in Its Burrow; Next Openings of the Burrows, Then the Moth and Last Its Worm Inside the Corn Ear

By Rene Bache.

INVENTIVE ingenuity has been highly stimulated of late by the exigencies of the bug problem. Notwithstanding all that science is one to do, the fight against destructive insects is going steadily against the farmer, apparently, and thus it comes about that new weapons with which to wage war are eagerly sought.

Recently a vineyard owner, C. B. Driver, of Fresno, Cal., has patented a machine of very novel kind for killing the vine thrips—a pest not hardly more than one-fifth of an inch long, and commonly known as the "hair fly," because of its extraordinary fondness for climbing and sticking to hairy surfaces, such as the human head and face. Owing to the extreme smallness of the fly, and to its almost incredible numbers, the vines cannot feasibly be protected by any devices of picking. But Mr. Driver's scheme depends for its effectiveness upon an idea altogether different. It is a suction apparatus, with a four-horse power gasoline blower, which, driven back and forth through the vineyard, literally harvests the thrips from the vines without even touching the latter, and gathers them into a receptacle from which they are afterward taken and burned. It is the inventors' intention to use for the purpose an automobile engine, for these are of greater lightness, and believes that, in the not distant future, motor cars specially constructed for the purpose will be operated in every important vineyard in California.

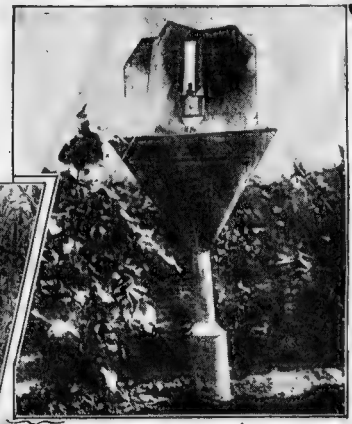
Meanwhile many inventors are busy trying to make traps that will catch the night-flying moths, which are the parents of some of our most destructive insects. For example, there is the corn-ear worm, which also attacks many other economic plants. It is estimated by the Government Bureau of Entomology that this worm (otherwise known as the bollworm of cotton) does over $21,000,000 worth of damage to corn, cotton and tomatoes alone in this country every twelvemonth. Unquestionably it is one of the greatest insect enemies of mankind.

The moths of the corn-ear worm are night flyers. At dusk every corn-field becomes fairly alive with them, as they flit from plant to plant, depositing an egg here and another egg there—preferring usually, to lay them on the tassels. A female moth will thus scatter from 700 to 2,000 waxy white eggs, which hatch two or three days later. The worms thus brought into the world attack the tender buds of the corn in Spring, and, later in the season, the tassels and the milky ears. They grow rapidly, and at the end of a fortnight, having gained full development, they leave the plant and burrow in the ground, where they transform, emerging two weeks later as moths.

Now, if means could be devised for the wholesale capture of the moths in the field, the numbers of the caterpillars might be so greatly reduced as to render the pest of comparatively little importance. During the last half dozen years experiments with this end in view have been tried again and again, with various forms of apparatus—some of the latter, as we shall presently see, depending for their efficacy upon the use of receptacles containing a fluid regardless of its deadly character. One such contrivance is illustrated in an accompanying picture. It is elevated on a hollow cast iron post, in the bottom part of which is a cyanide mixture. Attracted by a lamp, the moths strike against projecting vertical angles of metal surrounding the light, and are thereby thrown down a big funnel where they are quickly smothered by the fumes of the cyanide.

Pans of Sweetened Poison Set at Various Heights Experimentally for Killing Moths.

Another form of apparatus recently tried was a series of pans filled with a mixture of water, sugar and cyanide of potash for a poisonous bait. And yet another was an inverted cone of gauze, placed above a pan of sweetened fluid in such a way that the moths, attracted by the latter, would presently fly upward into the trap and find themselves unable to get out.



Lamp Suspended Over a Poison Mixture to Attract the Night Flying Gypsy Moth.

The Searchlight and Blower Moth Trap at Work.

The moths are attracted by the upper light. The side lights attract the moths into the range of the ventilator, through which fans suck 2,000 cubic feet of air a minute. The moths are carried into the wire boxes and killed.

Painstaking trials of these and other forms of apparatus have been made by experts of the Bureau of Entomology, but with unsatisfactory results. For one thing, the moths captured have proved to be nearly all of them males, whereas it is the egg-laying females whose destruction is important. In New England (to speak of an entirely different insect) similar methods have been suggested for dealing with the moths of the dreaded "browntail" species, which are likewise night flyers, but here again, as proved by tests with specially-constructed traps—electric arc lights suspended over funnel-shape receptacles filled with kerosene and water—a great majority of the insects taken were found to be of the masculine gender.

A communication recently received by our Department of State from one of its agents in Saxony describes a very remarkable machine newly adopted at Zittau for the destruction of certain moths, popularly known as "nuns," whose caterpillars literally eat up the forest trees over wide areas, the damage done representing an enormous money loss annually. These moths are strongly attracted by electric light.

The apparatus devised for the purpose consisted primarily of two powerful searchlights, beneath which were placed two arc lamps, on either side of a suction ventilator. When the searchlights were turned in the direction of the forest, though of the masculine gender.

at a distance of some miles, the moths were attracted in vast numbers. The arc lamps were relied upon to entice them within reach of the ventilator, which promptly swallowed them up.

An electric motor, causing the fans of the ventilator to revolve 1,200 times a minute, sucked 2,800 cubic feet of air through the apparatus every sixty seconds. Any moth venturing within a few feet of the opening was seized by the suction and carried through the ventilator into a cage of wire net, which was emptied at intervals, when accumulations of the insects blocked the free passage of the air blast.

By this means, according to the story, about 100 pounds of the moths were destroyed every night. Sometimes the catch rose as high as 140 pounds, representing, as it is estimated, about 400,000 insects.

A Philadelphia inventor has patented an X-ray insect destroyer to kill the beetles which infest boll-stored and manufactured tobacco.

Playing Checkers with Big Guns in Real War

WHAT seems to be a new idea in modern warfare has been developed with some success by the Mexican Government in its operations against the rebel forces now fighting to overthrow the Diaz regime.

Armed and armored trains sent into territory held by the rebels have the appearance from a distance of a series of immense checkerboards, set up on edge. The two sides of each car are painted in black and white squares—a device which effectually disguises the fact that certain of the black squares are embrasures, through which machine guns are in readiness to pour their deadly fire.

Real fighting experience with these checkered military cars has shown that, except at the actual moment of firing, it is impossible for the enemy to determine in which of the black squares the deadly muzzle is located. Accordingly, the enemy cannot concentrate its fire on the only vulnerable points. As the painted black squares outnumber three or four to one the gunports, safety to guns and gunners within the cars is guaranteed in that ratio.

Recently these checkerboard armored trains have been used with good effect on the line between Chihuahua and Juarez. The cars are ordinary freight cars, with double sides, lined with half inch steel with a six-inch space between, which is packed with sand. The roofs of the cars are formed in the same way.

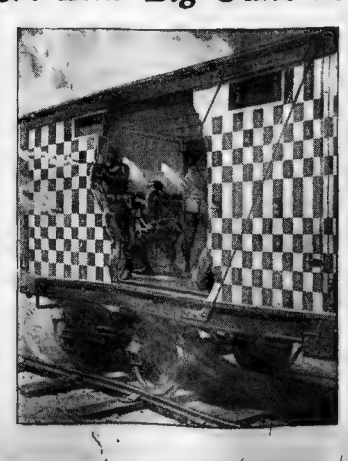

Diagram Illustration of a Federal Armored Railway Car in the Mexican War, Painted in Black and White Checks to Render the Gun Ports Invisible to the Enemy.

The war game, from a strategic point of view, has often been compared to a game of draughts—or checkers—with the manoeuvering of opposing generals to lure the enemy into unfavorable formations, this giving to a comparatively small force advantages over a large one. But this appears to be the first time the checker board itself has been utilized as a means of defense in actual battle.

At each end of a car are six ports for quick-firing guns, with twenty-nine ports on either side for either machine guns or rifles. Smokeless powder being used, the discharge of a gun does not reveal which of several black squares contains it. At night, or on dull days, the flash can be seen, but its duration is so short that its exact location cannot be determined with any sort of certainty.

This device impresses the beholder as an ingenious variation of the custom to cover battle ships with their dull-gray "war paint" prior to sending them into action, thus rendering the entire vessel indistinguishable from the ocean waves at a distance of a few miles.

Codicil 2. In reference to my grandchild Cynthia, I hereby expressly will that in the event of her contracting a marriage with any foreigner or any one not a citizen of the United States, that thereupon all her interest in my estate shall cease and her share shall be divided among those heirs who have obeyed my wishes. (Dated July 1903.)

Codicil 3. I reaffirm all that I have said in my will as to the character and unfitness of James Burke Roche to have anything to do with the property of my daughter or my grandchildren, or to be in any way associated with their lives. (October, 1903.)

Codicil 5. Whereas I am desirous and do expressly request that my daughter Frances Ellen Roche shall cease to exhibit horses or other animals in public, or to train or prepare such animals for such purposes, or to take any part therein, and particularly that she shall have no dealings, transactions or associations in business, or by contract of marriage or otherwise, with anyone interested in inducing her to make or prepare for or to take part in such business or exhibitions.

Codicil 8. Whereas I did in my fifth codicil make certain provisions in regard to my daughter Frances Ellen, I hereby declare that the provisions contained have a special reference to possibility of any such intimacy or association as there referred to on the part of said daughter with one Aurel Batonyi

Codicil 9. Reaffirms all that has gone before, and forbids Cynthia to marry without the consent of her mother and her trustees, forbids the twins to marry prior to or during their college days, under pain of disinheritance. (June, 1905.)

Codicil 10. Increases Mrs. Burke-Roche's and Mrs. Hewitt's yearly income to $80,000 each.

Codicil 11. I do hereby expressly will that my daughter Frances Ellen (and her children), shall not during my lifetime, without my express consent, nor at any time after my death, visit or reside in the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland or the Continents of Europe, Asia and Africa.

I make these provisions for the protection and benefit of my said daughter and grandchildren, and in the belief that they can find in the United States enough to interest, instruct and amuse them, and all the varieties of climate at any time necessary or desirable for purposes of health. (December 1...

Codicil 13. I hereby revoke and annul all provisions in my last will * * * which confer any interest in my estate, or in the income derived therefrom, or from any part thereof, upon my daughter Frances Ellen, and declare it to be my will that she shall have no interest in my property of any kind, and in the event that she should have children, all or...than those named in my will, such other children shall not have or receive any interest or share in my estate * *

I hereby expressly provide that my daughter Frances Ellen shall not be permitted to come into or upon said premises, or to remove anything therefrom, except her wearing apparel, which shall be sent to her upon her request in writing.

Codicil 14. I direct that my executors at all times keep careful watch over my daughter Frances Ellen, and should she separate from Batonyi, maybe in need, I direct them to make suitable provision for her support, and in such case to set aside from my estate a sum sufficient in their judgment for this purpose.

The Burke-Roche Twins, Francis and Edmund, Who Will Not Change Their Name to Work and Have Gone to Europe in Defiance of Their Grandfather's Will.

THAT eccentric and autocratic old millionaire, Frank Work, of New York, trusting in the power of millions, laid down many strange rules for the conduct of his daughter and grandchildren

In his will, the principal provisions of which are quoted above, he provided that his daughter, Mrs. Frances Ellen Burke Roche, should not go to Europe or have anything to do with horse trainers; that his grandsons, Francis and Edmund Burke-Roche, should assume the name of Work and never go to Europe to see their father. In fact, he provided that Mrs. Burke-Roche and her children should keep away from Europe, Africa and Asia. Mrs. Burke Roche in particular was forbidden to do nearly everything that a woman wants to do.

Mr. Work left upward of $15,000,000, and as disobedience of the queer provisions of his will was to be punished by disinheritance, he felt quite certain of being obeyed.

But within three weeks of his death his heirs decided to share his estate without regard to the peculiar provisions of the will.

A week later his grandsons, bearing the name Burke-Roche and not Work, sailed for Europe, in violation of the most insistent of all his provisions, to see the King's coronation, and, in all probability, to see their father, through whom Francis, the older by three minutes, expects to inherit the title of Lord Fermoy.

Never was there a more striking lesson in the vanity of human wishes and the powerlessness of man to take his money beyond the grave.

The exciting cause of Mr Work's queer will was the Hon. James B. Burke-Roche, an erratic Irish soldier of fortune, son of the late Lord Fermoy and brother and heir of the present one. He married Miss Fanny Work, the greatest beauty in New York, in 1881, made her life miserable for a few years and excited Mr. Work's anger

In 1901 Mr Work, being in sound mind and in his eighty fifth year, decided to make a new will. With the unsatisfactory Mr. Burke-Roche in his mind, he proceeded to spin safeguards around the future of his daughter and her children

One daughter, Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, received her fortune unconditionally. Mrs. Burke-Roche's had one string attached. She was to remain divorced. All well and good—she did not want to have anything to do with her ex-husband Her twin sons had three strings attached—they were to drop the name of Burke Roche for that of Work, they were to become naturalized and were always to retain legal residence in this country. Her daughter Cynthia's fortune had no strings as yet.

Mr. Frank Sturgis, an old friend of the Works, and Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mr. Work's son in law, were named executors.

Two years passed in peace. Cynthia, a slim slip of a girl, shot up to be a beauty. At eighteen she was nearly six feet tall, as slender and graceful as a lily stalk, and an amateur tennis champion in Newport. Suddenly Grandfather Work realized that she was becoming a marriageable age. He began to worry

He again called his lawyer, and in July, 1903, drew up two codicils. They related first to his beloved horses, then he ran his grand eye over, in a second clause, especially forbade her marriage to any one not a citizen of these United States. Was not this enough to make any high spirited girl jump over the fences and marry a deep dyed foreigner?

With this condition off his mind Mr. Work began to worry some more about the total depravity of his erstwhile son in law, and calling his lawyer once again he reaffirmed his orders that none of his money should ever be spent on Burke-Roche and reiterated his belief in Mr. Roche's unfitness as a husband and parent. This is the reason for the codicil of October, 1903, and the old man went into Winter quarters in his Madison Square stronghold thinking that he had got the better of forlorn nobleman But with Spring he discovered things most horrifying to his soul!

The birds singing their songs in the trees of the square told him of strange happenings, told him that his daughter, Frances Ellen, the leisure of man, was developing a plot of her own, that she was being seen constantly with one Aurel Batonyi; that said Batonyi was lodging her in her House Scheme. Mr. Work called on his daughter for explanations She avers haughtily said that she was only buying a few horses for her own pleasure, and that she was planning to exhibit them only at the Newport show, "which, you know, is only a local affair."

The old man was appeased. Mrs. Roche went to Newport as usual. Her children went with her. In June awful tales floated down from the Green City.

Mr. Work telegraphed to Mrs. Roche for denials of the tales She denied everything and took to her bed. She cancelled all engagements for three weeks But to no good Late in July, the lawyer got another hurry call, the famous fifth codicil was drawn up, forbidding his daughter to have any dealings with horses or trainers.

Then a Winter of peace.

Toward Spring these pesky birds began singing again. It was the same old song—"Batonyi! Batonyi! Batonyi!" Again the lawyer, and the ... codicil sprang into being, expressly forbidding his daughter to associate with one Batonyi.

This was too much for Mrs Roche. She left her father's rooftree and hied herself to a hotel

Then peace again descended. Miss Cynthia announced that she would marry Mr. Arthur Burden, and she proved her good faith by getting naturalized. It was a pleasing match. But, alas, for the twins; it made grandfather realize that they, too, might one day marry. Again the lawyer, and the ninth codicil took form and the "twins" took fright. Not marry until they had finished college! Alack-a-day! And here was Maurice head over heels in ... with a pretty actress he called Dear Elsie."

But there were still things to be settled by grandfather. He began to see that in growing up, his grandchildren might slip away to foreigners and might contract foreign alliances and so might Frances Ellen with her un-American taste At least, they might go somewhere in Europe, Asia, Africa or England under the pernicious influence of ex-husband James Burke Roche! Again the lawyers and the amazing eleventh codicil, which orders them to stay in America

This was the situation at Christmas time, 1905. Peace and good will seemed far from that household in Madison square. In January, Mrs. Roche was again noticed in Batonyi's company. Reports from Newport said that she was much at her farm near Middletown, where Batonyi acted as her agent. Again the lawyer and codicil twelve. Mrs. Roche went on calmly preparing for Cynthia's wedding. It occurred in June.

In July, she announced that she had been married to Batonyi the year before! Fireworks and staggering surprise all around!

Three days later codicil thirteen shows that her father disinherited her and ordered that she keep off his premises in New York and Newport. He did send her clothes to her. For the first time this actual disinheritment becomes known.

Mr. Work never rescinded the codicil which disinherited her. She stands to-day an heiress without a fortune. And yet, that last codicil! It seems to make her dependent upon her sister and her father's executors.

But the heirs have solved all difficulties by entirely disregarding all Mr. Work's wishes.

"Ha-Ha! Ho-Ho!" Here's the New Laugh Cure!

Discovered by a French Actress in Her Deepest Misery and Despair, and Here She Tells How She Laughed Herself Into Health, Success and Fame

By Mme. Helene Renouard

HA, ha!—but that is most laughable of all. Behold, in my despair I begin to laugh. Fancy that I now do not despair so much. I laugh more yet. I laugh at all my great troubles and poof! they disappear. I am no longer that poor, dyspeptic, pale-cheeked, sorrowful Helene. My friends they hardly know me. Ha ha!—I laugh in their faces, which makes them laugh also, so that they, too, lose all their troubles

"You must begin each day with laughter—as soon as you open your eyes. There's magic in it."

So the laughter infection started, and now all Paris laughs—and loses its troubles. Behold, I laugh all my troubles away, and while I continue to laugh from joy I find myself famous—I laugh and all Paris laughs with me. I have arrived!

It is the great secret—to laugh. To laugh at every pain, every misfortune, every grief, is the same as to sprinkle the devil with holy water. Monsieur le Diable cannot endure the sprinkling; your pain, your misfortunes, your grief, they fly away when you laugh in their faces.

That is the great secret I discovered in that moment of my greatest despair. I was in debt and ill. My body was in pain. I had no appetite for food, and no food for my appetite when it should return. My friends grew weary of my long face and my tears. Ah, I was most miserable!

One morning I awoke in a state of the blackest despair. Why should I get up and dress? Would it not be better to get up no more in this world? When they found me, cold and silent, they would weep and say: "Ah, that poor Helene!" And they would put flowers on my grave.

And so, as I leaned on one elbow in my bed, I began to shed tears for myself. Two big ones ran down my nose, and one trickled into the corner of my mouth. It was salt. What a tragedy!

And, all at once, I began to laugh. It was a laugh of despair but it made me feel better—much. Ah, an experiment! I laughed again—ha, ha! Again I felt better. But still I don't like to get up, and say to myself: "It is so cold for my poor little feet!" Ah, what a farce, what an absurdity! And now I laugh long, like at a big joke—and then I jump out of bed and into my stockings.

Ah, horrible! There is my bad, bitter medicine, which the doctor ordered me to take for my digestion. I take the glass in my hand and I feel that I am making a bad face. And I say: "Why should I drink this ... so for my digestion when I have no food to digest?"—and now I laugh like I never laughed before ... all my life. And I drink the bitter medicine—and laugh again for ... three minutes.

Ha, ha! the experiment is one big success. I am feeling me. I am hungry, and there is no food, but I know that if I only laugh all things will come right. I feel it is so. I dress myself quickly and go out with my face all in smiles—and I run into the arms of my old friend Claire, who has come to take me to breakfast at her house.

At breakfast I laugh so much that Claire is delighted and makes me stay with her for a week. In one week of laughter at everything annoying I am a new girl. I have laughed my indigestion out of existence. And I go home, laughing, to meet all my troubles with that deadly ha, ha, ha!

owe everybody—all the trades

"Oh, horrible! There is my bad, bitter medicine. But I laugh, and drink it, and laugh again."

men, my dressmaker, my landlord. Pretty soon they come, one at a time, for the money that is due them. To each one I say simply that I have no money, but I will go and earn money and pay every sou. And then I laugh. Ah, how I laugh in the faces of those creditors! And pretty soon they laugh also. We laugh together and are good friends.

One thing is to be remembered. You must begin each day with laughter. Begin as soon as you open your eyes in the morning—there is magic in it.

I made it a rule to laugh heartiest when things went their very worst. If I started out in a fine new Spring frock and lovely hat and got caught in the rain without an umbrella and knew that destruction swift and sure awaited my precious clothes, I laughed—ah, laughed I could!

So great fortune is always sure to follow these events. Once in particular when I got caught in the rain in a love of a frock and hat a manager saw me laughing and was so impressed by my supreme good nature that he stopped his carriage, took me in and gave me an engagement at his theatre.

If my shoe comes unfastened, I laugh. If I tear my dress, I laugh. If I do any provoking thing whatsoever, I laugh.

A laugh bolts one to be strong and true and noble. Mean people rarely laugh, and when they think they are laughing they only cackle.

"If I started out in a new Spring frock and a lovely hat, and got caught in the rain, I laughed—oh, laughed heartily."

"If my shoe becomes unfastened I laugh. If I tear my dress I laugh."

YOU LOSE!

By Allan Stephens.

THERE is no use denying the fact that multitudes of citizens frequent drinking places and waste valuable time and money in vain attempts to shake dice more expertly than the bartender can.

Hereafter just watch that bartender carelessly spill out four sixes at the first throw, thus hopelessly ruining your prospects of refreshments at the expense of the house by virtue of your "ace full" after the game stood "horse and horse"?

The next time it happens, watch the bartender's disengaged hand. If it rests on the edge of the mahogany with the thumb out of sight, you may look for a wonderful throw, for the chances are that he's working "the squeeze" on you.

By means of an electric current, an invisible attachment beneath the bar, and the "squeeze," the dispenser of high-balls is enabled to make the bones perform stunts that help pay for lunch, carbonated water, licks, license, protection and various other expenses which have to be met by the poor cafe man.

"I see you're one of the wise boys," observed a Broadway mixer a few days ago, after he had beaten me in three straight games by making miraculous throws at the last moment. His remark was called forth by my action in mounting the foot rail and feeling beneath the edge of the bar just in front of him. As my fingers encountered the push button I smiled at him.

"What do you expect?" he went on, in an attempt to justify the controlled dice. "You wouldn't go into a butcher's shop and ask the meat cutter to roll dice with you to see whether you'll pay double for a porterhouse steak or get it for nothing? You wouldn't ask the shoe man to throw a game of Indian with you for a pair of Oxford ties? How can you expect to find a level dice game in most saloons?

"If you had just as good a chance to win as we have, we'd have to close the doors, that's all. Food has gone way up; licenses are fierce; we're supposed to close promptly at 1 o'clock; the duty on wine has been increased; and the cafe man who throws dice and hasn't got a 'squeeze' is a fool. I know a big place on Broadway that put in six of them not very long ago. Dice shaking was always popular there, but the bar was so long that it looked suspicious when the bartender would try to get the customer to shake over their single magnet. That's why they put in six of 'em. Now, the barkeep has a 'squeeze-button' within reach at almost any old part of the bar. They've got magnets that'll work within a circle of four feet, and'll turn the bones over through five or six inches of wood, glass or rubber.

"Most big houses have to have 'em. Why, that lobster salad over there on the buffet in the big bowl stands the house nearly ten dollars, without figuring the cost of the mayonnaise dressing and the wages of the boy who dishes it out. That cold salmon"——

But to return to our "squeeze"—it cannot be described better than to borrow the words from the circular of a Chicago firm which claims to have invented it. A San Francisco dealer in brass-knuckles, "sand-bell" faro boxes, and other sporting goods, handles the "squeeze," as do two Chicago firms and a New York dealer in loaded dice and marked cards.

The Chicago firm puts it up to the cafe proprietor in the following business-like manner:

"THE ELECTRO-MAGNET FOR CAFES

"The Latest and Greatest Novelty! You Press the 'Squeeze' and the Magnet Does the Rest! It Protects the Saloon Man from All Kinds of Sharks! "The magnet, being placed under the table or bar, is neither seen, heard, nor felt. It is connected by a wire with six dry batteries, giving a powerful current. In order to make a big 'throw,' all you have to do is to press the 'squeeze' button. This closes the electric circuit and puts the magnet into play. Then roll out your dice. You will beat any throw that your opponent may make, or, should he be lucky enough to roll five of a kind, you will tie him at least."

A bright young electrician who lives in Missouri has perfected an apparatus for cigar store men. Thousands of them have been sold, and hundreds of them have been installed in New York stores.

No wonder the genial purveyor of worm-eaten panatellas and indifferent perfectos is always ready to shake you for the smokes. When he throws on his "squeeze" you stand about as much show of smoking at his expense as Jack Johnson has of being entertained at the Holland House.

"Impossible!" I hear you exclaim. "The cigar man always rolls the dice over his showcase. The cases run from two to five feet in depth, and that's too great a distance for a magnet to work."

Just a moment. Did you ever see one of those new-style painted moisteners? They are long cylindrical-shaped objects affixed to the interior of the show case. They are perforated, and are popularly supposed to contain moistened sponges or pads. Sometimes they do, and sometimes they don't.

This is what the Missouri man has to say in behalf of his invention:

"CIGAR CASE MAGNET MOISTENER.

"Stop Giving Away Your Goods! Throw Away Your Old Dice and Write to Me! If Your Business Is Suffering by Reason of the Fact That You Cannot Hold Your Own With the Dice Let Me Be Your Doctor and Prescribe for You!

"My new cigar case magnet consists of a very powerful electro-magnet concealed in what to all appearances seems to be an ordinary perforated moistener. We furnish the outfit complete with dry batteries all ready to be attached to the woodwork inside your showcase by means of two screws.

"The entire apparatus weighs about thirty pounds and the magnet 'pulls' through any thickness of rubber, paper, cloth, wood, or glass. Iron, steel and copper are the only materials that interfere with the magnetism.

"To operate it, lay your change-pad over the show case above the magnet. You may have a large one made out of billiard cloth for the purpose if you choose. When you want a big hand, press the 'squeeze button' and roll out your dice. You will top or tie any throw that your opponents may make and thus control your game at all times.

"I do not advise you to win all the time. Let the customer get away with a few smokes once in a while. Jolly him along, but always keep the percentage well in your favor. We advise several sets of dice made to come in different combinations. Extra sets fixed to come any way you specify can be had for five dollars per set of five.

"I make a transparent set of dice, in three different colors—wine, lemon or green.

"The complete outfit, consisting of moistener, screws, magnet, six dry batteries, insulated wire 'squeeze,' and full directions for setting up, including one set of dice preferred, to come any way you wish, will be forwarded upon receipt of forty dollars."

What are we going to do about it?

Shall we continue to be "squeezed," or shall we forswear the ancient pastime?

Personally, I intend to provide myself with a folding copper plate of suitable size and thickness. With this equipment, I may sally forth and reasonably expect occasionally to smoke or drink "on the house."

If You Must "Throw for the Drinks" Be Sure That the Bar Is Not Equipped with One of These Electric Magnets by Means of Which the Bartender Can Beat You Every Time.

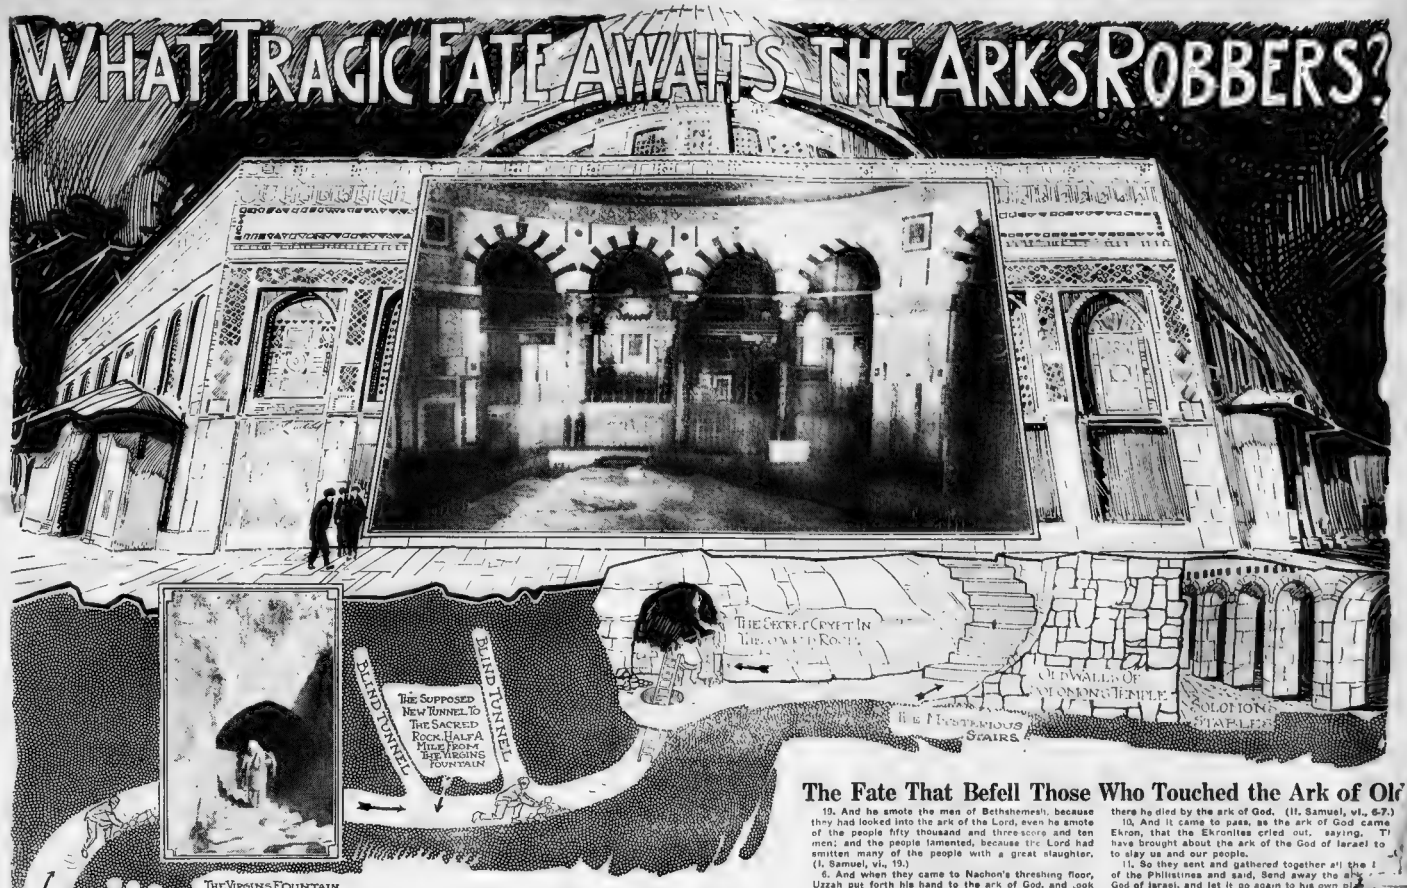
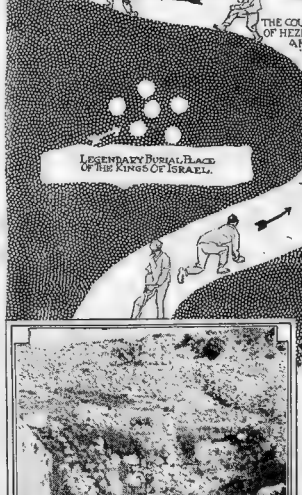
WHAT TRAGIC FATE AWAITS THE ARKS ROBBERS?



Pictorial Diagram Showing the Ancient Water Tunnel, Which the Adventurers Opened Up, Running from the Pool of Siloam Past the Tombs of the Kings and the Virgin's Fountain to the Site of King Solomon's Temple, Now Occupied by the Mosque of Omar, Beneath Which They Are Reported to Have Found The Ark of the Covenant and Other Priceless Treasures in a Secret Chamber.



The Pool of Siloam from Which the Excavators Started.

The Extraordinarily Sacrilegious Search of English Adventurers for the Holiest Relic of Bible History

THE reported theft of the Ark of the Covenant is the most romantic and mysterious episode that has ever occurred in connection with archaeological research.

Though the affair is involved in much mystery, it is certain that a British expedition, equipped with immense resources, has suddenly and secretly departed from Jerusalem, bearing treasures of vast importance.

The belief among the Mohammedan population of Jerusalem and the East generally is that the adventurers have carried away the Ark of the Covenant, the most sacred of all ancient Hebrew possessions; the censer, the crown, ring and sword of King Solomon and various other priceless relics belonging to Solomon and David, and the oldest known manuscript of the Bible. Rioting followed the affair, and the Mohammedans are terribly enraged over it.

The expedition was headed by Captain the Hon. Montague Parker, of the First Life Guards, British Army, brother of the Earl of Morley, assisted by Lieutenant Robin Duff, of the Second Life Guards, a relative of the King, and other men of great influence and high social position in England. They had a fund of $300,000 to enable them to carry on work, and the chief engineer of the London Underground Railroads assisted them. The Armours, of Chicago, are said to be interested in the enterprise.

A curious and charming aspect of the affair is that Captain Parker, who is very prominent in English society, was mentioned as one of the many suitors of the beautiful and divorced Mrs. Ava Willing Astor. It is even said that after the Captain had been particularly attentive, the famous beauty said

"Well, bring back the Ark of the Covenant and I will—talk to you again."

Captain Parker then went to work with tremendous energy. He obtained a concession from the Turkish Government to carry on excavations in a certain region outside Jerusalem. This region consists principally of the hilly tongue of land called Ophel. It lies south of the ancient site of the Temple of Solomon, now occupied by the Mosque of Omar, one of the most sacred edifices in the Mohammedan world.

The mosque, like the ancient temple, is built over the sacred rock which is reputed to be the place where Abraham prepared to sacrifice Isaac. Here stood the Ark of the Covenant, here was the altar of burnt offerings, the most sacred spot of the holy of holies the centre of the universe.

The original Temple of Solomon was the most magnificent building the world has ever known. It was destroyed when the Jews were carried away into the Babylonian captivity. When they returned to Jerusalem they rebuilt the temple.

In 70 A. D. the Romans, under the Emperor Titus, completely destroyed Jerusalem and left nothing of the temple except a section of wall and a curious substructure known as "Solomon's Stables." The temple contained a vast mass of treasure, but the most sacred object was the Ark of the Covenant, which contained the tables of the Ten Commandments, the pot of manna and Aaron's rod.

It is certain that the Romans carried away most of the treasure from the temple, especially the objects of solid gold. We know that they took the famous seven-branched candlestick, because it is represented in a carving at Rome, but there is no reliable record of the disposition of the Ark, although there are many conflicting traditions on the subject.

What more natural than to suppose that the Jews, in imminent danger of defeat and massacre, hid their most precious treasure in a secret hiding place within the sacred rock? It is known that there is a flight of eleven steps leading down to a place within or below the rock, but what lies at the bottom has up to the present been a mystery.

It is now believed that Captain Parker obtained possession of an ancient Hebrew manuscript from the library of the Mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople, giving a clue to the position of a secret treasure chamber within the sacred rock.

After the Roman destruction of Jerusalem a pagan temple arose on the site of the temple. This was succeeded by a Christian church in late Roman times. At last, when the Mohammedans gained complete possession of the Holy Land, they built the Mosque of Omar, one of their most celebrated places of worship, on the spot. The Mohammedans regard the sacred sites of Bible history with a reverence hardly inferior to that of the Hebrews. It is hardly necessary to say that no one has been openly permitted to explore the ground about and beneath the sacred stone.

When Captain Parker began operations he started to explore the ancient water tunnel built by King Hezekiah, from the spring called the Fountain of the Virgin, to the Pool of Siloam and designed to furnish water to the city. This lies in the region south of the temple area.

Starting from the Pool of Siloam, where in Biblical times the lepers were cured of their ills, the explorers made their way through the ancient tunnel throughout its whole length. The Pool of Siloam is about half a mile from the temple area, while the Virgin's Fountain is only a stone's throw away.

They discovered two branch tunnels, which had been hidden for ages. It has been suggested by archaeological authorities that the extraordinary windings of this ancient water tunnel were necessary in order to avoid the tombs of David and Solomon and the Kings of Judah, who were already buried here. It is believed that the English explorers had special information on this point and especially that they had a clue to the graves of David and Solomon, which must have contained rich treasures.

The Englishmen conducted their work with extraordinary secrecy. All inquirers were kept away with great care. Turkish soldiers, paid liberally by the excavators, were furnished as guards. It was observed that the explorers sunk two shafts, one above and one below the Virgin's Fountain. How deep these went, whither they led and what was found in them has not been disclosed, but there is a strong suspicion that a tunnel was continued from one of them under the Temple foundations.

Suddenly the explorers abandoned their labors and hurried away secretly at dead of night. They loaded a vast amount of objects they had recovered on an armored train, which was in waiting on the railroad outside of Jerusalem.

The train proceeded with all possible speed to the port of Jaffa, fifty four miles away. There the objects so secured were loaded, with the same secrecy and despatch as before, on a large steam yacht belonging to Clarence Wilson, of the famous ship-owning firm.

No sooner had they gone than an outcry was raised in Jerusalem that the Ark of the Covenant and other treasures had been taken from the Mosque of Omar. According to one report, the treasure hunters had reached, by tunnelling under the Mosque, the secret chamber in the rock, and according to another they had tricked the guardians to reveal them to carry away the concealed treasures.

The Ark was built to carry the tables of the law delivered by the Lord to Moses on Mount Sinai. It was carried by the Israelites in all their wanderings. When the feet of the priests bearing the Ark touched the Jordan, the river opened to make way for them.

Sudden and terrible death befell all men who touched the Ark irreverently or even looked at it without authority. When the Philistines captured the Ark, it brought upon them plagues of mice and boils and wholesale death until they returned it.

When Solomon built the Temple he placed the Ark in the Holy of Holies. No man might look upon it save the High Priest who did so only once a year, when he entered to pray for the remission of the people's sins.

If the daring English adventurers have actually laid sacrilegious hands upon the sacred Ark, what fate awaits them?

The Fate That Befell Those Who Touched the Ark of Old

19. And he smote the men of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the Lord, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and three score and ten men: and the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter. (I. Samuel, vi., 19.)

6. And when they came to Nachon's threshing floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook it.

7. And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Uzzah, and God smote him there for his error; and there he died by the ark of God. (II. Samuel, vi., 6-7.)

10. And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to us, to slay us and our people.

11. So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay us not, and our people; for there was a deadly destruction throughout all the city; the hand of God was very heavy there. (I. Samuel, v., 10-11.)

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor Said to Be the Prize That Inspired Bold Captain Parker to Delve for the Ark of the Covenant.

A MURDERER BY TEN PINK T

Mrs. Helen Hathaway Robison Britton, Who Refutes the Old Idea That a Woman Can't Understand Baseball.

A Woman Who Owns AND RUNS A Big National Baseball Team.

IF there is such a thing in the whole field of human endeavor as "A Man's Job," the ownership and management of a National League baseball team seems to deserve that designation. Yet the owner of the St. Louis Cardinals—who can hardly escape acting as its real manager also—is a woman, Mrs. Helen Hathaway Robison Britton, of Cleveland, O.

Mrs. Britton is some years on the right side of thirty, a very pretty and charming woman, wife of a prominent Ohio lawyer. She inherited the Cardinals on the death, recently, of her uncle, M. Stanley Robison.

In view of Mr. Tom Powers's pictorial ideas of the advent of women in the great national game, which recently appeared in this newspaper—ribbon-bedecked clubs and bags, bobble-skirted base runners, etc.—Mrs. Britton was asked for a statement regarding her plans as the only woman National League club proprietor.

Her amiable response, printed herewith, probably will relieve many grave apprehensions.

By HELEN HATHAWAY ROBISON BRITTON.

I HAD always known that I was the natural heir to my uncle's baseball club. I was always my uncle's favorite niece. We were much together. I often accompanied him on his trips with the club. Only when my duties at home prevented did I deny myself that pleasure.

The inheritance I assume is not only the financial, but the sentimental part of it. I shall feel it my duty as well as my pleasure to do everything in my power to place the Cardinals where they should be, and where my uncle wanted them to be—at the head of the National League.

I do not think that because I am a woman I will be handicapped in managing a baseball team.

I believe that because I am a woman there are some things on which I can take a positive stand and aid the prosperity and popularity of baseball. My uncle saw that it would be best to make concessions to attract feminine patronage to the game. Part of his idea was to make the grandstand more pleasant and attractive to the fair sex.

The interest in baseball among women has been growing steadily for many years. Why shouldn't it grow? Why shouldn't the women recognize and encourage the superiority of our national game over the sports peculiar to other nations? They owe it to the men—their sons and husbands—to encourage them in a diversion so healthful, so clean, so stimulating to the heroic in their natures.

It won't do women any harm to cultivate in their own ideals of masculinity all those really manly qualities, both physical and mental, of struggle, quickness, alertness, decision, fair play dexterity, which are brought to the fore in baseball. On the other hand, the presence of women at the game will have the desired civilizing effect.

My great aim will be not to interfere with, but rather to further, the system Mr. Brennahan already has in effect.

I do not know any of the players personally I shall, however, get acquainted with them.

How a Plucky California Girl Stayed the Hand of an Assassin.

IT was in Paris, while an immense audience saw only the pretty bare feet and sensuous poses of its latest dancing favorite, that the quick wit and resolution of Adeline Boyer prevented a shocking murder —a crime that in another moment would have splashed the stage with human blood.

In an elaborate Oriental scene the beautiful young American dancer was performing her dances of ancient Judea before the young Prince Adonijah in the royal palace. Satiated with pleasure, the young Prince was hoping for a fresh sensation. At each performance, in the denouement, his hope was gratified—the charming dancer's seductions won him from his lethargy, transformed him into an adorer; and in the final moment she yielded to his caresses.

At this one performance the dancer, unaccountably to her companion in the scene and to the audience, without warning, reversed the meaning of that final moment. Otherwise Prince Adonijah would have fallen at her feet, a dead and mangled actor.

Half an hour later, amid great excitement behind the scenes, a scene shifter—Jean Cornabue—struggling in a straightjacket was hurried away to a hospital.

It was one of those not unusual instances of a stage mechanic a violent love craze for the feminine star of the programme—in this case rendered homicidal by despairing resort to many little glasses of absinthe.

The grotesque attentions of Jean Cornabue had caused Mlle. Boyer some uneasiness, and she avoided him as much as possible. On this night, when she entered the theatre by the stage door she saw that he was half crazed with drink—a circumstance which made her more than usually watchful.

Once, during the early part of the scene, when Prince Adonijah sat on his divan as yet unmoved by her beauty and the sensuous movements of her dance, she glanced off through the wings and saw Jean glaring at her through eyelids red and inflamed. With a savage shake of his head as their eyes met, he seized a "spotlight," with its tall, heavy iron stand, and disappeared with it.

The dance proceeded as usual. She had finished the slow "Mosaic dance," the spirited "dagger dance," and was proceeding with the "Fascination dance," while throwing off, one at a time, her loose outer garments. Prince Adonijah had risen from his divan. It was plain that she had won him from his ennui; she was something which he knew he wanted.

More garments were discarded—at length the dancer's beautiful figure seemed clothed only in gauze and jewels. Never was a form so exquisite, never a pair of bare feet so charming. She had reached the concluding "cymbal dance," adding with the musical clash of metal on metal the last word of inspiration of Oriental passion. The Prince had approached nearer, was following her about the stage with appealing gestures.

Suddenly, with the cymbals raised above her head, her eyes lifted. Mlle. Boyer beheld something far above—nearly fifty feet above the stage, on the edge of the platform where the scene painters work, that stopped the beating of her heart. She sank to her knees in a half swoon.

It was the love and absinthe-crazed Jean Cornabue leaning over the edge of the "paint bridge" and poising the heavy spotlight and stand directly over the head of the unsuspecting Prince Adonijah.

"To save him, to save him!" the dancer muttered, as though in a prayer.

Then the inspiration came. She recalled the savage shake of Jean's head as their eyes met less than a quarter of an hour before.

"It was a warning," she thought. "A warning that if I permit the Prince to caress me, in that moment he dies!"

Now calm and resolute, she had resumed her dance. The great audience, like Prince Adonijah, was fascinated. But the dancer—to her companion's amazement—was compelling him to follow her down toward the footlights. He did not know, ignorant of his danger, that this was merely for temporary safety, while the final moment approached. She kept him in ignorance through that unfailing instinct of stage artists to avoid always any risk of spoiling the scene.

Soon—according to the needs of the scene—they were back under that menacing weight in the hands of a murderous madman.

Then it was that Mlle Boyer suddenly reversed the usual denouement. Instead of yielding to the Prince's caresses she cast upon him a glance of contemptuous dislike; then, raising aloft her arms, as though renouncing all the vanities and pleasures of this life, she smiled entrancingly upon the murderous scene shifter.

Instantly Jean Cornabue's insane glower of hatred changed to a smile of gratified love. She saw him cast aside his weapon.

The curtain descended—and then the dancer fainted in dead earnest.

A Shark That Could Have Swallowed Six Jonahs at Once.

THE whale that swallowed Jonah might, in its turn, have been swallowed by the shark whose mighty jaws have recently been set up in the Museum of Natural History of New York. As shown in the accompanying photograph these jaws are so capacious that six men find ample room to stand upright within them.

It was lucky for Jonah that the little whale saw him first. The whale, it will be remembered, found Jonah a tough morsel and ejected him upon a friendly shore. In this shark's interior Jonah could not have caused even a mild attack of appendicitis—the monster could have swallowed half a dozen Jonahs at once, as easily as Jonah could have absorbed that number of raw Blue Points.

The fact is, however, that Jonah was safe so far as this breed of sharks was concerned, for it flourished and died out a million or so years earlier, back in the eocene period. The Natural History Museum specimen is a reconstruction by paleontological experts around a set of fossilized teeth dug out of the phosphate beds in South Carolina. There were two hundred of them, averaging six inches in length.

Around these teeth the jaws were reconstructed. This work is now almost an exact science, the size and shape of fossilized teeth being a sure guide to the species and size of the animal that owned them. Thus we know now that a shark of this size once actually existed.

A Boat That Never Touches the Water

n the Water and Soaring Over It. The Boat Proper er Touches the Waves.

WHAT is regarded as the "last cry" in water craft is the unique Fabre hydroplane, the "Goeland," which has been making some wonderful flights at the Monaco motor boat meet during the past few weeks.

This curious vessel, the invention of Henri Fabre, a French engineer, is in reality a cross between a motor boat and an aeroplane, although it is difficult to look upon it as a boat at all, seeing that it never touches the water while in motion.

The Fabre hydroplane has the distinction of being the first heavier-than-air machine to make successful flights starting from and alighting upon water. With its strangely shaped wings and appurtenances, it holds the centre of interest among motor boat men and aviators alike.

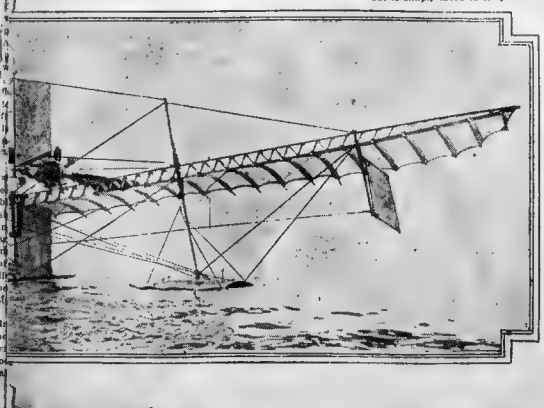
It made its first flight just about a year ago. It went a distance of about a third of a mile six feet above the surface of the water at the rate of thirty-four miles an hour. In subsequent flights, as the result of certain changes and improvements, this record was greatly excelled. It is now able to make between forty and fifty miles an hour under favorable conditions, and its inventor hopes to increase even this high rate of speed.

In principle the hydroplane differs not very greatly from the more familiar aeroplane, except that it is equipped with three specially designed floats to enable it to navigate, rise from and descend upon the water. But this difference enables it to make ocean trips which would be out of the question for the ordinary aeroplane not provided with pontoons or other similar devices.

The Fabre hydroplane is propelled, like an aeroplane, by an eight and one-half foot two-bladed propeller driven by a fifty horse-power engine. It is built on the type of the Antoinette monoplane, with which Latham, the French aviator, made so many records.

The main plane, at the rear of the craft, is built upon a steel truss specifically designed and patented by Fabre, the principal feature of it being that it can be folded when the boat is not in use, thus protecting the covering of the wing from sudden gusts of wind.

The wing is made of a fabric known as simili-silk, and combines lightness with strength. Unlike the wings of most of the familiar types of aeroplanes, this wing is not permanently fastened to the supporting truss, but is simply laced to it by means of a series of eyelets.



The frame of the machine is not unlike that of a bicycle, the pilot's seat being situated about midway. Elevating and steering planes and rudders are in front.

Although Mr. Fabre has been experimenting with this craft for more than a year and has made hundreds of flights in it, he has never met with a serious accident. Sometimes, in coming down, it has descended too great an angle and has landed with a splash, throwing its pilot headlong into the water and sustaining slight injuries itself, but beyond trivial mishaps of this kind, its inventor and pilot has so far been singularly fortunate.

On April 12, at the Monaco meet, while making a trial flight, M. Fabre found that he was being carried too close to a pile, and in trying to escape a collision descended upon the rocks. The hydroplane was badly damaged, but has since been repaired.

The machine now being used by M. Fabre provides accommodations for only one passenger, but a larger machine with greater accommodations is now assured.

The perfection of the hydroplane may hasten the accomplishment of an aerial flight across the ocean, for which the whole scientific world is now looking.

An 18,000-Foot Health Tower, Only 18 Stories High, Where Science Will Work Out Perfect Hearts and Lungs.

A FEW weeks ago Mrs. Margaret Daly Brown, daughter of Marcus Daly, the copper king, died of heart trouble, brought on by the high altitude of Anaconda, Mont., where she had been visiting her mother.

Anaconda is 7,000 feet above sea level, and the thin air imposes an additional tax upon the heart and circulatory system to which a person suffering from heart trouble is unequal. As soon as Mrs. Brown was stricken, therefore, she was hastened back to New York on a special train in an effort to save her, but despite all that money and medical science could do she succumbed.

This tragic death might have been averted, however, had the unfortunate victim had access to a remarkable institution, plans for which have just been completed by Professor Rudolf Klein, of Munich.

This structure, which will consist of eighteen stories, will in reality be only 250 feet high. The mere pressure of a button, however, will increase the height of the building in effect, to 18,000 feet, an altitude several thousand feet greater than that of any mountain in this country except that of Mt. McKinley, which is 20,000 feet.

Nor is this all, for the pressure of another button will convert this skyscraper, in effect, to a subterranean chamber, 2,000 feet below the level of the sea.

These remarkable effects are not produced by any species of legerdemain, but by a series of scientific air pumps and other devices which Professor Klein has invented and by which he can increase or decrease at will the atmospheric pressure on the various floors.

The object of the plan is to combine in one building an atmosphere suitable for persons, like consumptives, who require a thin, rarified air, and a denser atmosphere for those whose blood requires the stimulation of additional oxygen.

It has long been recognized that the pressure of the atmosphere is of great physiological importance. At sea level the pressure of the atmosphere on all objects upon the earth's surface is approximately fifteen pounds to the square inch. Thus a man of average size is subjected to a total pressure of about 34,000 pounds, more than fifteen tons. Such a pressure is rendered harmless, of course, because it is exercised equally in all directions—upward as well as downward, from within as well as from without.

This normal atmospheric pressure diminishes the higher we ascend, and increases the deeper we descend below the level of the sea.

One effect of diminished atmospheric pressure is to reduce the supply of oxygen. Another effect is a remarkable increase of red blood cells, brought about, no doubt, by nature's attempt to enable the blood to absorb a larger amount of the diminished supply of oxygen.

The effect of increased air pressure on the other hand, is to increase the supply of oxygen, resulting to a certain extent in increased vitality and energy.

Medical science has relied upon these physiological phenomena in its treatment of various diseases. It has long been the practise to send patients suffering from incipient tuberculosis to high altitudes in the hope that the deepening of inspiration and the increase of red blood cells brought about by the diminished atmospheric pressure may be beneficial.

Diseases of the circulatory system, on the other hand, which are aggravated by a rarified atmosphere, may be benefited in a denser atmosphere.

Oftentimes, however, a patient suffers from a complication of diseases and it is then most difficult to find a place where the atmospheric pressure is at all suitable.

It is mainly for the treatment of such cases as these that Professor Klein's health tower is to be erected. Upon each of the eighteen stories a different air pressure will be maintained.

The first four stories will be devoted to high pressure chambers. Apparatus will be installed sufficient to increase the pressure in these chambers to that existing at a depth of 2,000 feet, although it will hardly be necessary to obtain such a high pressure except for experimentation.

From the fifth story to the eighteenth the pressure will be diminished at the rate of a thousand feet or more for each floor, the top story maintaining a pressure equivalent to that found at an altitude of 18,000 feet.

A specially constructed elevator will run from the bottom to the top, a species of "locks" or neutral chambers being provided on each floor at the entrance to the elevator shaft that the particular atmosphere maintained on the particular floor may not be disturbed by the air coming from the elevator shaft.

A Balance to Weigh a Thought.

WHEN a grain of dust enters the eye it seems very large. As a matter of fact, of course, it is so minute that one can hardly conceive of it being divided. Nevertheless the balances ordinarily used by chemists and other scientific workers are so accurate that they can determine weight to within one six hundred-and-fiftieth of a grain.

Now, however, a balance has been invented which will accomplish even more than this. The instrument, devised by Messrs. Steel and Grant, determines weight to within one one-million-six-hundred-and-fifty thousandth of a grain, less, one might imagine, than the weight of a thought.

The balance is enclosed in an air-tight metal case, about five inches long, four inches high and two and one-half inches deep. The beam of the balance is constructed of very slender rods of quartz.

For such minute results as this instrument is designed to register, it is, of course, impossible to use weights. As a substitute, a thin quartz bulb is filled with air and sealed. The weight of this bulb increases as the pressure of the air inside the case diminishes.

This unique instrument will be used chiefly to determine the loss of weight of radio-active substances, which, as is well known, are subjected to slow but sure decomposition. Ramsay has already used it with success for such experiments, one and a half grains of the radio-active substance being used for the purpose of the test.

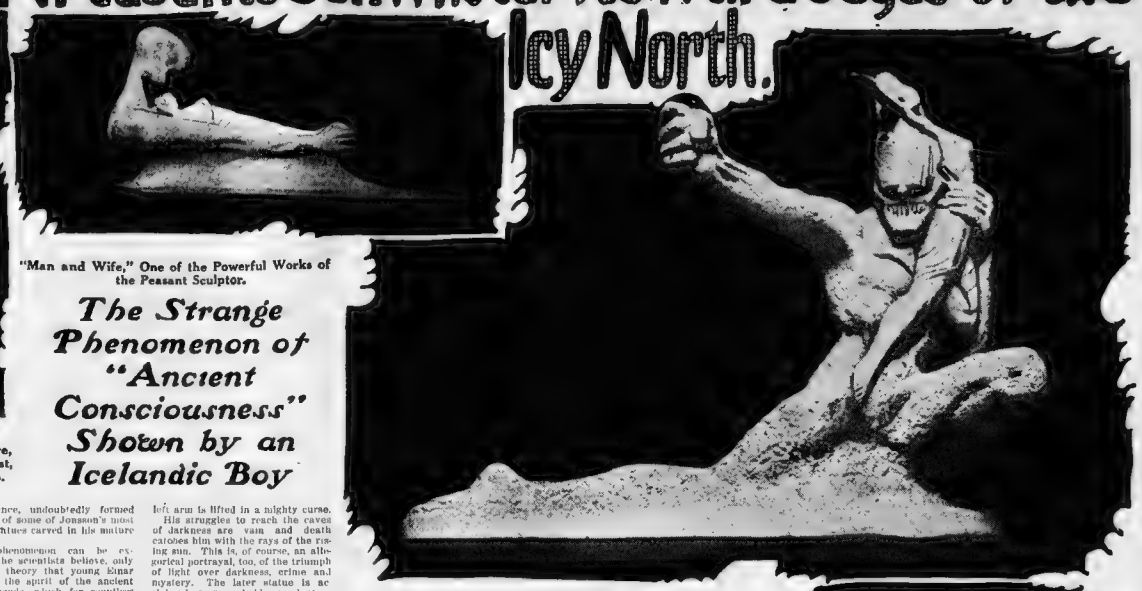
A Peasant's Son Who Carves Weird Sagas of the Icy North.

This Sphinx-Like Figure of Mother Nature, with Man and Woman at Her Breast, Is One of the Best of Jonsson's Works.



"Man and Wife," One of the Powerful Works of the Peasant Sculptor.

The Strange Phenomenon of "Ancient Consciousness" Shown by an Icelandic Boy

EUROPE is very much excited just now over the achievements of Iceland's peasant-sculptor—Einar Jonsson.

In the world of art his work is being favorably compared with that of Rodin, the great French sculptor. Scientists, on the other hand, see in the career of this man a remarkable instance of the manner in which the human mind may reflect the influence of bygone ages.

Jonsson is now thirty-six years of age. He was the son of poor, ignorant, unimaginative peasants. His childhood days were spent in the field, tending the sheep or harvesting the crops that were snatched from the grudging soil.

Until he reached the age of twelve, Einar could neither read nor write. As an infant, perhaps, he may have been rocked to sleep to the tune of some ancient Scandinavian melody. Beyond that, however, it is safe to say, Einar was at this time entirely unfamiliar with the picturesque and inspiring folklore and traditions of his race. There was absolutely nothing in his family or his early environment to account for the remarkable pictures he drew and the figures he modelled long before he could either read or write.

Yet, despite these handicaps, from the time his fingers were long enough and strong enough to hold a pencil, Einar was constantly reproducing on paper many of the most striking incidents related in the runic rhymes and sagas of his people. Of course, the drawings were crude, but the conception was there, and, indeed, these early boyish efforts, some of which are still in existence, undoubtedly formed the basis of some of Jonsson's most famous statues carved in his mature years.

This phenomenon can be explained, the scientists believe, only upon the theory that young Einar inherited the spirit of the ancient Norse legends, which for countless generations have been the common heritage of his people.

Among the most wonderful of his early efforts which his parents preserved is a figure carved out of stone when Einar was only five years old. It is a very rough piece of work, but its resemblance to Jonsson's later wonderful statue called "Daybreak" is quite unmistakable.

This work is drawn from an old Norse legend. It portrays the death of the wicked spirit, Kobold. Kobold stole away a beautiful maiden, but as he and his kind could work their will only in the darkness of night, daybreak meant death to this spirit of evil. The statue shows him just as the first rays of the sun have surprised him with his prey and his left arm is lifted in a mighty curse.

His struggles to reach the caves of darkness are vain and death catches him with the rays of the rising sun. This is, of course, an allegorical portrayal, too, of the triumph of light over darkness, crime and mystery. The later statue is acclaimed a remarkable production for any man, much more for so young a man as Jonsson. But the earlier figure which was undoubtedly fashioned as the result of a similar conception when Jonsson was only five years old is even more remarkable.

His parents naturally attached little importance to these childish creations. They failed to see in them the elements of genius which they really represented, and it was not until the village pastor, Valdemar Briem, who recognized in the boy's crude work the influence of the national Icelandic spirit and realized that the boy's talent was phenomenal, called these facts to the father's attention that Einar was given any opportunity at all to develop his artistic bent along the proper lines.

His group, "Man and Wife," is powerful in beauty and strength. In suggestion of the protecting might of the man and the need of the woman, but his greatest successes are all in the Icelandic spirit.

When he carved out the figures for his work, "The Flight of the Seasons," he broke away from the conventional, and yet there is nothing shocking about it. Four figures lay their hands upon the earth; the innermost is that of a child, putting its little hands upon the equator—Spring; the youth, standing next, presses the temperate zones—Summer; an old, tired female figure touches the colder regions—Autumn; and death himself, with bony fingers, clasps the poles—Winter. The planks at the base are thickest at the feet of Spring, and almost gone when Winter is reached. The harmony of the work and beauty of line and relief have been widely praised.

The Sphinx-like figure of "Mother-Nature," with human beings seeking the answer, is one of remarkable charm and power.

But the artist is most at home and seems to work with greatest power and success when touching on themes of Iceland and its legends. His figure of Ingolfur, with the old prow of a viking ship, is one of the best. He also executed some statuary of modern figures, such as that of King Christian IX. of Denmark, which bear a splendid comparison with that of the leading sculptors of other times and nations.

Einar Jonsson, strangely enough, is Iceland's only sculptor, and she has every reason to be proud of him. It has taken ages to produce him, and the product of ages is highly appreciated.

Have Your Favorite Chorus Girl on Your Wine Bottle

Some of the Novel Covers Designed by an Austrian Artist to Conceal the Monotony of the Naked Wine Bottle.

DON'T fret if your favorite chorus girl finds it "simply impossible" to dine with you. Order just as elaborate a meal and content yourself with gazing upon your favorite's features as portrayed on the wine bottle which the waiter will bring you if the restaurant is equipped with the latest Viennese novelty.

An artist in Vienna, tired of the monotony presented by the ordinary wine bottle, has designed a number of ingenious covers to hide their nakedness. These covers are made of crepe paper or other fabrics and represent all sorts of figures, beautiful and not so beautiful. The heads are carved out of cork or other suitable material and are painted in a picturesque manner.

Some of them allow the insertion of a photograph, while others are fashioned to portray well known persons. These covers have become very popular in London, where most of the large restaurants have laid in a supply of them in anticipation of a big demand from their patrons. The illustrations show some of the first designs of the Vienna artist.

Preserving Dear Fido in Everlasting Gold and Silver

A New Discovery by Which Living Organic Matter of All Kinds Can Be Turned Into Cold Metal

A Chicken's Trotter Turned Into a Metal Hatpin by the New Process.

WHEN Fido wags his last wag, don't bury or embalm him. Have him converted into metal, instead.

This is now possible as the result of a secret process discovered by Professor Louis G. Delamothe, of Paris. He has already converted flowers, fruit and animal life into metal. Just how he accomplishes this result has not been revealed, except in a negative way.

Thus it is known that his method does not consist merely of electroplating. Nor does he simply deposit upon the surface of the petals of the carnation, pear, dragonfly or what not a thin layer of metal.

Whatever the process, however, there can be no doubt that the results obtained are exceedingly beautiful. A crested geranium leaf treated in this manner was fashioned into a beautiful brooch, while a fowl's foot was metalized and served as a Chantecler hatpin.

There are a thousand and one ways in which objects thus converted into metal may be utilized. For instance, Professor Delamothe converted a cactus into a metal pepper pot. Perhaps the most beautiful result so far obtained, however, was in the case of a bunch of black grapes in metal in all their natural tints.

This Is a Bunch of Real Black Grapes Which Has Been Converted Into Metal and Still Retains Its Natural Colors.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon has just opened a new establishment in Paris, thus putting her in even closer touch with that centre of fashion.

Her American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

Paris, May 12.

I AM sending you this week photographs of three of my prettiest models, which I call "now" dresses, because they are specially designed to be worn at this time.

The white chiffon evening gown, with a loose panel hanging in front of the skirt like an apron, strikes a new note, and one which I believe will prove very popular. It is very effective. The tunic is cut in points and edged with diamonds. At the foot of the skirt there is a band of bugle trimmed all over with narrow green ribbon.

A tiny spray of silk and chiffon flowers in front of the corsage adds to the effect. The petticoat is of fresh colored chiffon trimmed with lace and narrow bugle beading, sprays of colored and tinsel flowers.

Another beautiful model is the white lingerie dress with coat of emerald green, with an edging of bluish-green silk and a belt of two shades of blue marquisette worked into a beautiful buckle. The collar and tie, which overlap the coat, are made of fine lace, with an appliqué of coarse lace upon it. This, I believe, is really one of the most beautiful creations I have ever designed.

The pale pink chiffon and lace dress will, I fear, make many a heart ache for one like it. It is trimmed with sprays of pink roses, looped with bows of pale blue satin. There is a sash of the same around the waist with long ends, and the bottom of the skirt is lined with it also.

The parasol to match is of pink chiffon, and is trimmed with rows of narrow lace and pink roses.

The hat is of white muslin, with a ruche of lace trimmed with pale blue.

A very simple but smart Summer suit which I have just designed may perhaps find as much favor in America as it has done here. It is of thunder gray cloth, the collar and cuffs being of the popular black and white striped silk. The skirt is of the modified sheath effect, and this effect is copied in the coat. The suit is finished off with many white pearl buttons.

There is a novel costume which is creating quite a sensation whenever it appears along the Paris Bois, of which I shall give you a brief description and a sketch, although I cannot say that I approve of it.

It is made of black and white cloth and velvet, and its most conspicuous feature in material, design and color is essentially one of contrast. This idea is repeated and of course accentuated by all the accessories in the way of footwear, hat and veil.

For the woman who likes to be conspicuous and welcomes criticism, this costume is ideal, but for simpler bodies it would be considered perhaps a little too, too much.

And, by the way, I must give you early news of the very latest novelty which has been designed to mold the feminine figure into those lines of slender grace which are demanded by the increasingly scanty and simple new dresses. As far as its upper part is concerned it can hardly lay claim to the title of corset at all, for it is a mere narrow belt, made of silken elastic and curving low down about the natural waist line, where of course, it is held in position by the usual central busk, side whalebones and back lacing. There, after its two or three inch career has ended, merging into the stronger support of coutil or batiste, and being duly continued to the full extent of one of the largest of those long corsets to which we have gradually grown accustomed. An allowance of no less than eight suspenders is provided, too, so that the whole thing may be held down without a wrinkle or a ridge.

The idea is, of course, that the upper part of the figure may be of that supple and rounded softness, whose charms are at last being fully realized and whose "clearing" effect is to be still further emphasized by the transparency and the absolutely unbound edge of the corsage. Curves there are a delight to the eye but below the waist a straight slenderness is above all things desirable, and so the two contrasting effects are very effectually secured by this clever use of equally contrasting fabrics.

There is still another advantage in connection with the new corset, for, of course, with the very high waisted corsage which is to be the universal wear, there is always a risk that the ordinary low-cut corset may show a fatally obvious and protruding ridge, which is brought into greater prominence by the new position of the waistband just beneath the arms. As, however, the elastic clings like a glove to the figure, there is nothing to mark the commencement of the corset and mar the fit of the gown. And so, I must say, that I am quite accord with the new idea, though, of course, it requires most careful modelling and manipulation to be a real success when put into actual practice.

Now Science "Froves" That Each of Us Wears a Visible Halo

WITH startling frequency nowadays science, with its calm, cold, practical eye, is establishing as fact what formerly existed only as myth. Now it declares that the halo which the old painters placed about the head of their figures of the Saviour not only actually existed, but that every human being wears a halo, a tangible, palpable emanation from his own body, often sufficiently condensed as to be visible to the naked eye.

The theory of the halo—as well as of the "aura," surrounding the entire body—is familiar to all Theosophists. It is part of the religion of most cultured Orientals. According to this belief the structure of the human body is not limited to the skin and its contents, but has an outer envelope made up of living, material emanations and of density according to the mental and physical vitality of the individual.

Spiritual mediums and theosophist adepts have always professed their ability to see these aura—as such outer envelopes of the body are called—and to judge by their color and other character etics whether the subject is in good or bad health, and what are his spiritual qualities.

It is now asserted by Dr. W. J. Kilner, a prominent physician of London, England, that the existence of the halo and the aura is susceptible of scientific proof—in fact, that he himself has produced those proofs. More than this, that the discovery is of great practical value in the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

After several years of close application and many experiments, Dr. Kilner has devised an apparatus whereby a given subject's aura is rendered visible to any observer having normal eyesight.

The apparatus consists of a number of what are technically termed "spectauranine" glass screens, each about four inches in length by one inch and a half in breadth. These screens are made each of two plates of very thin glass, between which hermetically sealed in, is a fluid that Dr. Kilner has discovered.

The screens vary in color. Some are red, others blue, varying in depth of color to suit the eyes of the investigator.

Recently the doctor gave a demonstration of his discovery to several brother scientists.

The subject was a well made woman of medium height, and apparently in the best of health.

The visitors were instructed to look steadily at the daylight through one of the spectauranine screens, at the subject standing straight with legs together and hands on hips about a foot away from a dead dark background, facing the only window in the room. He then proceeded to draw a dark, blind half-way down this window, thus leaving the room in the gloom.

For some moments, perhaps a quarter of a minute, the only object that could be made out in the darkness was the subject's form and its outline. Then gradually, as the eyes grew accustomed to the darkness, a sort of double mist or halo, the one within the other, and the inner one denser than the outer, became more and more distinctly visible.

The outlines of this mist exactly followed the curves and the contour of the subject's body. The color of the outer aura seemed to be blue grey; that of the inner and denser, also apparently the vital aura was denser. In the triangles formed by the sides of the body and the angle of the arms, as the subject rested with her hands resting lightly on her hips, the halo could be seen most clearly.

Presently, the subject raised and extended first one arm, then the other. Then she joined her hands at the back of her neck. And always the mist of aura followed, as though it were itself an outline of some sort or shadow of the limbs.

Of course the question will be asked: Of what practical use is this discovery? As yet the discovery is in its extreme infancy, but already it has been found possible with its aid practically to render pain visible. For the aura varies in shade and in density, in breadth and in shape, in accordance with the state of the patient's health, and any acute and lasting pain, such, for instance, as sciatica, is actually rendered visible, by the length to which the aura of a particular shade and density extends along the limb or limbs, in which the pain is felt.

The doctor declared further that the outline of the aura of, say, a patient suffering from hysteria, to name only one complaint, differs wholly from the outline of the aura of a person afflicted with epilepsy or any other illness of the kind.

THE HAIR IN SUMMER—By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty:

MME. CAVALIERI describes to-day what she terms "Summer baldness." She makes the surprising statement that there are more bald women than men and says the proportion of bald women to bald men is as five to four. She makes the further surprising statement that the baldness of woman is hidden by her long hair. We learn also that that baldness which is hereditary begins to appear at the age of twenty-five in a man, thirty in a woman.

Mme. Cavalieri's advice as to how to prevent baldness, especially in women, is most valuable and timely.

"Let the hair blow about in the wind, giving the scalp the air it needs."

"If you are in haste, rubbing a little alcohol into the roots of the hair quickly dries it."

"Powdering orris root into the partings of the hair in an emergency cleanses it of dust."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

SUMMER is a good season for the growth of hair, and a bad season. Good because it is favorable to the habit of "going bareheaded," so giving the air and light a chance to penetrate the the strands of hair and reach the scalp, which greatly needs these aids to growth; bad because there is danger of going too far in the outdoor treatment of the hair and gathering dust as well as sunshine, of scorching the scalp instead of warming it into new life.

Dust is as great an enemy of the hair as sunshine is its friend, and in Summer special attention must be paid to keeping the hair clean by careful brushing and by as frequent shampoos as the condition of the scalp makes necessary. And while a daily sun[illegible] the hair is desirable, do not let the [illegible] be so long a process [illegible] will cause the hair to fa[illegible]. [illegible] girls who, zealous to make the[illegible] Summer vacation as profitable [illegible] beauty as possible, lie for hours on the sand on the seashore [illegible] day, while the sun is highest [illegible] defeat their own purpose. The heat may cause the roots to shrivel, the hair to dry and fall out.

Be sure that whatever causes the head to ache will in some degree injure the hair. Don't bring about [illegible] sun, head[illegible] thinking to improve your hair. You will only harm it. Sun your hair by all means, but do so wisely. Mingle a grain of common sense with every ounce of beauty culture.

Study sunbaked fields on your vacation drives. The plants are dead because the excessive heat has scorched the roots. That is what happens to the scalp when it is exposed too long to the sun's rays.

There is also a form of baldness caused by too long or too great exposure to the sun's rays. It is seen in men who scorn to wear golf cap and who choose to ride bareheaded. Premature baldness is as common among these as among the clerks who grow pale and bald by working beneath electric lights.

This is a good time to warn you also that physicians are discovering their mistake in believing that there is more baldness among men than women. A dermatologist has been computing the ratio of bald women to bald men, and the rate is an amazing and disquieting five to four. Other physicians whose specialty is diseases of the skin, agree with him, and say that the reason the common baldness among women is not known, is that their hair is long and can be arranged to cover the bare places on their scalp. He says that when there is a predisposition to baldness, as when children have inherited it from bald or thinly thatched parents, it begins to appear in men at twenty-five, and women about thirty.

It is well for my readers that they know that there is a form of baldness called the American type. Its scientific name is areata. It is baldness in spots or patches, as in a field there may be seen green spots and arid ones. The green spots correspond to the hair on the scalp. The barren parts of the field correspond to the bald spots on the scalp. Generally the disease shows itself first in a burning, stinging sensation, either at the crown of the head or about the temples. These are the areas of baldness, and there one must expect first the thinning of the hair. The cause for this especially American form of baldness is nervousness. Nervous baldness is becoming as distinctively an American complaint as nervous dyspepsia.

It usually comes early in life, often before twenty-five. Its cause is the shock of grief or continued anxiety, or much worry, producing a tense condition of the nervous system, that finds its first expression in a strained look in the eyes and a tautness of the muscles of the face.

As nervousness often causes continued affections of the teeth, a nervous girl may be distressed by constant need of the dentist's services as well as the falling out of her hair in great patches.

Do not contract Summer baldness. Let your hair have all the benefit possible from letting it hang where the sun and air can both play through it. The morning is an excellent time for this. After combing and brushing your hair, always gently massage the scalp in the way I have before described, not by rough, haphazard movements of the hands that are liable to tear and break the hair and irritate the roots but by slow, firm, pressure of the fingers or the palms going over the head in circles, until the skin has been loosened and moves easily over the scalp beneath. Push from the hair line to the crown.

Try to give your hair a rest this Summer. One of the leading American actresses spends her vacation in the simplest way in the country, because she wants to rest her hair, and at the same time, her tired nerves.

Whenever this woman makes an ocean voyage, she loosens her hair at night and, sitting close to the porthole, or seeking some part of the deck where she is screened from view, lets it blow about in the wind giving the scalp the air it so needs.

Wash your hair as often as it needs it, no more no less. You yourself will be the best judge of how often this will be. When your brush is shadowy looking at the tips of the bristles after a brushing, you will know that there is dust in your hair. The condition of the combings also shows this. When the hair is dusty it is time to wash it.

A good shampoo is made of:

- Tincture of green soap, 2 ozs.
- Resorcin, 15 grains.

Be very sure that the hair is thoroughly dried after a shampoo. Do not allow any dampness to linger at the roots. If you are in haste, rubbing a little alcohol into the roots of the hair dries it quickly, though I should only advise this in an emergency, as alcohol is very drying.

For a tender scalp this is a soothing as well as cleansing shampoo:

- Spirit of Rosemary, 2 ozs.
- Yolk of one egg.

Beat the egg and rosemary together and pour into a pint of warm water.

This is a more heroic treatment, an excellent cleanser and a tonic.

- Alcohol, 1 oz.
- Powdered borax, ½ oz.
- Bicarbonate of Soda, ¼ oz.
- Glycerine, ½ oz.
- Orange Flower Water, 1 pint.

Powdering orris root into the partings of the hair, in an emergency, cleanses it of dust.

Men More Emotional Than Women—By a Nerve Specialist

MEN are by nature more emotional than women. Only by centuries of training and hard fighting have they acquired the power of suppressing their emotions and resisting the desire to have a "good cry" or go into hysterics.

In the beginning of the world, men became the sterner sex simply because they were stronger than women and were physically better adapted for fighting.

Women are not constitutionally so emotional as men. They occasionally "give way" to their feelings because they consider it their privilege to do so.

The old established [illegible] women are more emotional than men is really a fallacy. Men are more inclined to shriek and become hysterical during exciting, trying times than the "gentler" sex.

Women have the reputation of "losing their heads" in emotional crises, but this is quite a mistaken idea. In sudden emergencies, sudden illness and real danger women always shine.

Men have not that natural and instinctive presence of mind which women possess. If the truth were told, the majority of men would confess that their emotions are more susceptible, more easily moved, than those of their wives.

Man's coolness and apparent nonchalance on exciting occasions are only surface deep. Inwardly he is trembling with nervousness and emotional fear.

I venture to say that the majority of women in similar occasions would be perfectly self-possessed and mentally calm and alert.

In my experience women are, on the whole, harder-hearted than mere males. Woman does not feel so deeply as man; she is not so susceptible to the influence of other people.

From these arguments one may infer that woman should take the place of man, that she should, in certain cases, be the worker and wage-earner, while man stays at home and looks after the children

MINING BURNED PAPER FOR GOLD.

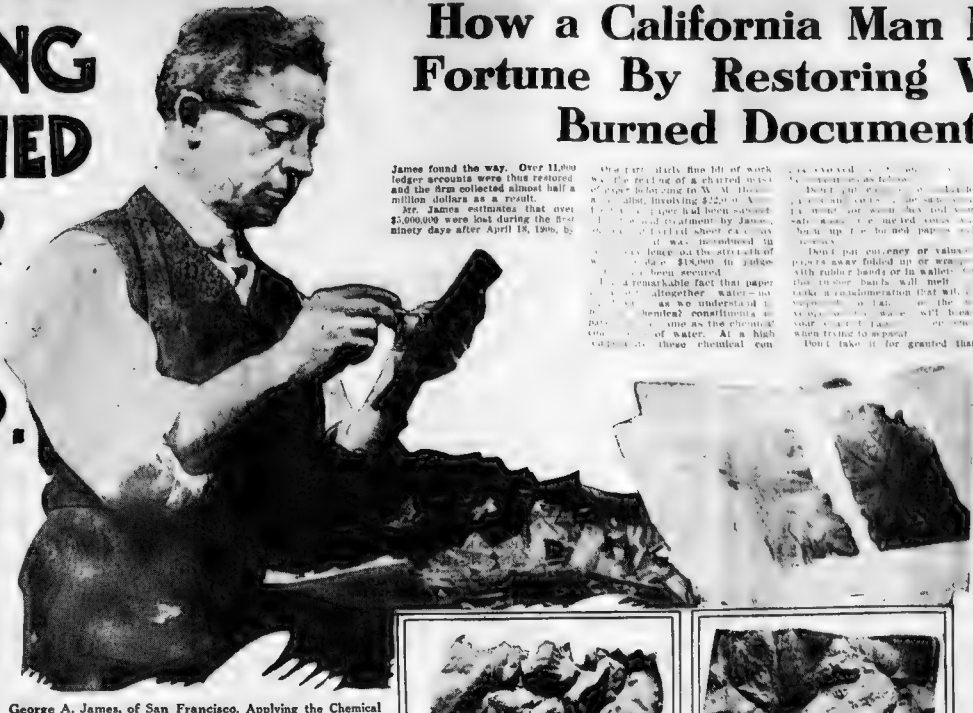
How a California Man Made a Fortune By Restoring Valuable Burned Documents.

PROBABLY the most remarkable gold miner in the world is George A. James, of San Francisco, Cal. He has made a moderate fortune in the past few years mining for gold in the debris of burned documents.

It is not the precious metal itself, of course, that Mr. James seeks, but what is equally valuable, evidences of indebtedness and statements of accounts. Honest tradesmen will pay their pecuniary obligations whether the note, draft or other paper which evidences them is in existence or not, but all tradesmen are not honest, and when such paper is destroyed by fire the holder has very little recourse against his dishonest debtors, although the law does prescribe a roundabout way of securing payment in such cases.

Mr. James, who is an assayer by profession, and who dabbles in archeology, anthropology and chemistry in his spare hours, has however found a way to restore burned documents, and for this reason every commercial fire is to him a gold mine.



George A. James, of San Francisco, Applying the Chemical Solution That Restores the Writing on Burned and Charred Paper—On the Right Are Two Charred Sheets Pasted on White Paper Before Treatment.

James found the way. Over 11,000 ledger accounts were thus restored and the firm collected almost half a million dollars as a result.

Mr. James estimates that over $5,000,000 were lost during the first ninety days after April 18, 1906, by those who discarded as waste material the charred remains of their books of accounts, packages of currency and stocks and bonds.

Another bit of work which he did was to save for a business man at Ellis and Mason streets $60,000 in burned accounts and $30,000 in stock certificates. When these were delivered to James they were nothing but bundles of black charcoal sheets, so frangible that they could not be handled at all except by an experienced hand. Within a week the owner of this charred paper was in possession of $30,000 in new stock certificates. But for the renewal of the writing by James the owner of this stock would have had to give bonds to an indemnity company and then have had to pursue a long, tedious and expensive legal action.

While travelling in Europe Mr. James had occasion to visit Pompeii and noticed there the deficient methods followed by those who were attempting to restore the burned papyri. On his return to San Francisco he had occasion to talk with a business man whose burned documents in the earthquake and conflagration of 1906 involved a possible loss of a million dollars.

This man was Ben Upham, of Payot, Upham & Co. James, at Upham's suggestion, secured the ashes from the Upham vaults and set about experimenting in the hope of finding some acid or combination of chemicals that would restore on the charred pages of the burned books and on the papers the writing that was there before the fire.

After a fortnight's research Mr. James found the way. Over 11,000 ledger accounts were thus restored and the firm collected almost half a million dollars as a result.

Are Women's Figures Growing Masculine?

IS the woman of to-day gradually losing her distinctively feminine figure owing to her increased interest in masculine sports?

Will the tendency among women to adopt mannish habits mean the extinction of the "feminine form divine," with its graceful curves and lines?

These questions are brought into prominence by a statement made by Dr. Sargent, of the Harvard gymnasium, on the "physical conformation of women."

"Open air and athletic sports have put a different aspect on it more like that of men," he says. "have caused the [illegible] facial characteristics [illegible] lines to diminish, and [illegible] male figure more like [illegible] male. This tendency should be stopped before it goes any further."

Mr. George Henry, A. R. A., the well-known English artist, interviewed on this subject, entirely agreed with Dr. Sargent.

"Comparing woman of to-day with the woman of a generation ago, I notice that the former has developed decided signs of masculinity," he said.

"She has lost a certain gracious softness—women of to-day look harder and stronger, their figures are straighter, and in many cases their muscles are more developed.

"As an instance of this new type of woman, one need mention what is known as the 'hockey girl.' She is probably a healthy, vigorous young person but her figure, her mental outlook and her habits closely resemble those of a man.

"The hockey girl, however, acquires this masculinity at the cost of grace, and that delightful indefinable quality of femininity which makes woman woman.

"Other physical characteristics are a certain broadness across the shoulders, slightly larger waist and flatter chest. They have lost much of their graceful lines and contours, and their manner is often somewhat aggressive.

"Although they may still retain their mental charm, physically they are often unsightly and awkward.

"They 'bounce' into a room, whereas their grandmothers would have entered it with quiet grace and charm.

"I feel, be remembered that, after all, the great beauty and attraction of woman in the eyes of men is that she is so entirely different from him.

It would be a terrible thing for woman to lose that natural charm and grace.

Sir L. Alma Tadema, the famous artist, says that while he does not think women generally are losing their figures, women who play bridge and indulge in such other pleasures in excess certainly harm their figures.

"It is fortunate that our models are not recruited from the bridge-playing set," he said.

A ONE PIECE FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL

NO. 8952.—GIRL'S ONE-PIECE FROCK.

FOR cool days a guimpe or tucker will finish this frock satisfactorily, while for warm weather the short sleeve and round neck will be most desirable. Any of the materials now in vogue will develop the design suitably. As here shown blue linon was used, with a simple finish of stitching and a black belt for contrast and ornamentation.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 4¼ yards of 24-inch material for the 8-year size for the dress and 2 1-4 yards of 32-inch material for the tucker.

NO. 8929.—BOY'S RUSSIAN SUIT.

THERE is very little detail to this suit, which is comfortable and suitable for cloth or wash fabrics. The sleeve is laid in tucks at the wrist. The trousers are the regulation knickerbocker, closing at the left side.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—3, 4 and 6 years. It requires 3⅛ yards of 27-inch material for the 4-year size.

To obtain either of these two desirable patterns, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to
